SOLONS ENACT DRY SLEUTH MEASURE

VOTE TURNKEY ORDINANCE ON FIRST READING; VERBAL CLASHES

Prohibition Legislation Becomes Effective as Mayor Signs it.

VOTE 5 TO 2

Keen Repartee Marks Hectic Session at City Hall.

The councilmanic ordinance, "authorizing the appointment of detectives to enforce the prohibition laws," was in effect today following a hectic session of the city council, Friday night, in which verbal clashes predominated.

The measure, declared to be an emergency ordinance, "because of the numerous violations of the prohibition laws which are taking place within the city," was signed by Mayor Charles Brown immediately following the council meeting.

Farrell-Chambers Fight.

Councilmen N. P. Kerr and Thomas Farrell, who have opposed the legislation since it was introduced, were the only members of the municipal legislative body to vote against it on the third and final reading.

"Last Tuesday evening I objected, as a member of city council, to this ordinance," said Councilman Farrall, after Solon Chambers move consideration of the measure on third reading. "Tonight I oppose the adoption of this ordinance as a member of Trades and Labor council. Trades council is interested in the laws, governing this city, as much as city council. They ask this body not to adopt this measure. This council should be guided by the wishes of the public in this matter."

"If Trades and Labor council is op-

NEIGHBORS AID

Pitiable Case in South Broadway Comes to Light.

In a small, dimly lighted room on the third floor of the Porter building, lower Broadway lies a man—practically penniless—slowly dying of tuberculosis.

The furnishings of the room consist of one bed, two chairs, a delapidated stand on which a kerosene lamp rests and a gas stove. The floor is uncarpeted.

For more than two years, the white plague victim has been unable to work because of his illness. Five months ago he became bedfast, but not until this week did physicians announce that he was suffering from tuberculosis. His wife, burdened with the care of her husband, has been unable to work outside the home to assist in supporting the household.

Children Unable To Aid.

The man is James Butler, 57, who for many years was a slip maker in local potteries. Four years ago, he was stricken with the influenza. Unable to resume work in the pottery, he obtained a temporary position loading coal in the West Point mines, but this afforded only a small income and fin-

Riegel, state director of education, pupils in the four upper grades of the East Liverpool elementery schols will devote the first one-half hour period at the beginning of the afternoon session on Monday "to the study of the duties, terms of office and means of election of the various state officials."

Six state officials, elected last November, will take the oath of office at noon Monday. The inaugural ceremonies will be simple and brief.

Mr. Riegel has suggested that the 30-minute instruction in the schools should cover three branches of government—legislative, executive and judicial. Schools having radios will tune in and hear Governor Donahey's message to the legislature.

EIGHT ARE HELD IN RUM PLOT

CLEVELAND, Jan. 10. — Charged with conspiracy to violate the national prohibition law, seven men and a woman were bound over to the grand jury on high bond here today.

RAIDERS SEIZE 1,400 GALLONS OF WINE IN PLACES SEARCHED

Seven More Warrants, Based Upon Information Said to Have Been Obtained in Investigation Made Month Ago, Will be Served Before Night —Prisoners Face Mayor Brown.

Armed with warrants issued by Mayor Charles Brown, eight members of the Harris-Webster dectective agency of Steubenville, assisted by three East Liverpool patrolmen swooped down upon Wellsville's alleged liquor violators shortly before noon today, making seven arrests and confiscating approximately 1,400 gallons of illicit liquor, mostly wine.

Warrants for seven other alleged violators will be served early this afternoon. The seven offenders, all foreigners, were brought to the East Liverpool jail and held without bond for a hearing before Mayor Brown at 2 p. m.

Today's raids followed an investigation which started about a month ago. Some of the prisoners were charged with selling, others with possession and in some cases both charges have been filed.

Wellsville police took no part in the clean-up, the investigation being conducted without their knowledge. The raiders came to Wellsville in automobiles.

No Equipment Found.

All warrants were signed by "C. S. Harris," said to be from Steubenville.

The raiding party met with no interference. At one place several foreigners were found, but they made no attempt to halt the special officers in their search. The raiders divided themselves into squads of two and three and descended upon the suspected places.

At one place a man was caught emptying liquor down a sewer. He was arrested, however, before he had disposed of his stock.

In another home the raiders took a pop bottle of whisky which it was claimed was still warm. No equipment, however, was found at any of the places, it was said.

Seven Suspects In Jail.

The prisoners are:

Benny Corbissilio, Main street, near Third street; 350 gallons of wine seized; charged with possessing and selling.

PROCEEDS OF ONE YEAR'S CROPS WOULD PAY OFF ALL DEBTS ON FARMS OF COLUMBIANA COUNTY

Were they disposed to do it, the farmers of Columbiana county could, with the proceeds of one year's crops, pay off every dollar of their mortgage debt and other obligations.

While one third of the farms in the county are mortgaged, the total debt represents but 34.7 per cent of the total value of encumbered land and improvements, a situation considered so favorable to farmers that the average interest rate of farm mortgages in the county is but 5.8 per cent.

These interesting facts have been developed by officials of the federal department of Agriculture who have been analyzing census figures in anticipation of making a comparable showing with data that will be obtained in the agricultural enumeration now being taken in Columbiana county.

A recent survey disclosed that of farms operated by owners, reported, slightly less than 1,700 are absolutely free of all debt, while 828 are declared to be security for mortgage liens. This proportion is believed to hold for the county's 3,586 farms.

Mortgage Debt $1,400,000.

The total outstanding mortgage debt of the county is said to be about $1,400,000, while the value of the property encumbered is placed at approximately $4,000,000.

The value of all crops produced annually by Columbiana county farmers is estimated by federal officials at nearly $6,000,000.

Practically one-half of the crop income is produced by cereals, which have an annual value of about $3,000,000. Hay and forage account for nearly $2,000,000 and vegetables $500,00.

All this, of course, is exclusive of the income from dairy and poultry products.

There are in the county over 24,000 dairy cattle, which, with heifers and bulls, are given a value of nearly $1,500,000.

In addition, there are 19,000 swine and 2,000 beef cattle, with a combined value of about $450,000.

120,000 Chickens Sold Annually.

More than a hundred and twenty thousand chickens are sold annually, which, with poultry products, increases the tangible wealth of Columbiana county farmers by $800,000. Even bees, of which there are 869 hives, have an exchange value of about $3,000.

What this means in momentary return is disclosed by a tabulation of the year's products. Milk produced annually aggregates 6,000,000 gallons, about half of which is sold.

The county's farmers annually produce about 700,000 pounds of butter, of which 500,000 pounds are sold. The average output of cheese is only 1,000 pounds a year.

The combined value of dairy products is declared to be about $1,500,000 and the receipts from its sale about $1,300,000.

It is calculated by federal officials that the annual production of each dairy cow in Columbiana county is 435 gallons, which is 18 gallons more than the average for the state of Ohio.

More than 1,000,000 dozen eggs are turned out annually by Columbiana county hens, of which approximately two-thirds go to market.

The value of all poultry produced is something more than $80,000 annually, of which about $600,000 is sold

The sheep industry is not a sideline with Columbiana county farmers, the annual income from this source being $150,000. Bees are not important, the cash value of their activities being estimated at less than a thousand dollars per year.

Farming in Columbiana county is

Dr. W. J. Lockhart, Evangelist, Pays Tribute to Motherhood

Twenty-three Respond to Invitation Friday Evening in Church of Christ — "Devils" Subject Tonight.

A tribute to motherhood was paid by Evangelist W. J. Lockhart at Friday night's services in the First Church of Christ. A large delegation of Wellsville church members attended the service.

Twenty-three additions resulted when the invitation was extended. Song Director J. Frank Harbinson, who sang "Keep The Promise Made to Mother," and made a profound impression. The young people's "pep" chorus of 60 voices is adding to the interest of the meetings.

The evangelist will preach on the subject, "Devils," at tonight's service which will be held at the usual hour. A men's meeting has been planned for 3 p. m. Sunday when Dr. Lockhart will speak on the subject, "Men's Sins."

In his sermon on "Mother" last night Dr. Lockhart said:

"You have only one mother, my boy, to pray that in the good way you may stay, who for you won't spare self sacrifice rare, so let us honor that mother always. And you who have mothers still living should count yourself fortunate that you may have the opportunity of sending her a token of love and telling her of this service.

"We naturally think of our mothers as being good and being better than any other woman. God forbid if in this fast jazz age, this age of bridge parties and movies and afternoon matinees and joy rides and cigarette smoking and drinking that the young motherhood of America should lose the respect of their children. But unless some of them are turned back to God and the church and the spiritual life the future of many children will be disastrous.

"Mr. Roosevelt said that the greatest need of this nation was for good mothers. I believe it. In the past five years we have had more difficulty in challenging the attention of the women to the claims of Christ than we have the men. I wonder if the womanhood of America drifted farther off the path of purity and right living during the war than the manhood? The response we get here in the next three weeks to this call to the new Crusade will be the answer the omen of East Liverpool can give to this question.

"And so I bring this tribute of love to my mother and to yours. But to your mothers I want to say that if ever your boy and girl is upheld out of the storms of life and in the midst of temptation by the memory of you it will be because you prove yourself a worthy mother.

"There are three influences that go to make for character. The kind of lives our fathers and mothers lived before we were born, the kind of influence and environments they threw round about us during the early years of our lives and the potentiality or power we have within ourselves to break away from hereditary influences and environment.

"But fathers and mothers two-thirds of the influence that goes to make for the character of your boys and girls is in your own hands. There are children here who want to be Christians and who have joined the church whose parents are holding back. My, for shame. Some of you fathers and mothers whose young people have lost their grip on God are but following your own slothful example."

NEAR EAST DAY SERVICES HERE

Appeals for Relief Will be Made on Sunday.

Near East Relief Sunday will be observed in several of the city's churches tomorrow, when speakers will appeal for funds with which to feed thousands of children in the Palestine country, facing starvation and death from exposure and disease.

The East Liverpool Ministerial association, at a meeting several weeks ago, sanctioned the plan. The Near East relief movement was incorporated by an act of congress several years ago.

Sunday, December, was the original date set aside for the collection of funds, but many communities preferred to wait until after the holidays.

Speakers at churches assisting in the campaign here tomorrow are:

First Presbyterian, 11 a. m.—Rev. A. H. Brodie, D. D., who spent several years in Syria.

First Baptist church, 11 a. m.—Dr. Henry A. Tupper, who is connected with the faculty of one of the eastern colleges.

St. Stephen's Episcopal church, 11 a. m.—James Blythe, field representative Near East Relief association, who was connected with relief activities in the Near East countries for months.

KIRBY, DISCOUNT CHIEF, FIGHTS

CLEVELAND, Jan. 10. — Under bonds totalling $40,000 on indictments in both the state and federal courts, Josiah Kirby, former president of the $30,000,000 Cleveland Discount Co., here began to fight for time today.

Kirby was indicted in both courts by grand juries charging him with issuing false financial statements and using the mails in a scheme to defraud. His private secretary, Mrs. Meta Kretschman, was arrested on a federal warrant late yesterday, following her refusal to testify before the grand jury. She is charged with conspiracy.

Trial date of Kirby was set for "He was always fair," Mrs. Kirby February 9 in state court, following his surrender to Sheriff Kohler, but this will conflict with the former president's appearance in federal court, Kirby's attorneys contend. They are not fighting for a continuance. Date for trial in federal court has not yet been set.

Kirby's wife, whom he married at the age of 16, and who has stuck with him through two other financial crashes, is "still with him," according to word from Los Angeles.

Name Custom Agents In Conspiracy to Defraud in Hawaii

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10. — A widespread conspiracy to defraud the government has been unearthed in Hawaii by government agents, the treasury department announced today.

Several customs agents there are now under indictment, according to a cablegram received by Assistant Secretary Moss from his special investigators. Officials here said that importers probably would be involved in the conspiracy as the case is developed by the trial of the men already indicted.

Moss said that the probe indicates the government "has been defrauded of a good many thousands of dollars."

"Cozy" Dolan, Banished Coach, Has Hazy Memory, Says Landis

CHICAGO, Jan. 10—A. J. "Cozy" Dolan, banished coach of the New York Giants' baseball team, has a hazy memory and three days following the alleged offering of $500 to J. H. Sand, shortstop of the Philadelphia National League team, to "ease up," could not recall that he had ever talked with anybody on the subject. This was shown by Judge K. M. Landis, Commissioner of baseball, following reports just before the world's series of 1924, that such an offer had been made. The report was given out today from Judge Landis' office.

Judge Landis was not in his office when the transcript was given out and it was handed to newspapermen without comment.

The testimony reveals no hint of fresh scandal and actually develops little that has not already become public through rumor.

OHIO ELECTORAL COLLEGE MEETS

COLUMBUS, Jan. 10—Ohio's electoral college which will cast all of its 24 votes for President Coolidge and vice-president Dawes, met today at the state house and perfected its organization. One of the electors, Thomas R. Barnes, of the Seventeenth Congressional district, was absent.

Meeting in the governor's reception room, the college informed Governor Donahey that it was ready to perform its official business. The Governor implied he was anxious to help facilitate the work. He then read the statutory instructions to the college members.

After the appointment of committees by the chair, the college recessed until 10 a. m. Monday when it will meet in the senate chamber to cast the state's vote for President Coolidge and vice-president-elect Dawes.

Home Brew Party Ends in Stabbing; Ohioan is Victim

LAFFERTY, Jan. 10.—Stabbed trough the stomach by Mike Boboka, with whom he was drinking home brew, Nick Ogrizovich died last night. Nick's death occurred within 24 hours of the murder of Guy Abato, ex-service veteran.

In the room in which he lived since he and his wife separated, Abato's lifeless body, with two bullet wounds in the head and stab wounds, that almost severed the skull from the torso, was found Tuesday night. Companions said no fight took place when Agrizovich was stabbed and that Boboka helped care for his victim until daylight when a physician was obtained and Ogrizovich was rushed to a Wheeling hospital.

LAWMAKERS' PAY FOR TRAVEL HIT

COSHOCTON, Jan. 10—That he will make a fight at the present session of the Ohio legislature against "the practice of at least two house officials drawing their allowance of $500 as transportation and that of members who draw without attending sessions" is the announcement made today by Clay M. Miller, representing Coshocton county in the house of representatives.

Representative Miller charged that the two unnamed house officials did not use the $500 as transportation because they maintain residences at Columbus. He said he will seek abolition of the practice of paying non-attending members.

WOMAN MAY GET U. S. JUDGESHIP

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—The possibility that a woman will occupy a federal judgeship arose at the White House today following a conference between President Coolidge and Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, assistant attorney general.

It is understood that the president is considering the appointment of Mrs. Willebrandt to the United States district judgeship for the southern district of California. The conference at the White House this morning was arranged at the request of the president.

It is explained that this is the reason for the almost uniform prosperity enjoyed by its farmers over a long period of time.

REPORTS FROM STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—More prominence in the forward movement of prices today was given in the railroad, oil and motor stocks than to the steel stocks and high-priced industrials which have held the center of the stage in the preceding sessions of the week. Except for realizing sales in American Can and a few of the specialty stocks in the first period, buying orders predominated in the early trading and the forward movements in many stocks simply resumed from last night's finishing point.

Impressive advances were staged by the mercantile stocks, including Sears, Roebuck, Navy and Montgomery & Ward, the motors under the leadership of General Motors, which reached a new high for the movement at 67½; the equipment, with American Loco at 110½; equivalent to 220 on the 1923 basis of the stock; the rails, with Missouri Pacific preferred and common, Rock Island and New York Central, active and buoyant; the oils, with Atlantic Refining making a new high on the movement at 110½ and the low-priced oils, like Simms, Independent, Shell Union, Marland, California Pete, Invincible, Louisiana Oil and Trans-Continental oil, for nearly a year the undesirables of the speculative movement forging to the front and commanding the best prices of the movement. There was, also, an active market for the better grade of dividend oils, with Pacific Oil, above 56, and in the lead. Simms Pete replaced Invincible Oil as the leader in the low-priced group, selling above 24 on a heavy turnover.

In point of activity, trading in the first hour today was fully up to the sensational market of last Saturday when the facilities of the exchange were clogged, and traders were practically unable to keep in touch with the movements of prices.

There were some signs of heavyness in the second hour, when industrial and railroad stocks were offered in large volume on week-end profit-taking and stocks, like American Can, Frisco Common, Radio, Reading, etc., which were leaders in the rally on Tuesday and Thursday, dropped back to lower levels.

But strength in the general list showed that many traders were switching to other stocks: showing preference to the oils, in which the volume of trading expanded considerably.

ally, because of ill health, he was forced to quit this job.

When he became bedfast last August two physicians, who examined him, declared he showed no symptoms of tuberculosis and blood tests strengthen their beliefs. Another physician, called in this week, said that Mr. Butler was suffering from tuberculosis, possibly being in the last stages of the disease.

Mr. and Mrs. Butler are the parents of eight children most of whom have grown to manhood and womanhood. Two of the daughters, now married live in Dayton, another resides in Bellaire and a fourth in Chicago. A son, 17 years old, works at Barton. None of the five have been able to offer financial assistance.

Up until a few weeks ago, two sons, 18 and 15 years of age, respectively, resided with their parents here. Both were employed in the potteries, but work slackened and they were able to bring in little money. A few days before Christmas, both left for Dayton, hoping to obtain employment. The youngest member of the family, Paul, nine years of age, has been living in the homes of his married sisters at Dayton, but returned to visit his father and mother during the Christmas holidays. He has not yet returned to Dayton.

"Yes, people have been helping us for weeks," said Mrs. Butler yesterday. "The Salvation Army has been sending groceries and some of the church people have been assisting. We are pretty well supplied with foodstuffs now, but Mr. Butler needs clothes if he goes to a sanatorium."

Rev. B. R. Johnson, of the Church of Christ, and other friends of the family today were taking steps to have Mr. Butler sent to a sanitorium. The patient expressed his willingness to go any place in order to ease the burden on his wife. Since the Red Cross ceased its work here, no organization is in existence which looks after charity cases. The matter will be referred to the county commissioners.

Mrs. Butler will go to Bellaire to live temporarily with her daughter if her husband is placed in a sanatorium. She plans to stay there until her two unmarried sons in Dayton are able to find employment and establish a home for her and their youngest brother, Paul.

"We have been placing our trust in God" said Mrs. Butler yesterday. "He will not let us want."

Rent on the three rooms which the family occupies on Broadway is past due, but an extension has been granted.

The family came to East Liverpool about 10 years ago from Wetzel county—Mr. Butler's former home. For many years Mrs. Butler was interested in the management of a rescue mission which was conducted on south Broadway and Second street.

Pottery Plant

coming week will be the most active of the show.

The western and southern buyers will not be in the market until next week, and many of them will not arrive in the Pittsburgh and East Liverpool districts until week after next. Many jobbers will be included in these arrivals. The large mail order houses have not been represented in the market up to today.

Will A. Rhoades, formerly of East Liverpool and more recently with the Chelsea China company at New Cumberland, W. Va., and also the Albert Pick company of Chicago, Ill., has become associated with the Jackson China company at Falls Creek, Pa. Mr. Rhoades was retained by this interest following the death of J. C. Jackson and Edward Darden, who were recently shot as they were leaving the plant for noon lunch. Mr. Rhoades, in the yesteryears, was associated with the Knowles, Taylor & Knowles company and the Colonial company of the East Liverpool and also with the Milliken China company of Pittsburgh. He left Pittsburgh to go with the Chelsea at New Cumberland.

Swaney Hall On Job.

Swaney Hall, son of the late John W. Hall of East Liverpool, is in charge of the exhibit of the L. E. Smith Glass Co., of Mt. Pleasant, Pa., and which is being maintained at the Ft. Pitt hotel. When Mr. Hall first became identified with this interest as a salesman, the company manufactured a small line of packers goods. Today, the company is a manufacturer of automobile lenses and a general line of staple items in glassware.

Some talk is heard about the lobby of the Ft. Pitt hotel about confining the annual merchandise event to two weeks, hereafter, instead of three. The subject is to be discussed at the annual meeting of the Association of Glass and Pottery Manufacturers which will be held in the Ft. Pitt perhaps next week.

Pocket Billiard Champion Greenleaf And Actress Wed

NEW YORK, Jan. 10—The carefully guarded, secret marriage of Ralph Greenleaf, national pocket billiard champion, and the Princess Nai Pai Tai, also known as Amelia Ruth Parker, daughter of an English father and Chinese mother, became known here today. They eloped last Saturday to Elkton, Md.

Mrs. Greenleaf, her husband said, is thoroughly Americanized. She has been appearing in vaudeville.

The bride, who has been in Philadelphia, rejoined her husband last night after his victorious contest with Charles Harmon. Greenleaf played one of the best games of his career when he defended his title yesterday, winning by 100 to 61.

Mrs. Greenleaf's father married her mother while in the British diplomatic service. Her parents still reside in China.

Mrs. Beatrice E. Greenleaf, whom the champion divorced on December 22 in Philadelphia, plans to enter a convent.

posed to this measure why didn't they send a committee here tonight?" replied Councilman Chambers. "We have the word of only one man that this body is on record as being opposed to this ordinance.

"You have my word—it's as good as yours" shoulted back Solon Farrall.

"I have the floor now," retorted the First ward legislator. "This councilman" continued Mr. Chambers, meaning Solon Farrall, "has opposed everything this council has considered this year. I am in favor of this ordinance and will vote for it. I would vote for it even if it provided for a 30 per cent payment for convictions. We have a lot of violations in East Liverpool, and this ordinance will help check them."

Kerr Defines Attitude.

Councilman Kerr again expressed his opposition to the ordinance "because it commercialized law enforcement." "Whenever you offer a fellow 10 per cent of a fine to go out and get the other fellow, conditions are going to arise which will cause trouble. If the mayor has an inefficient police force, let him remove them."

Then turning to Solicitor Harry Brokaw, Kerr inquired if the detectives, provided by the ordinance, would be under bond. The solicitor replied that they would not.

"There's another objectionable feature to this step," he continued. "Place a gun in these men's hand and they may go out and shoot some one. Then the city will be responsible. I do not believe this council should be governed by the whims of one man and I will vote against this ordinance."

Larcombe Explains Position.

Councilman Larcombe denied that his action was governed by the "whims of one man" as Kerr had charged. "Mayor Brown has no strings on me" he said. "I vote as my dictates tell me. The mayor never talked to me about this ordinance except the night when we all met in his office. My vote on this ordinance would not be changed even though every other member voted oppositely".

Solon Eardley endorsed the sentiments of Mr. Larcombe, asserting that he had been told by many persons, including business men, that they felt this ordinance would assist in apprehending liquor law violators.

Upon roll call, Councilman Hayes and Rowe joined with Solons Chambers, Larcombe and Eardley in approving the ordinance, while Kerr and Farrall voted nay.

Battle Over Turnkey Measure.

Another clash between Kerr and Farrall on one side, and the remainder of the council, on the other, occurred when an ordinance creating the office of turnkey at the city hall and fixing his salary was brought up.

Sponsors of the ordinance asserted that the turnkey William Cline—is without power to exercise police powers outside the city building. His duties, at the present time, include janitor work at the city hall and the water works office on Fourth street.

The new ordinance clothes him with police powers and provides he shall act as desk sergeant after midnight. No mention was made of janitor services at the city hall which the proposed turnkey shall perform during the pre-midnight hours. His salary was fixed at $120 per month. The ordinance was also declared to be an emergency measure because of the immediate need for a turnkey.

Kerr and Chambers Clash

"No mention is made of janitor services in that ordinance and I am opposed to it," declared Kerr. "It's not so much of a turnkey that we need here, its a janitor. He does very little of that now."

"Who says he's not?" asked Chambers.

"Several have told me he is not functioning as he should" Kerr replied.

"I'll say he does his work," shot back Chambers.

"Your saying don't make it so," was Kerr's rejoiner.

At this point President Capehart rapped for order.

Councilman Farrall also attacked the measure. "What's the matter with East Liverpool, anyhow?" he asked. "First you want special police, then you want detectives and now its a turnkey. I was under the impression that we had a law-abiding community. It's a mystery to me." He also voiced his opposition to the emergency clause.

Solicitor Corrects Ordinance.

The ordinance was corrected by the solicitor so as to require the turnkey do janitor work. When the motion was considered the legislation was called, Farrall alone opposed it. On first reading the measure was passed without a disenting vote. However, when a move was made to suspend the rules, in order to place it under second reading, the move was blocked by Kerr and Farrall who voted "nay."

Kerr in discussing the traffic regulations in the city declared Dresden avenue was not infrequently congested because of the Pleasant Heights car which often halted as long as five minutes. He suggested that this car be required to make the loop through the Diamond over Fourth or Fifth street in order to eliminate the long wait on Dresden avenue.

He also recommended that street lights be permitted to burn longer in the morning and be turned on a little later in the evenings. He said the lights were turned off while it was yet pitch dark. Attention of the service director was also called to the condition of the city streets, which are in need of repairs in many cases.

Wage Increases Asked.

A communication from employes of the water works department, asking for wage increases, was referred to the finance committee. Service Director Ellis, in approving the application, recommended the following increases: Firemen, from $135 to $142.50 per month; oilers, from $120 to $135 per month; filtration operators, from $127.50 to $135 per month, assistant water works clerk, from $50 to $70 per month.

Brady E. Wolfe, Morton street, appeared before council complaining against the assessment on what he termed an incompleted sewer in Carson alley. The matter, he declared had been taken to the courts. In this event council held that it was out of their hands and that Mr. Wolfe could not be compelled to pay his assessment until such time as his property is connected with the sewer.

The proposed construction of a storm sewer in Sylvan alley between Harker and Pennsylvania avenue was referred to the street committee and city engineer. The street committee reported that the switch to the Hepps wholesale grocery building, Second street, was O. K. and instructed the service director to notify the Pennsylvania Railroad company to discontinue blocking of Peach alley which is the main approach to the Cartwright Brothers' pottery.

Councilman Farrall asked that the street committee view Trentvale street which he declared was "in a deplorable condition."

Wellsville Councilmen Call Special Meeting For Monday

Plans For Improvement of Clark Avenue, City's Western Gateway, Will be Discussed.

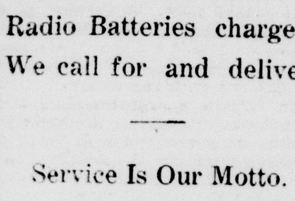

City council will hold a special meeting on Monday evening at city hall for the purpose of discussing proposed plans for the improvement of Clark avenue, the municipality's western gateway.

The Clark avenue project at present is only a suggestion. It is the intention of solons to strive to work out a plan to make it a reality.

Jefferson county commissioners assert that the county will take action to improve highways leading to Wellsville, if this city would repair Clark avenue, which, councilmen admit, is one of the worst streets in the city.

Clerk George Hardman was instructed last Tuesday to review legislation enacted in recent years specifying the manner in which assessments could be made on such an improvement.

C. & P. BUILDS NEW IRONDALE TOWER

NS tower, built in 1884 and one of the oldest block stations on the C. & P. division, has been transformed into a modern interlocking plant during the past few weeks. It is now an electric-mechanical plant, the first of its kind on the division, says the Pennsylvania News.

Located two miles and a half west of Irondale, O., the tower has been moved from the north to the south side of the tracks. It has been transformed at an approximate cost of $70,000.

All the work has been done by C. & P. forces under the direction of William Frech, supervisor of signals and telegraph. For weeks, Foreman G. B. Anderson and his men, Signalmen Samuel Bengelsdorf and F. L. Kemp, Asst. Signalman H. C. Hahn, G. A. Imhos, G. T. Henry and Warren Burrows, and J. D. Lindesmith, T. & S. helper, erected signals, strung wires, installed levers, adjusted electrical equipment and made connections so that the plant could be placed in operation as scheduled at 9:30 a. m. Saturday, December 20.

For a time at least, the operators will be extremely busy becoming familiar with the maze of levers and intricate mechanisms. There are 12 electro mechanical levers, nine mechanical levers operating eight switches and one derail, five electric lock levers and three electric levers for operation of 10 signals.

All signals in connection with the plant are of the position light type. The train movement averages about 18 westbound and 17 eastbound daily, an average of 15 pusher engine trips each 24 hours.

Operators who will be in charge of the tower are I. A. Rice, first trick; B. H. Curry, second trick and C. F. Schooll, third trick.

Sunday school will convene at 9:45 a. m. and Christian Endeavor societies at the customary hour.

Jail Toronto Barber.

Alleged to have attempted to swindle a woman out of $700, Nick Kadekas, 35, Toronto barber, arrested by Steubenville police, has been committed to the Jefferson county jail on a charge of being a suspicious character.

According to information given the authorities, Kadekas, arranged several meetings with a woman, who is said to be 68 years old, and is said to have made every effort to impress her that he could return her savings many times over if given the $700.

The woman and Kadekas were seen talking several times in a Steubenville depot. Attention of authorities was called to the case. They watched the recent conference and shortly afterward arrested Kadekas.

Services in the Evangelical church last night marked the close of the first week of evangelistic campaign which opened on the day following New Year's, in charge of Miss Anne E. McGhie, of Akron.

Sunday night she talked on "Our Kinship With God". She said "When a person settles his relationship with God all other problems in life are solved.

"God is a personal, practical God who deals with everything that concerns His children. God's children should look like their Father. His eyes are the lenses of the soul, and they express the God-likeness of our nature.

"A child of God should walk like God. Your daily life and conversation should reflect God. Parents should talk like God before their children. Church members should walk like God before the business world. If there is any one you are afraid to meet and cross the street when you see that person coming it is a sure sign you have wronged that person. Jacob was afraid to meet Esau because he had wronged him in a business deal. After praying all night he was ready to make restitution. Some here should go home and pray all night. A child of God should literally do the will of God. The greatest thing any one can do in this world is to do the will of God. Your fortune is made if you do the will of God and keep His favor and blessing on your life. This room is full of concerts tonight. If we had a radio equipment we could hear concerts from New York, Chicago and Texas. If you will get your will adjusted to God's, you will hear from Heaven often, and God will send you new messages daily.

Monday night the ubject was "Prayer". Miss McGhie aid: "Many christians do not like to pray. If they did they would be found at the mid-week prayer meeting. Much modern praying is only parrot talk. Unless the church can pray down a sin consuming revival soon this world is doomed, damned and lost. It is drifting to the precipice of destruction at a frightful rate."

Her Tuesday night subject was "Can a Man Live With Voluntary Sin?" "What is salvation? It is a remedy for sin. Who's remedy? God's remedy. God does not give us a remedy that is not adequate to meet our needs. The Angel of the Lord said to Mary, 'And His name shall be called Jesus for He shall save the people from their sins.' Jesus said to the woman, taken in sin. 'Go and sin no more'. John writes, These things I write unto you that ye sin not. God has made provisions of grace in Jesus whereby He can save all men from sin. I have preached the gospel from shore to shore and have seen men and women in every state of society brought to Christ, and have never seen one He could not save. Satan has not done something that God cannot undo. Let us take the devil off the throne and put him on the footstool. let us take Christ off the footstool and put Him on the throne of our lives. If satan could make Jerry McCauley and Sam Hadley vile sinners Jesus Christ could make them saints."

Wednesday night her text was "He That Gathereth Not With Me Scattereth". She said "There are many scatterers in the church. Too much moonshine religion. As the moon borrows all of its light and power from the sun. So many christians have transferred religion. They look good, talk nice and are outwardly moral in their lives, but are devoid of an inner experience of salvation. A church member that has no burnnig personal testimony of salvation is a scatterer. A church member who attends Sunday base ball and goes gadding about on the Lord's Day is a scatterer. A man is as effectively lost without Christ and with his name on the church roll as he is without Christ and without a church membership. After all there are just two classes of people in the world. The gatherer and the scatterer the Godly and the Ungodly, the saved and the lost. Many in our churches will never gather in Heaven."

PRISCILLA DEAN in
"WHITE TIGER"
When crook meets crook, popular fiction says they immediately establish a bond of fellowship and forever hold it sacred. They don't "squeal" on each other and they help each other all they can.
Now comes a motion picture which blows these popular traditions to pieces. It tells the truth about the underworld and the so-called "honor among thieves."
"White Tiger" is the story of three crooks who were human. Most crooks in fiction are sort of Sir Walter Raleighs and Joan de Arcs gone wrong, romantic, impossible, strutting figures who do everthing honorable towards each other and are the best of pals. In "White Tiger" the trio pictured are high class international operators, but they fight from morning to night and have no sense of the "honor among thieves" that so many writers rave about. In brief, they are the kind that actually live.

Safe Fat Reduction
Why be fat? The answer of most fat people is that constant dieting is hard, continual exercise is tiresome and exhaustive—and then, too, it might be harmful to force the weight down. Direct Vote for President

The Ohio legislature, undertaking to revise its archaic election laws, is considering a proposal intended to do away with the present round-about method of voting for president of the United States.

The state legislature, of course, cannot change the federal constitution, which still requires voting for electors, who in turn elect the president and vice president. The legislators propose to get around the difficulty by having the list of electors representing each pair of candidates filed with the secretary of state instead of being printed on the ballots. The ballots will bear the names of the presidential and vice presidential candidates, which will permit direct voting for those officials. The electors will be required, at the meeting of the electoral college, to cast their ballots for the choice indicated on the ballots.

This is not really an innovation, nor is its legality questionable. It has been done in Iowa and Nebraska, and has been held valid by the courts. It makes a presidential election more intelligible to the voters and makes them feel that their votes really count in choosing their chief executive. It looks like a good way to get around the awkward constitutional requirement until such time as a federal amendment can be adopted bringing the constitutional machinery into harmony with modern facts.

Arrogance

"Before God," says Premier Mussolini, "I alone assume full personal, political, moral and historical responsibility for everything that has occurred in Italy."

Which, it will be admitted, is a great deal for one man to assume. Mussolini goes farther than Kaiser Wilhelm, who admitted God to full partnership.

Perhaps it is courageous for the former radical and present conservative leader to take all this burden upon himself. The Italian people, or such part of them as are able to find representation in the Italian parliament and press under the present blood-and-iron regime, appear to think so. At least, they have applauded Mussolini in his lion-like roaring.

Intelligent outsiders, however, and perhaps intelligent Italians, too, are likely to regard Mussolini as a stage lion, roaring for dramatic effect.

If Mussolini is sincere about it, he stands forth as a supreme egotist. Napoleon or Caesar never ventured to picture himself so brazenly as a Colossus.

The Italians wearied of Julius Caesar, who was probably a bigger man than Mussolini, and no less a patriot. When will a democratic people weary of their present master, a violent and ranting enemy of democracy? Lawless and arrogant Fascism may blow up at any time. Then what? History shows that one lawless extreme breeds another.

Slovenly, Ignorant Wives

The Salvation Army has had experts working in 22 states investigating the causes of deplorable home conditions among the poor. The reports throw a major portion of the blame for domestic misery upon slovenly and ignorant wives.

"Our officers," says one leader, "every day meet housewives who have never had a needle in their hands, and know nothing about repairing their children's clothing; women who have never owned a toothbrush or a nail brush, and make use of soap perhaps once or twice a week; women who actually make a practice of throwing away stockings and other garments as soon as holes appear in them because they don't know what else to do. These women know how to cook perhaps two or three dishes that their husbands get weary eating."

It is a dreary picture, and a pitiful one, of the extravagance of ignortant poverty. Delegating drudgery to others or reducing its amount by the use of labor-saving machinery is right and efficient whenever possible. But the good executive usually knows the details of his business and frequently has reached his executive position after a period of efficient performance of drudgery and routine tasks. Home-making and household management, too, are executive positions requiring knowledge and skill for their proper handling, and their drudgery is reduced sooner by efficient practice than by ignortant neglect.

TORNADO STATISTICS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—During the last eight years there were 752 tornadoes in the United States that caused an aggregate property loss of more than $62,000,000 and the loss of 1,929 lives. Akkansas led all the states in the number of these storms, while Illinois led in the total property loss. Indiana and Illinois suffered the storm that caused the greatest number of fatalities—103.

These statistics are announced by Herbert C. Hunter, of the United States weather bureau, as summarizing the data gathered since 1916, when the weather bureau resumed the systematic collection of tornado statistics for the entire country. The result for the eight-year period can now be compared with the conclusions reached by Finley, about 40 years ago, and by Henry, another expert, over 25 years ago.

The tornado is a wicked storm that in this country seems to favor the middle west as the scene of its depredations. It is cyclonic in its movements, but instead of being a thousand miles in diameter like the continental cyclone, or one hundred miles like the tropical hurricane, it usually has a diameter of gyration of only about one hundred to three hundred yards.

Its speed of rotation is said to be so terrific that no instruments have ever been held together long enough to measure its velocity, which must equal that of a rifle bullet. Reputable and reliable persons have reported wheat straws that were shot by the wind of a tornado at least half an inch into the tough body of a oak tree, and in another instance a two by four pine scantling was driven through five-eighths of an inch of solid iron.

As a rule, tornadoes occur in the spring of the year, in the southeast quadrant of a cyclone, when the temperature and humidity are high. Their direction is nearly always toward the northeast and at the height of their destructiveness they mow a path like a gigantic, irresistible scythe. The traditions of their freaks are innumerable.

A CAREFUL COMPILATION

In gathering its data the climatological service assigned a certain area, usually a state, to each of the 45 directors. Tornado information, like much other material, is assembled and passed upon first by these directors, then the compiling is finished at Washington.

This system has a marked advantage over the practices of the earlier periods in the employment of well-distributed section directors, who are likely to learn of storms in remote districts which would easily escape the notice of a single worker trying to cover the whole country. A considerable disadvantage, however, is that the final counts for the states depend largely upon the diverse judgments of dozens of different men, some of them very conservative in classifying a puzzling storm as a tornado.

In the entire country from 1919 to 1923 there were, as stated, 752 storms classified as tornados, and average of 94 a year. The annual count was greatest in 1917, with a total of 121, while 64 was the smallest number reported for any one year. The average number is appreciably larger than the annual average reported by Finley and Henry 40 and 25 years ago, probably because of better news-gathering facilities.

The principal area or section of the country where the present compilation indicates that tornadoes are more numerous than they were in the earlier surveys is the central and western parts of the cotton growing region.

During the eight-year period Arkansas was visited by a total of 76 tornadoes, with Kansas, Texas, Iowa, Missouri and Oklahoma coming next, in order. No other state reported as many as 50 of these a single year, with 32 in 1916. In eight states there seem to have been no tornadoes during this period.

However, the records show that 10 states that were visited by tornadoes once or oftener had no loss of life, and in 11 other states the number of persons killed was less than 10.

MANY KILLED IN MISSISSIPPI

Mississippi reports the greatest loss of life for the eight years of any of the states, her total fatalities being 257. Arkansas came second and Alabama third.

Of the aggregate loss of life of 1,929, these deaths were the work of slightly less than one-third of the tornadoes, and only one tornado in 14 took 10 or more lives, while only one—that which visited Indiana and Illinois—caused as many as 100 fatalities.

The total damage to property reported as due to these tornadoes averaged a little less than $8,000,000 a year. Of the whole amount—$62,000,000—the year 1917 accounted for almost one-fourth, while the loss in 1920 was only a trifle less.

Among the states Illinois reports the largest aggregate loss, almost $7,500,000. Indiana comes second with a total of almost exactly $5,000,000, while Minnesota and Iowa have records almost equaling that of Indiana.

The largest property loss from a single tornado was $3,500,000. It was caused by a storm in and near Fergus Falls, Minnesota, during June 1919.

While governmental authorities may gather statistics relative to tornadoes or cyclones they have never been able to devise any defense against these visitations. Tornado alarms have been perfected, giving warning a minute or two in advance of the danger, but even they rarely suffice to save lives or property. Persons caught in the path of one of these terrific storms are simply out of luck, unless they have cyclone cellars handy and have the presence of mind to dive into them at the first signs of danger.

The term cyclone was originally applied to the violent rotary tempests of the tropical and sub-tropical regions, called in the West Indies hurricanes; in Senegal, tornadoes; at the Cape of Good Hope, trovadoes; in the Chinese sea, typhoons, and on the west coast of Central America, papagallos.

Since the discovery of the rotary course of winds even at a distance from the tropics the term cyclone has been applied to any system of winds blowing a center of low pressure, and a cyclone is distinguished from an anti-cyclone, which is a system of winds with a center of high pressure.

Any flowing together of the air between two anti-cyclones must produce a cyclone, and it has been shown that the unequal heating effects of land and water surfaces may be sufficient to initiate cyclonic and anti-cyclonic action.

Storms move eastward in the middle latitudes and westward in the tropics, and rotate counter-clockwise in the northern hemisphere and in the opposite direction in the southern hemisphere. In the case of some tropical storms, the storm itself may move at a speed of only seven to twelve miles an hour, while the inside of the storm may be whirling at a rate of over 100 miles an hour.

"Please let me have a bite to eat," asked the tramp at the back door, and Bridget let the dishevelled creature into the kitchen. He had no sooner taken one step inside the door, however, when Bridget bethought herself of her newly scrubbed floors.

"You'd better go out again and wipe your feet," she ordered severely.

"There really isn't much use, ma'am," the tramp replied. "I only walked a few steps; round to the back from my automobile."

"No," retorted the lawyer, "you doctors certainly have the best of us there."

NEWSY GOSSIP OF BIG CITIES

By LUTHER A. HUSTON.

TOKIO, Jan. 10.—This looks like a "winter of discontent" in Tokio and throughout Japan generally.

Widespread unemployment, coupled with abnormally high prices, is causing a great deal of unrest among the working classes. There is an increasing clamor for immediate relief measures by the government, and more attention is being given in official circles to the unemployment problem than ever before in Japan.

It is estimated that there are more than 100,000 unemployed in Japan. Naturally, since it is the capital and the largest city, the pressure is greater in Tokio than elsewhere in the country, and officials of the home department are endeavoring to devise some way of preventing the ingress of unemployed into Tokio from the country districts and smaller cities.

So serious has the problem become that a national meeting of officials in charge of the 155 intelligence offices of the home department, which deals with unemployment questions, was held in Tokio recently to discuss remedial measures. The meeting, however, failed to put forth any definite program, although a few temporary relief schemes were adopted.

One of the factors contributing to the unemployment situation is the retrenchment policy of the government. With an eye to governmental economy the Kato administration has been pruning the payroll persistently. Many thousands of government employes either have been dismissed from their posts or will be turned adrift shortly. These former government employes, seeking jobs in every line of industry, have caused a glue in the labor market.

Every department of the government has been affected to some extent by the retrenchment order. One of the hardest hit branches of the federal service is the army, which is to be reduced by four divisions. This will result in more than 1,000 army officers, to say nothing of a host of privates, being mustered into the ranks of the unemployed.

Practically, the unemployment has resulted in something of a business boom among shopkeepers in Tokio. The reason for this is that the government has given to all discharged employes a bonus, graded in amount according to the salary received. Millions of yen have been distributed in this way, the army alone dispensing more than 15,000,000 yen.

The result is that thousands of Japanese have more money, in a lump sum, that they ever had before. Regardless of the unpromising outlook for new jobs, they are spending this money freely and the retail stores report a thriving year-end business. The buying of women's clothes is particularly brisk.

Although all classes of workers are hit by the unemployment wave, it is the clerical and educated workers that are feeling the pinch the most. Graduates of the universities complain that it is almost impossible to find jobs. Many students are reported to have offered bribes to employment officials for preferment when positions are being assigned.

The only labor shortage reported is of school teachers. The Tokio primary schools, it is declared, are suffering from a dearth of teachers and are hard pressed to keep their staffs adequately manned to carry on the necessary school work.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—Sudden success does not always spoil the man but it sometimes makes his wife a ridiculous figure. New York literary circles have been particularly amused of late at the lorgnette attitude of the wife of a best selling novelist.

He is a square toed country boy as genuine as the virgin soil of his native state and as free of affectation as any successful human being might possibly be. But his wife has grown dizzy with superiority. She has taken on a triple ply British accent.

She has become frightfully bored with "Awmeer-ika"—accent on the second syllable. When his old friends call on him she takes on the air of remote but amused tolerance. She is not at all conscious of her middle class ancestry. Her father was an honest and energetic mille.

She wants her husband to be come master of hounds and to associate only with those of noble lineage. Due to his popularity, friends have been considerate of her. They have permitted her to get away with it in the hope it was a mere passing cranial inflation.

This case while conspicuous is not unusual. A divorce lawyer tells of three husbands, suddenly elevated to affluence, who were forced for their own peace of mind to separate from their wives because they could not stand the annoyance of their precipitate egoism.

Two of the wives had formerly been stenographers and the third was the attendant in a dentist's office. The minute prosperity struck them they shed their old friends as lightly as a tin roof sheds rain water and went in for the la-de-dah pose.

All Americans become bourgeoise and the only thing worth while is a home in Grosvenor square, London, or along the Bois in Paris. Of course, these wives who develop the grimace of distate for friends of other days wind up in pathetic solicitude. The veneer is too shallow for new friends as well as old.

A short while ago there was the patter of soft bare feet in the room where I work. My visitor was a five-year-old boy from down the hall. He was lonely. His mother is one typical of New York—a slinky creature, with a drawling voice, musky with heavy perfume and the kind who smokes cigarettes in the lobby waiting for the chauffeur. This boy knows her as some strange creature who pats him indifferently now and then and leaves him in charge of a governess. The husband is a brisk business man intent on piling up a fortune. Father and mother are never seen together. When the governess came I was in a ridiculous posture with the boy riding on my back. She sniffed and snatched him away. I looked foolish and the child began to whimper. I don't think he had really ever romped before.

George Jean Nathan is leading a group of the literati out of the thicket of restaurants and midnight supper clubs of the Roaring Forties into the wilderness of Second avenue. A group of the ultra Bohemians are opening their own little hide-a-way where a gypsy violinist will play real music and where the cover charge is to be just a dime. Only those who are really desired will be admitted.

Fannie Hurst, the writer, dresses in dazzling red frocks for evening. They are as much the part of her as Ora's Mann's wide winged collars. Miss Hurst, contrary to those who accepted the separate apartment marriage literally, is seen often with her husband. He is a tall, handsome fellow with wavy black hair and one of those apparently born to comfort in full evening dress.

SAUSAGES, PANCAKES, LAW

Judge Gary, biggest man in steel, and John D. Rockefeller, Jr., biggest man in oil, ate breakfast and discussed prohibition enforcement with President Coolidge yesterday morning. They had sausages, coffee and buckwheat cakes. Discussion is easy, enforcement is difficult. Judge Gary said all officials must set the example, by obeying the dry law. They don't do it and won't do it. A congressman's wife edified about her husband's party in Washington, "there was the usual amount of drinking at a congressman's house." That's about how it is.

President Coolidge permits no alcoholic drink in the White House, drinks no stimulants himself. He represents a minority of one in ten among officials.

Mr. Rockefeller, also a total abstainer, says the public mind must be stirred. It has been stirred, but not toward prohibition.

Bootleggers, bootleg whisky, bootleg crime, hijacking, holdups, increase in drug use, bribe-taking enforcement officials, all the drink they want for rich men, etc., have turned the public mind toward the idea that prohibition does not prohibit. What can be done about the growing conviction that you cannot, by writing a law or a constitutional amendment, force men to change habits held for ages?

GHOST, DREAMS AND RELIGIONS

Santa Clara is agitated about ghosts that disturb a young boy and girl. Trances, the neighbors call the sleep in which strange visions frighten the children and superstitious neighbors.

Such visions and dreams, as old as the human race, are said by scientists to be responsible for the beginnings of religion and belief in another world.

The cave man, seeing his dead father in a strange dream, said on awaking, "then he's not entirely dead after all. I wonder where he went?"

The witch doctor and magician elaborated the idea, and many fancy pagan theories developed, with assorted ideas of heaven and hell. The way to avoid hell hereafter and tormenting by spirits now, was to be generous with the witch doctor. Fortunately we have a better religion.

MORE HAPPY LAMBS

Stocks went up again yesterday. Interest rate on call money went down. That is a combination as sweet as new spring grass to the little lamb. Money for stock speculation could be borrowed, all you wanted, for 2 per cent, lowest rate since November.

There is lots of money if your credit is good, or you have security. The big telephone company borrows $150,000,000 with the greatest ease.

"Please may I have $150,000,000 for improvements, Mr. Morgan?"

"Certainly," is the reply.

"Don't you need more?"

Telephone credit is very good.

Railroads that owe the government millions say that they want a lower interest rate, and will probably get it. That is fair, as the government loaned at 6 per cent war rates, and can borrow for 4 per cent, but the man that put a mortgage on his home at 6 per cent cannot arrange the rate so easily.

BOLIVIA'S RICHEST MAN

Senor Patino arrived from Bolivia yesterday. Two secretaries, a doctor, a valet and 50 pieces of luggage followed him down the gangplank. That means money, and he has it.

He is the richest man in Bolivia; owner of the biggest tin mine in the world. Tin is better than gold, if you get the right mine. Senor Patino, on his way to Spain as Bolivian minister, has at least $100,000,000.

In spite of all the money, this gentleman wishes to live and die in Bolivia, except for little trips. That will puzzle millions here who do not know just where Bolivia is, but wonder why a man "with the price" does not move into the American cabaret belt.

Wise nature makes the normal man think the sky, air and earth of his native land the finest in the world.

An Eskimo from the Arctic, a Zulu from the tropics, will both die of sorrow if you transplant them, even to Palm Beach.

Somebody representing the railroads will have to do some thinking and plan something, or respectable United States railroads are going to suffer no matter how much the government may do for them.

Motor trucks are robbing the roads of short haul freight, and the long haul goes more and more by canal wherever it can. Mr. Thom for the railroads says so.

Do railroads intend to meet new conditions or just die out, like the dinosaur, when his time came and the rat gnawed his big feet?

The motor truck and flying machine will be the rats of the railroad dinosaur.

The plaintiffs then claim that on February 15, 1924, Gibb left the employment of the plaintiff company and went to Lima, where he entered into a contract with the Radiant Oil company, and it is said sold the Lima company the same formula. It is also set up that the organization and the employed of the Columbiana concern has been interfered with by the defendant, and that some of the employes of the Columbiana plant have gone to Lima and engaged with the Radiant Oil company.

A moment later he countered with a pretty field goal from the center of the floor. Simcox cut down the visitors' lead when he shot a foul and field goal in rapid succession. Myers tied up the battle by scoring from the field. Myers scored another foul and Dickey came through with a field goal again putting Wellsville in the lead. Pinney scored for Chester and Dickey tossed in a double marker for the visitors. Pinney hurled a field goal through the net and the first half closed with Chester leading by a score of 14 to 13.

Weekly and Pignatore started out the third period of play by scoring field goals for Wellsville. Dickey then tossed a foul. The quarter ended with the score standing 19 to 14 in favor of Zimmerman's charges. The last quarter was fast and exciting with Chester making a strong bid for victory. Myers and Pinney scored single markers and Bennett raised the hopes of victory by landing a field goal for Chester. Weekly then scored from the field and Scholl came to the front with another double decker. Pinney kept his team in the running by scoring a field goal. Dickey scored again for Wellsville and just before the bell sounded Bennett caged a two pointer for Chester.

W. Dickey was the individual star of the game. He made half the points scored by his team. His teammates also played good basketball. Pinney, Bennett, Myers, Campbell, Simcox were the leading performers for Chester.

Q. How much food must be carried for dogs that pull sleds in the far north? H. M. F.

A. Each dog will eat two pounds of food per day. A team of 15 dogs pulling a load of from 1,000 to 1,500 pounds will eat the equivalent of its load in from 35 to 50 days.

Q. Is it true that a person dreaming of falling from a great height will die from the shock if he does not awaken before he hits the ground in his dream fall? S. I. D.

A. Physicians say that such an idea is ridiculous, although this is not susceptible of absolute proof, for if any man has ever died from the shock of landing at the bottom of a dream fall he has never had a chance to tell the world about it.

Q. When was an effective police system established in England? J. C. H.

A. Sir Robert Peel established a system in 1829 which resulted in a great diminishing of crime.

Q. What is meant by an "absolute adjective? Is 'stright" one? S. McN.

A. Some qualities are incapable of comparison because they already are so absolutely expressed that one can not think of them as greater or less. For example "round," "square," "unique." Straight can be compared, hence it is not an absolute adjective.

Q. Under what circumstances did Verdi write "Aida?" N. V.

A. Ismail Pasha, Khedive of Turkey, commissioned Guiseppe Verdi to write "Aida" for the opening of the Cairo Opera House.

Q. What is a copyright, and what the earliest instance thereof? O. M.

A. Copyright is a right given by law for a limited number of years (in the United States 28 years from the date of first publication) to the author or originator of an intellectual production, or to his assignee. It is intended to secure to him the exclusive right to his writing or other production, and to make reproductions thereof. According to Justinian a law was passed securing to the scribes by whom books were written the property in the materials used; and in this way, perhaps, he traced the first germ of the modern law of copyright.

Whenever I felt myself beginning to feel draggy and wornout, I would take the 'Favorite Prescription' and found it very beneficial in giving me strength. It just seemed to put new life in me. The Good MAXWELL

MAXWELL

THE DOUBLE HOUSE

By Elizabeth Dejeans

She got out of bed, put on her slippers, and hastily washed the sleep out of her eyes, her ears assailed meanwhile by Clarice's angry demands: "here is my hat? Father had no business bringing me here! I don't know this woman—I won't live in her house!"

Then Mary Bliss came limping in wringing her hands. "You were asleep!" She says she won't stay here. She is going away and that man will get her again. He'll hurt her!"

"Hush!" Karesia commanded. "She shall not go a step!" The girl's angry defiance of Dascome had aroused instantly the combative in Karesia.

She went swiftly through the hall and into her own room, an impressive vision, swathed in oriental crepe, a mass of tumbled hair above brows lowered into a straight line. "What is the trouble, Miss Dascome?" she demanded curtly. "I am Mrs. Kaime."

Clarice was searching for her hat in the glazed room. She whirled about and Karesia looked into great gray eyes flushed by anger. They were Dascome's eyes and yet they were not; they were rounder, steadfast, but with a different quality. There were spots of hot color in her cheeks. Yet, despite the girl's defiant expression, Karesia granted that she was as beautiful a creature as she had ever seen.

Clarice took swift note of Karesia's exotic appearance and vivid contempt sprang into her eyes. "I am looking for my hat, madame, so that I can leave your house. My father objects to my friends—well, I object to his!"

Karesia's eyes narrowed still more. "You had no hat. You were carried in here like a senseless log."

Evidently the girl was not callous, for her throat as well as her face flushed. She retorted passionately: "Father had no business to bring me here!"

Angry, though she was, Karesia hesitated; what she was going to say would hurt. "Your father did not bring you here," she said in a softer tone. "It was someone else who brought you. He happened to go to the house where you were, and he felt that he could not leave you there in that condition, so he brought you here. Whatever his opinion of you, he did the decent thing. He has known me for a number of years and he knew that you would be safe in my house. It was Randsome Rossiter who carried you in here and asked me to look after you."

Karesia had known that it would hurt; she had not realized that it would hurt so much. The color drained slowly from Clarice's face and her eyes grew as vague and filmed almost as Mary Bliss'. She groped for the couch, sat down, and stared across the canyon at Rossiter Hill. Mary Bliss, who had hung in the background, whimpered. She may not have understood just what had been said, but she knew suffering when she saw it. She crept from behind Karesia and stole to Clarice's side, knelt and stroked her hand, "You won't go away?" she pleaded. "Please don't go away."

Karesia continued: "Your father was searching for you last night. He was desperately anxious and frightened. Then Mr. Rossiter told him that he had brought you here. Then Mr. Dascome came to see me. It seemed best for all concerned that you should not go back to the hotel. Mr. Rossiter himself felt that he could not take you there. Tomorrow, this will be your home, I am moving my personal belongings into the next house today. Mary Bliss will put the spare room in order and, if you will occupy it while I am busied with the moving, I shall be glad. . . . Shall I, or will you telephone your father to send your things?"

Clarice was looking at Rossiter Hill. "Yes. I don't care," she said in a smothered way. "Tell father whatever you want to. I don't see why he bothered to take me away last night." She was still looking at Rossiter Hill.

Karesia recognized the wistful note, and her anger melted. But she was not in a position to administer comfort—far from it. There was hard fibre in the girl and a reckless spirit; and her attitude to her father was abominable. "I suppose, because Rand, like most men, does not like to see a girl's self-respect go under. There are those whom it amuses, of course, but Rand is not that sort."

The way in which Clarice turned and looked at her reminded Karesia poignantly of Dascome, a gaze unwaveringly steadfast. "You know him well, then?" she asked as quietly as Dascome would have asked the question.

"She has plenty of self-control if she chooses to use it," Karesia reflected. "Yes, very well," she returned steadily. "He comes here often to see me and invites me to his house." It was as well for the girl to realize at once; it would save trouble later on.

Clarice looked down. Mary Bliss was still crouched beside her, stroking her hands. Just how the woman had introduced herself, Karesia did not know, but it was evident that Clarice did not shrink from her. "You will stay, won't you?" Mary Bliss begged, now she seemed to have Clarice's attention.

Clarice's "Yes," sounded like Dascome. She looked then full at Karesia and in the colder than blue-gray of her eyes Karesia read a hatred as intense as one woman can bear another and yet remain veiled behind forced politeness. "I am sorry I kept you out of your room last night, Mrs. Kaime. May I go to the spare room now?"

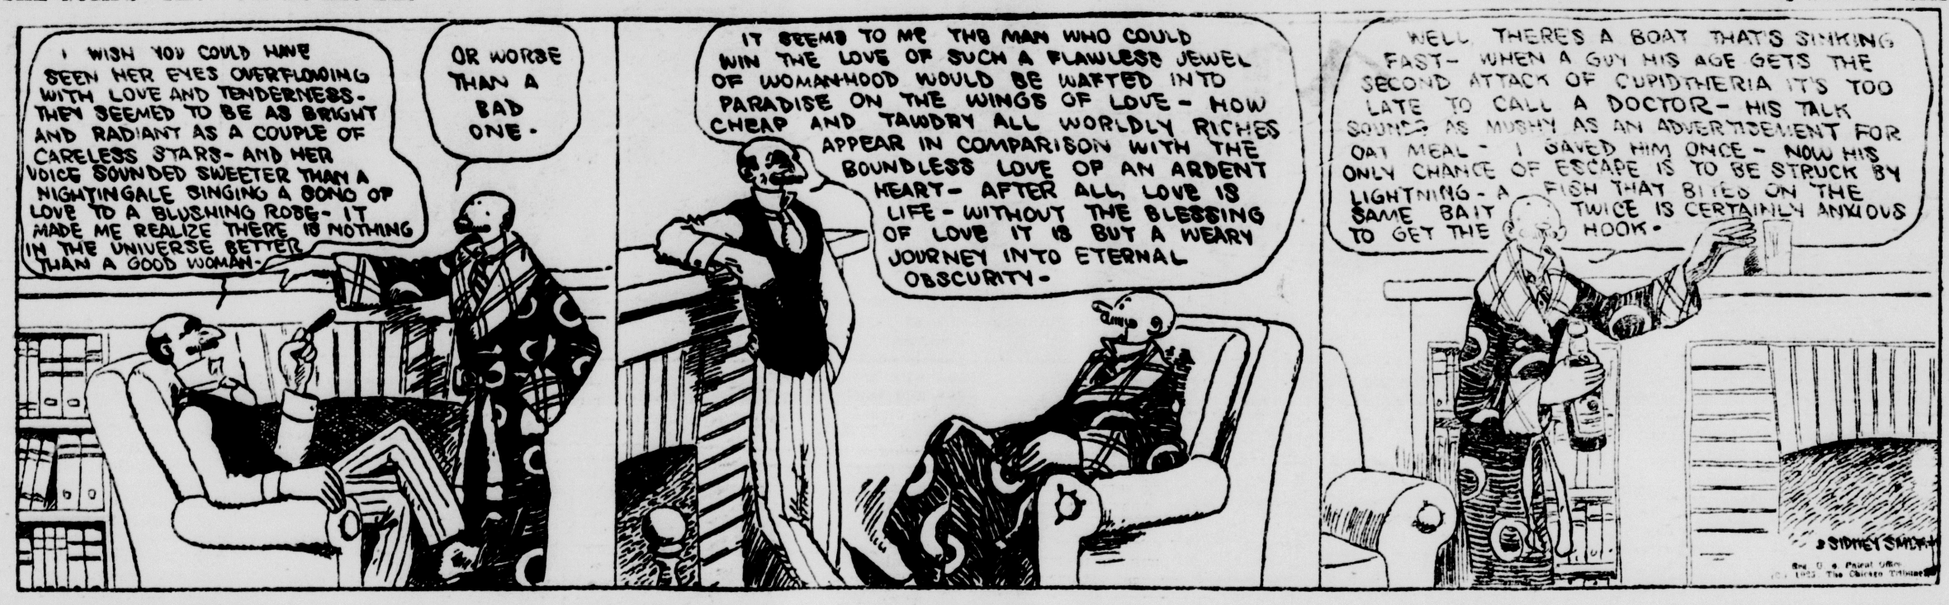

"Mary Bliss will take you there. The room I was in, Mary. I shall have breakfast sent up to you."

Mary Bliss hurried off with her pathetic approach to a smile, and Karesia turned away with all the dignity of aloofness, an expression that became her, eyelids lowered in apparently sleepy indifference and brow thoughtful. She moved about in the next room, apparently unconscious of Clarice's existence, laid out her dress for the day, prepared for her bath. Clarice's eyes followed Karesia's movements, now undulating, now swift; noted Karesia's yard and a half of hair, her supple body, and her lovely skin and splendid throat.

Karesia was glad when she was free to look as she felt; a tremendous sympathy for Dascome and pity for Clarice commingled with the restless feeling that he girl would stab her if she could. What Karesia resented was Clarice's attitude to her father. "That's the thing I can't forgive, not what she said to me," was Karesia's conclusion.

What the Sunday School Is Studying

The Last Judgment.

Christ's Picture of the Grand Scene. International Lesson for January 11. —Matthew 25:31-46.

By JAMES H. SNOWDEN, D. D.

Every day, as Ruskin says, is a day of judgment and irrevocably writes its verdict in the flames of the west. This principle is woven into the whole web of the world, and were judgment withdrawn from its warp and woof our world would lose its deepest meaning and would fall to pieces in the self-destruction of sin. This fact of judgment runs up to its grand conclusion and climax in the final day of judgment, and the Master handles the great theme in this discourse with the ease of deity.

The Grand Scene.

The stupendous scene opens with the Son of Man, having come in his glory with his angels, sitting on the throne. Jesus does not hesitate to put himself on this throne, yet this amazing assumption excites in us no thought of absurdity or presumption on his part but seems to him perfectly natural. Before him shall be gathered all nations, a vast multitude whom no man can number. But the vastness of the multitude will put no undue strain upon the powers of the Judge and will afford no possibility of escape to any single soul. Discrimination and separation will mark that day. Here all are mixed in one mass in which their true nature in some degree is obscured and hidden, but at the last day this infinitely knotted skein shall be untangled and straightened out and every thread shall be seen in its true form and color. Let us not think that because we are all living together here we are all going to the same place.

The Principle of Judgment.

What is the principle of separation? Shall any favoritism or prejudice or unfairness influence the decisions? Abraham answered this question when he exclaimed, Shall not the Judge of all the earth do right? The King first pronounces judgment upon the righteous, bidding them to come to him. The reward of the righteous is fellowship with the righteous King—is not this fair? The grounds of the reward are then announced, and they are the everyday deeds of a good life, the outflowing of a loving heart through a helping hand. Giving drink to the thirsty and clothing to the naked and visiting the sick—these are not conspicuous and heroic deeds that attract attention and seem to call for special recognition and reward, but are just the common acts of goodness that should be sown broadcast as seed every day, "the little, nameless, unremembered acts of kindness and of love that make the best portion of the good man's life." The principle of the judgment is that the life in this world shall be the basis of reward in the next world. This invests the present life with enormous responsibility. Every deed instantly crystalizes into character and destiny, drops into the soul a seed that will bear its final fruit on the day of judgment. No good deed of ours is ever lost, but is stored up against that day. Righteous living is even now fashioning for us that righteous crown which shall shine as the stars forever.

Unconscious Goodness.

The righteous express surprise at the judgment of the King and inquire when they had done these good things. This reveals the unconsciousness of perfected goodness. Unconsciousness of self in the final touch of perfection in any art or attainment. Not until we have forgotten the processes by which we have acquired skill do we have perfect skill. No one has good manners who is thinking about manners; the person of polished manners exercises them with unconscious ease and grace. It is just so in our growth in goodness. As long as our virtues are a matter of conscious thought and effort, they are imperfect. Does a perfectly honest man have to try to be honest? No, he is honest without trying. He may never thing of his honesty and would be surprised if he were told of it. So these righteous ones on the day of judgment were surprised at their own good deeds as though they had never heard of them before. These deeds grew out of them spontaneously and vitally as leaves out of a tree and necessarily expressed their own inner nature. They had done these things to the brethren of Christ, the poor and sick and imprisoned, and this was just the same as doing them to him. Every good deed is done to Christ, though we may know it not. The garb of a stranger may conceal his presence; treat that stranger as you would the Lord Christ. We are thus all the while doing things the significence of whcih we shall never know until it flashes out in the day of judgment.

The Law of Retribution.

The retribution of the wicked follows the same law as the reward of the righteous. Deeds done in the body are the test; seed sown in this world determine the harvest reaped in the next. Eternal judgment is no unjust application of an arbitrary principle, or the caprice of an unrighteous judge, but is just the fair and square outcome of the life lived here on earth. Whatsoever we sow we shall also reap.

SUNDAY SCHOOL, CHURCH FORUM

(Send problems in question form to Church Editor; answers will appear in later issue).

1. Give some reasons for dropping a member from the Sunday school.

Removal from the community, death, irregular attendance, unworthy conduct, joining some other Sunday school.

2. What are some Sunday amusements to be considered apart from the appointed church services for the day?

Supervised Sunday walks, moving pictures selected and conducted by the church, good music such as may be carried on in community singing and singing in the home, participating in good musical programs using different musical instruments, Sunday lectures especially planned for childhood and youth, Sunday story-telling, Bible information games, and such other games as may be played in keeping with the spirit of the day.

3. Should a Sunday school library be general or for departments?

Probably handled best by having both plans. By a general library is meant having one place in the building where all the books are kept and where the pupils will go to get their books. There are advantages in this plan if books are well chosen and in charge of a competent librarian, who will give out books suitable for pupils asking for them, refusing to let any pupil have a book not adapted for that age.

The advantage in the library for departments is that there can be betwise not to have too many books in ter supervision of the reading. It is the department library at one time. The surplus may be kept in the general library, or stored some place. Pupils are not apt to ask for a book that has been on the shelf, where they can see it, for a long time. Without question a carefully selected library in each department is better than a general library.

HOME TRAINING

A Mental Fall Preceds a Moral Fall.

"Say, what has become of Mr. A? We were class mates in college! I knew him as a boy," said Mr. McDonald to his visitor.

"Oh, have you not heard? No one knows where he is now. He was forced to leave his city because of an immoral deed, which not only meant disgrace to his own home but the ruination of another family."

"Well, I am not greatly surprised. Do you know that when he was a small boy he seemed to enjoy dirty stories, and when in college he reveled in impure thoughts."

"He sometimes would imagine certain conditions and how he would proceed under those conditions to accomplish questionable objectives."

"But, Mr. McDonald, he was the most highly respected citizen in his town and his mistake was a shocking surprise to everybody."

"It is not a surprise to me for he fell mentally when a boy and again as a young man in college; while he may have succeeded for a time to cover his mental fall, when imagined conditions were realized the mental fall was pronounced a moral fall."

LIVE FACTS ABOUT FARMING

Thrift and Tenacity Wins Farm and Home for Youth

The House Was Later Rebuilt Along Modern Lines But Its Owner Looks Back to Joy and Happiness of the Days of Struggle.

By AMOS BRADFORD.

A young man started out in life for himself when he was 17 years old. Fine parents he had and it was on a farm that he was born and lived until that age. But it was a large family on a small farm, so he worked for a neighbor. His wages were small, but he was thrifty. When he was 21 he chose a bride and left for Kansas where land was cheap. There he bought a farm and built a house.

That first house was only a cabin of three rooms. It had only three windows, a fireplace and the furniture was crude; but neighbors came in, cowboys and other farmers; and four fine children were born in that house. Years had passed; still thrifty, strong, a hard worker with a good mind, fair prosperity came and another house was built. This second house was larger, a real cottage of five rooms; it too, had a fireplace and the children played in and out of the house and the family was happy and healthy. The wife made a real home, her hand helped at everything, and she cheered and inspired her man and the children. There were flowers and a garden. The family lived!

Later the owner's possessions increased, his flocks and herds grew larger, his fields waxed fat; so from the walls of the cottage arose a third house. This time a large one of many rooms. It was heated by steam, but the fireplace remained; a bath room with hot and cold running water was installed, and there was water in the kitchen and in a laundry; there were rooms for all and a guest room and a library; and a fine sleeping porch was built and partitioned. It was a real home, luxurious, commodious, one to be proud of.

A House in Retrospect.

When asked "Which was the best house," he replied: "We were very happy in the little cabin, just wife and I at first and then the tiny babies. We like, I should say we love, this new house with all its conveniences and comforts; but after all for the downright, sacred joy of living, I cannot forget the time when she and I lived in the five room cottage with our boys and girls as little children learning to walk, to talk, to play, to do little chores, when we worked so hard and slept so well—that was the best house."

There is a moral in the life of this family—typical of millions of American homes in every section. The moral is tucked in the five-room cottage with the prattle of growing children, the love and devotion of wife and mother, the vision and worthiness of the faithful father whose strong arm faltered not from youth to old age, and who by dreaming and toiling won the victory. This man still lives; he will recognize the picture here portrayed if he reads it; but so also will thousands of others think the reference is of them because they, too, built a cabin, a small cottage and a house—and realized the dream!

RAISING HOGS

THE United States Department of Agriculture showed by an exhibit at the International Livestock Exposition recently, held in Chicago, the story of an average Corn Belt farm in raising hogs. The principle crops grown on the farm were corn, oats, and soy beans, very little feed being purchased and much of the oats being marketed as grain. That selection of crops could apply to nearly every part of the United States—especially in these regions where corn grows: North or South.

During a year 78,700 pounds of hogs are marketed, which is a little more than a pound every seven minutes during the entire year. The outstanding reasons for the success of this type of farmer who does most of the work himself are these: Convenient arrangement, enabling the owner to care for the pigs with little labor; well-balanced rations, producing gains without waste; and continuous use of fresh pasture, providing cheap feed and keeping the hogs in excellent condition.

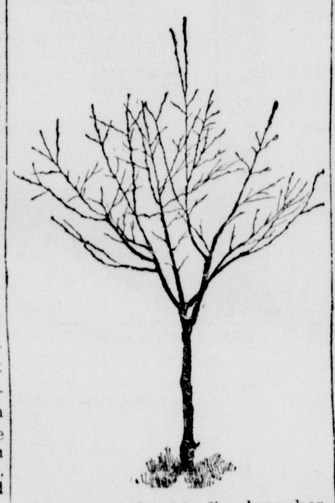

Pure Bred Stock to Advance

AT an auction sale of registered Guernsey cattle held recently in Illinois, 54 head were sold for nearly $100,000. The animals averaged $1,800 per head. One cow fetched $15,000 and another $12,750. These prices were the highest that have been paid in recent years. They are indicative of revived interest in pure-bred stock.

Soon prices for all pure-bred animals will be much higher than at present. Every farmer or breeder who wants to get started with better stock should make his purchase within the next few months, for prices of livestock will advance. They have been at rock bottom since agricultural deflation started in 1920, but the turn upward has begun.

Properly Pruning a Tree Top

TREES are pruned when planted to give shapliness to top, to open up the head and to get rid of some of the branches and leaves. The next season the aim should be to keep the top symmetrical and open for the free access of air and sunshine. The framework of the tree for the permanent top is secured by retaining three to five branches, all others being cut out. The tree pictured above is the result of such pruning.

This tree is now in its third year. The only pruning required this Winter is to clip off a few of the smaller branches to keep an open head. If this were not done the tree top would be dense and as the tree grows larger would keep out air and sunshine. The proper time for doing the pruning is during the dormant season. The tree shown here has four strong, sturdy main limbs which go out from the trunk in such manner as to reduce the danger of the tree splitting later.

What Every One Should Know

Farm Animals Are More Efficient

IN recent years farm animals have not increased in numbers as rapidly as have the people of the United States, but the value of these animals has increased much more rapidly. Much of this is due to increase in the individual merit of the animals. In 1850 the average weight of wool on each sheep was 2.4 pounds; at the present time it is 6.9 pounds per sheep. Thus, while in 65 years sheep have not doubled in numbers, the production of wool has increased more than five times.

This is a striking example of the value of improvement in breeding, because the improvement in wool production is due to the influence of heredity in far greater degree than to the effect of improved feeding. Beef cattle offer another illustration of the way in which animal products have been increased without increasing the numbers of animals. Formerly beef cattle were matured in their fourth, fifth and sixth year. They are now placed in the market in their first, second or third year.

The increase in the size of horses has given double or treble the power for farm work over what it used to be 50 or 100 years ago. The increased production of butter fat per cow which has occured in the past half century has been the same as trebling the herd output without increasing the number of dairy cows. One cow is now worth three average cows of 50 years ago. There is on record a yield from 10 cows equalling the production of 100 ordinary cows. In our poultry years over 300 eggs a year are not unusual. This is easily six times what it used to be before hens were selected on account of their egg-laying ability. Possibilities for improvement along all lines are unlimited. Which class will you help to improve further?

Balancing His Basic Income--- By Biedermann

The Agricultural Return for 1924 Was Sufficient to Bring a Satisfied Smile to Uncle Sam's Face, the First in a Number of Years.

Cut Loss Due to Hog Mites

MANGE MITES cause considerable loss to hog growers. In addition to being an irritation to hogs, resulting in unthriftiness, the mites damage the hams, bacons and picnics. The United States Department of Agriculture estimates that 40 per cent of the hogs of South Dakota were affected last Winter. The loss runs into many hundreds of thousands of dollars annually in the regions where hogs are affected.

Treatment consists in the application of various simple remedies, ranging from mixtures of kerosene and lard to specially prepared mite-control dips. The hogs may be treated by hand applications, hog oilers, medicated hog wallows, or by dipping. In treating, the whole herd is to be included. Hog wallows answer the purpose best for small expenditure of time, labor and money. Crude oil is a good remedy.

Dewberry Canes' Care

IF YOU live in a Northern State and have in your garden a few canes of that trailing blackberry known as the dewberry, it is desirable that you cover the canes for Winter protection. In New York the growers permit the weeds to remain in the patch and in Michigan they cover the canes with refuse material. In the South Winter protection is not necessary but growers remove all canes but one, old and new, as soon as the crop is picked. North Carolina is a leading State for this crop and the growers have acquired great skill in using special methods of training and cultivating the plants. Large applications of fertilizer are made in the early Spring and in mid-Summer immediately after the canes are cut out. The one remaining cane is trained to a tall stalk.

More Soy Beans

THE Federal Crop Reporting Board states that the acreage given to soy beans is now over 500,000 acres in the United States, the increase for 1924 being 25 per cent more than in 1923. Missouri shows an increase of 50 per cent, Alabama and Iowa of 40 per cent, Indiana and Michigan of 25 per cent, Illinois of 20 per cent, Ohio of 18 per cent, and Kentucky and Tennessee of 10 per cent.

The leading soy bean State at the present time is North Carolina, where a slight decrease in production has been noted. General increases were noted in all of the Gulf States. Cow peas show a total acreage of 1,000,000 acres, and of velvet beans of 600,000,000 acres. The velvet bean is a Southern crop exclusively.

Crop Survey and Farm Income Show Good Outlook

IN his report for the year 1924, the Secretary of Agriculture summarized a gain of a half billion dollars in value of farm products over 1923 and of a billion and a half over 1922. The Secretary says that further recovery is required to bring agriculture back to its pre-war condition but, on the whole, it is in the best position it has been since the period of depression began." Since the secretary made his report the upturn of crop and livestock prices has continued, still lessening the spread between the prices of things that farmers have to sell and the prices of the things they have to buy.

The improvement over last year is very marked in some states, although in other states it is about the same as last year and in some states it is not quite so good. The states showing the greatest improvement are North Dakota, where the gross cash income increased 60 per cent. Georgia had a gain of 45 per cent, Arkansas of 30 per cent, Oklahoma of 30 per cent, Kansas 29 per cent and Mississippi of 26 per cent. Other states showing gains are Alabama, New Mexico, Montana, South Dakota, Nebraska, Colorado, Tenessee, and Virginia, ranging from gains of 8 per cent up to 25 per cent. States showing slight gains of 2 to 5 per cent are Arizona, Missouri, Minnesota, Iowa, New York, Massachusetts, New Jersey and Maryland. A few states experienced slight losses over last year, but as a whole there is a decided gain for the whole country.

The Secretary points out that wheat states fared the best, that the larger cotton yield is somewhat compensating the smaller price a pound, with the sheepmen in a much more favorable position than cattle and hog producers, although better prices for hogs are improving that situation somewhat, and the considerable decrease in pigs farrowed last spring and this fall suggesting much better prices for 1925. Wool prices are about double the 1913 level. In dairying the markets have been unsettled, due to large increase in milk production in this country and to a firmer production in those countries upset by war. The Secretary cautions dairymen to keep an eye on the foreign situation and not to increase the number of milk cows above requirements, which is now the case.

The general improved agricultural tone does not mean that agriculture is done with the troubles of the depression period. But things are heading to a better position.

Taxes are burdensome, harder on the farmer than on any other class, and need to be lowered. Crop production must be kept within bounds, otherwise crop prices will drop below their near parity with urban-made things. Many farmers are in debt because they borrowed money to meet taxes and current costs in the earlier depression period. But everything points to the continuance of strong farm prices for most farm products — to still higher prices for many of them. And the debts are being paid off!

How a Wool-Marketing Pool Was Made to Pay Profits

WHEN certain Ohio wool growers decided to build up an organization to market the wool crop of the state there were many skeptics who said it could not be done. But last year the pool sold over 4,000,000 pounds of wool at a cost for country loading, sacks, storage, commission, insurance, grading and labor of only 2¾ cents a pound. Under ordinary methods of individual effort these costs amount to 10 cents a pound—here a saving of several cents a pound—all of which goes to the producer.

The wool association which conducts the pool maintains warehouses at Columbus, O., and Wheeling, W. Va., and growers from Ohio, Indiana, Michigan and West Virginia consign their wool clips to the pool. Last year only one-half of the Ohio wool crop was marketed through the pool, but the success was so marked that a great many more growers have joined. The wool crop last year was sold in 88 sales to 39 mills in eight states at an average price of 50.6 cents a pound.

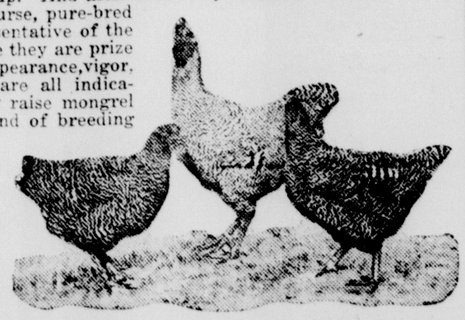

Individual grading reports are sent to each grower and the association pays direct to each member consigning wool. In case a grower wants an advance on his wool he is sent a check for 75 per cent of the current value and is charged 5 per cent interest. Last year about half a million dollars were so used, the money being borrowed by the association on warehouse receipts. The sales are made throughout the year, the wool not being dumped on the market all at once after the shearing season is over, the usual custom in so many wool sections. As a rule, the pool farmers realized from 5 to 10 cents a pound more than their neighbors who marketed through local buyers.

Since the Ohio association has legal standing and experience back of it, loyalty of members and an abundance of financial support, it is destined to become the market channel for the greater part of the wool crop of the state. Those interested in this movement should get in touch with the Ohio organization through the County Farm Bureau Association.

You Can Hatch Birds Like These

IN the United States more than one hundred varieties of domestic fowl have been recognized as standard breeds. These have been classified in various ways—as fancy or practical; for meat or eggs; as to place of origin, and ornamental. Some of these came from the Far East, many from Europe and less than a dozen have been developed as American breeds. The most popular of the American classes is the Plymouth Rock.

The trio pictured here belong to the barred variety of the Plymouth Rock group. And aristocrats they are, too. They are prize winners, and, of course, pure-bred and perfectly representative of the race. You will agree they are prize specimens—their appearance, vigor, striking markings, are all indications of that. Why raise mongrel stock of any old kind of breeding when noble birds like these may be had from eggs alone? Choose a breed you like and start toward pure-breds this very year. But don't forget, the time for deciding is here.

How an Old Field Was Made Into a Profitable Enterprise

Scrub Trees Were Dug Out and Legumes Plowed Under! Added Humus and Nitrogen. Then Mineral Fertilizers and Crop Rotations Did the Rest.

By CHARLES W. BURKETT

Famous Agricultural Author and Editor of Farm Life Extension Service.

SEVERAL years ago there fell to my care a Southern farm of several hundred acres. Considerable cotton, some corn and various forage crops occupied our cultivation attention. The price of cotton was advancing, due to the fight the boll weevil was putting up; and, as things then looked, an era for better cotton prices was making its appearance. But I realized that if we were to succeed in the way I wanted to succeed it would be necessary to build up the land.

Not being in a naturally fertile section, scrub oaks and scrub pine were the only trees of any consequence on this farm. They had sprung up on old land that had previously been abandoned because the soil was too poor to grow a crop. In these young scrub trees it was still poor. I could see no value in the trees and we needed more land. One Winter I decided to dig these trees out by the roots on an area consisting of approximately 35 acres.

HARD, GRUELING WORK.

Labor costs were much cheaper in those days, but so were cotton prices. The land was cleared at a cost of $12 an acre. It would cost twice that to-day, but cotton fetches twice what it did at that time. So the same comparison holds. When the old trees were cut into wood and the stumps hauled out to be burned later we began plowing. I want to assure you it was not a Summer picnic to do this work. There were some roots into which the plows struck and there were stump holes that tried the temper of the boys doing the plowing. We didn't cover the regulation area that a good plowman is supposed to do in a day.

After that work of plowing had been ended we were not long deciding that cow-peas were to be the first crop to be put to work in this field. Accordingly, when the time arrived the cow-peas were planted. An application of acid phosphate and Kainit at the rate of 250 pounds an acre was used. The soil was poor enough to warrant a larger application. The peas that Summer made only a moderate growth. That Fall this crop was plowed under and Winter oats seeded in the ground. The crop was not much and the next Spring was plowed under. Cow-peas were planted again. This time the growth was so good we could not bring ourselves to plow it under. However, I have since cleared up old land and have turned under the second cow-pea crop as was done with the first.

HOW FIELD HAS REPAID.

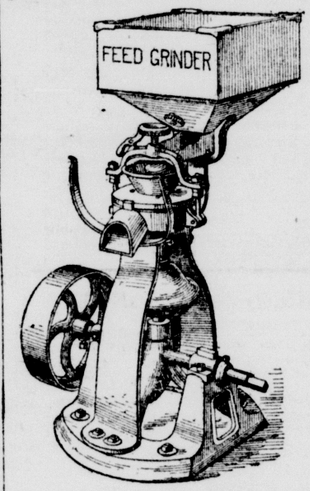

The second year after the peas were off, the soil was plowed and oats seeded again. That crop was made into oat hay. Its much better yield clearly showed we were succeeding in building up that land. From that time on that old field has given a good account of itself. It has been in cotton several times, but always in a rotation with cow-peas or crimson clover. It has discharged that original grubbing and improving cost many times over.

When we started the work our old foreman argued against doing what we did. He said we simply could not restore that old field. Later he begged to have charge of the first cotton crop grown on the field. Possibly he gave the field a little extra care, but it was the best cotton crop that year in the whole neighborhood. The moral of this experience is that any old land can be restored to productivity by rotations and legumes.

Shall Grain Be Ground

GRAIN feeds are most digestible when ground. Corn, oats, wheat, cotton seed, and other grains often are so hard that if passed into the stomach without thorough mastication the digestive juices fail in their duty. But it does not follow that it is good business management at all times to grind the grains consumed on the farm.

Experiments show that when corn, for instance, is ground the feeding returns are increased from 8 to 15 per cent; yet the labor of hauling to and from the mill, or grinding the grain at home, may cause a cost expense greater than the returns obtained, thus entailing a loss in the end. The custom of following cattle and horses with pigs to pick up the undigested grain or other food is both wise and profitable, and satisfactorily solves the problem of whether the corn grain is to be ground.

There are certain grains that may be handled best by grinding because of the commercial value of the oil contained therein, such as flaxseed, from which is made linseed meal, and cotton seed from which is made cotton seed meal; soy beans, peanuts and still other grains often are ground and pressed, yielding both oil and meal. On the farm soy beans are usually ground because of their hardness. Grinding is therefore an individual problem and if time, labor and power are available it is worthwhile to grind the hard grains.

Place for Turkey Nest

ONE of the best places for turkey nests is in the orchard. An old barrel makes a good nest. Place it in some out of the way corner, tipping the open end up slightly so that water may not run in the barrel. For nesting material use leaves, hay or straw in sufficient quantity that the eggs will not be broken.

Walks and Talks On the Farm

Proper Plays for Rural People

WHAT is doing much in socializing the farm and adding to the enjoyment of rural living is the presentation of clean and wholesome plays that portray country life in its true meaning rather than shame rural folk by ludicrous caricature, so common on the city stage. Play acting had its origin in country environment, treating of the production of food, and the ceremonies of agricultural rites. As time passed on the grouping of people into towns and cities favored the development of the theatre, and made play writing and play acting a useful expression of action and art.

It was in America that the rude, crude "rube" plays had their beginning. Possibly this type of play has done more to take the farm boy and girl from the farm to the cities than any other single thing in social life. These plays were never true to life, never sincere, never honorable. They were acted to make cheap laughs. At their best they were vulgar and coarse, the outpourings of ignorance and snobbery. There is no more ludicrous example of the rube than the city rube. Out in the country these rubes are the most pitied examples of human life.

Fortunately for art, for the theatre and for the race, a great change from this hollow witticism of farm crudeness is under way. No longer is the simple rube or hayseed type of former days now held up on the stage as a type of the farm. Theatregoers know better. More worthy is the writing of plays that sympathetically and honestly define country folk in the enrivonment of country living and in sentiment of country ideals and aspirations. The springing up of country theatres in all parts of the land tells these facts more emphatically than words.

A new style of play is here for country audiences. The city-made play, like the city-made school books is passing. When some years ago there was published a three-act play called "Between Two Lives," there was ushered in a new form of drama and a new era of play acting for dramatic expression in the country that has had already far-reaching results. It is now possible for every community to have its dramatic club for the entertainment of its own people, enterpreting the life and manners of farm people and leading to the elevation, farm contentment and the glory of the farm home. God speed the coming of amateur dramatic clubs and of country-life plays.—C. W. B.

The foreign work of the International Committee of Young Men's Christian association is now established in 18 foreign countries, with 384 associations and 125,000 members.

George Eastman has made an additional gift of $12,500,000 to educational institutions, including the Tuskegee and Hampton schools for Negroes, the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and Rochester university.

Week-day classes in religion at Kansas City this year have 10,000 pupils. This is believed to be the largest week-day enrollment in any city. In a parade of the week day church school recently, five thousand pupils and teachers were in line.

A new church building has just been completed at Carlinville, Louisiana, for the only leper congregation in the United States.

Maine, Delaware and Kentucky have passed laws this year requiring the Bible to be read in the public schools. Similar laws have been in force in Alabama, Georgia, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Tennessee.

The unification of churches in Canada has made one body of all Methodist branches, one body of all Presbyterians, and now plans are complete for the merging of the Presbyterian and Methodist bodies with the Congregational church. The date of this culmination is fived for June 10, 1925 and the name of the merged bodies is to be the Protestant Church of Canada.

What is to be known as the Michigan Religious school is to open next fall at Ann Arbor, Mich., under the direction of Dr. Alfred H. Lolyd, dean of the graduate school of the University of Michigan. The new institution has a three-year endowment of $25,000 a year to start its career.

The Presbyterian church of Grove City, Pa., has more tithers than any other congregation in the country. Nearly every one in the church gives one-tenth of his income to the Lord's work. There are over 100 checking accounts in the Grove City banks which are drawn on for nothing but payments to Christian benevolences. The parish finds that it has more money than it can possibly spend on itself. Last year it gave $32,000 to outside causes and spent $15,000 on its own upkeep.

Washington is to have the largest Catholic church in the country. It will have a campanille 335 feet high, and the dome will be 204 feet in height with a roof of gold. The three apses of the crypt will be the shamrock formation "to commemorate the strong faith in God and the tender love for Mary bestowed on Ireland through this glorious symbol of the Blessed Trinity." Just what this last quotation means or what Ireland has to do with Washington is not altogether clear.

Herewith is solution to puzzle No 71:

How to Solve Puzzle.

The best way to solve this cross-word puzzle is to run over the list of horizontal and vertical synonyms in search of evident or "easy" words. If horizontal, the word you are looking for must extend crosswise from the number to the first shaded stop on the right; if vertical, it must extend downward from the number to the first shaded stop below. When finished, the words should read equally well crosswise and downward.

LIVE QUESTIONS FOR DISCUSSION

ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

The last Judgment (Matt. 25:31—46) for Sunday, January 11.

1. What were the circumstances under which Jesus gave this description of the last judgment.?

2. What led the Lord to adopt the title 'Son of Man?'

3. What is our duty as Christians if there is to be the division suggested in this lesson?

4. What kind of a world would result if there were in it no judgment?

Is there a guide-line in Jesus' teaching by which we may know when a deed of kindness is done unto Christ?

6. To what extent does the whole order of the present world call for a final day of judgment.

7. Where is the best place to begin the "inasmuch" program of this lesson? Can you pass the "inasmuch" test?

Clerieus says: Dr. MacLaren suggests that the danger in the study of this judgment scene is that we will forget our own individual share in it: "Better to burn in our hearts the thought, 'I shall be there' than to lose the solemn impression in efforts to unravel the difficulties of the passage."

Some one has said that in heaven we shall have three surprises: We shall miss some whom we expected to see there; we shall see there some whom we did not expect to see; and we shall be surprised, most of all, to discover ourselves there.

Lesson Prayer.

O blessed Christ, the moment we see a great picture we are judged. The moment we hear great music we are judged. The moment a great book is in our hands we are judged. And the moment we stand in thy presence, there is a scrutation of judgment. We do thank thee for thy plain clear teachings upon the great questions that effect our life here and hereafter. We thank thee for always bringing us face to face with questions of life and conduct. May we not only enter into the inheritance prepared for us from the foundation of the world, but lose no opportunity to lead others into that same inheritance of joy and blessedness. In thy dear name. Amen.

SUFFERED AFTER BIRTH OF BABY

Trouble Caused by Getting Up Too Soon. Relieved by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Talcville, New York.—"I thought it would interest you to know what benefit I have derived from taking your medicine. A few days after the birth of my third child I got up too quick. Then just before my fifth child was born I had inflammation of the bladder and displacement. Seeing your advertisement in a Liverpool (England) paper I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and that was the best confinement I had. Whenever I feel rundown I always take the Vegetable Compound as a tonic. We have just removed from Brockville (Canada) so I was pleased when the store ordered the medicine for me and I got it today. I would not be without it for any price and I recommend it to ladies around here because I feel so sure it will benefit any woman who takes it."—Mrs. AGNES WIGNALL, Talcville, New York.

Women can depend upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to relieve them from ills peculiar to their sex. For sale by druggists everywhere.

"NORTH OF 36" HERE MONDAY

True Screenplay of Pioneer Days Comes to Ceramic.

North of 36," by Emerson Hough, depicting all the thrills and hardships of pioneer days on the Texas cattle ranges, has been filmed for Paramount by Irvin Willat, who made the natural-color picture, "Wanderer of the Wasteland" and other classics.

"North of 36" is a tale of the Texas cattle trail, picturing a country wild, almost lawless, at the period of the story, roughened and disheartened by the recent Civil War.

Lois Wilson, as Taisie Lockhart manager of her own vast ranch in Texas, finds herself penniless, with no means of disposing of her herds, her chief asset being the true spirit of the pioneers.

Word comes that way up "north of 36," a market beckons. With her 4,500 cows, 16 cow hands, 19 kinds of rifles and six shooters and 115 cow ponies, Taisie makes the start with all the thrills that the start of the wagon train in Emerson Hough's "The Covered Wagon" evolvd.

Through this great panorama one sees groups of ragged sinewy men, the glorious girl at their head, the ox-carts and the sea of long horned cattle, accomplishing one of the greatest deeds of pioneer bravery and daring.

Paramount has furnished a notable cast to visualize the story. It includes Jack Holt, Ernest Torrence, Lois Wilson and Noah Beery in featured roles. The picture opens a four days' run Monday at the Ceramic theatre. It's a colorful page from the history of the United States, a second "Covered Wagon!"

Stop in any day at noon and join the Union Christmas Club. —Adv.

STOMACH UPSET?

Get at the Real Cause—Take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets.

That's what thousands of stomach sufferers are doing now. Instead of taking tonics, or trying to patch up a poor digestion, they are attacking the REAL cause of the ailment—clogged liver and disordered bowels.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets arouse the liver in a soothing, healing way. When the liver and bowels are performing their natural functions, away goes indigestion and stomach troubles.

Have you a bad taste, coated tongue, poor appetite, a lazy, don't-care feeling, no ambition or energy, trouble with undigested foods? Take Olive Tablets the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil. You will know them by their olive color. They do the work without griping, cramps or pain.

Take one or two at bedtime for quick relief. Eat what you like. 15c and 30c.

Mothers, give your son — your daughter plenty of nature's healthful drink—milk.

It is the delightful daily glasses of creamy milk that build vigorous bodies—that give children the necessary food to create bone and muscle.

City milk is pure—rich in body building substances—its the milk that children thrive and grow on. Order an extra bottle a day of City milk for the children.

Runyon Says

Dr. Fralick Has Curious Hobby.
He Mends the Boxers' "Bad Hands.
He Repaired "Punch'em's" Punch-
Also Fixed Up the Panther's Paws.
Damages Due to Improper Hitting.

By DAMON RUNYON.
(Copyright, 1925, by International (Feature Service.)

DR. W. G. FRALICK, famous New York surgeon, has a little hobby.

This hobby is mending the damaged hands of boxers.

Dr. Fralick's specialty is abdominal surgery. His skill in that line is eagerly sought, he is a very busy man. He turns to the repairing of boxers' hands almost as a relaxation, a diversion.

But there is another reason which developed during a talk this reporter had with Dr. Fralick not long ago. It is a philanthropic phase, a nice little sidelight on the character of the doctor.

You should see him. He is a powerfully built man, with a heavy shock of iron gray hair. He is gruff, abrupt, commanding. You feel instinctively that he knows his business thoroughly.

"I've always been more or less interested in boxing just a sport," said Dr. Fralick. "I think that in most cases it develops the young fellows engaged in it, physically and otherwise. But for boxing they might be doing far worse things.

"Now then, a lot of them sustain injuries especially to their hands. These are the tools of their trade. Without them the boxers are helpless. Many a promising young career has been ruined by damage that might easily have been repaired, and I feel that in doing the work for the lads I may be helping them to better themselves in the world."

Dr. Fralick now produced a big bundle of X-ray photographs of hands he has mended, hands belonging to some of the most noted fighters of the day.

These photos, ghostly, shadowy, showed the nature of the different injuries. The human hand is a fragile, intricate structure. A watchmaker, probing the works of the most delicate timepiece probably has an easy task compared to that of a doctor mending an injured hand.

Here was an x-Ray photo of the hands of Harry Wills, "The Brown Panther of New Orelans." Wills' hands were for years notoriosly "bad" They had grown brittle in his long service in the ring. Some months ago he sustained a broken bone in one hand while working in the gymnasium.

Dr Fralick operated on the hand and Wills has since fought Bartley Madden and Luis Angel Firpo, using the mended hand in both fights as effectively as if it had never been injured.

Tony Vaccarelli, sparring partner of Johnny Dundee, the resigned featherweight champion, and for a time accounted one of the most promising featherweights in the game, came in while Dr. Fralick was explaining the Wills X-ray.

"Here's a young fellow who has made poor showing in his last couple of fights," said Dr. Fralick, turning to Vaccarelli. "They say he is going back, that he is about through. That's nonsense. He hasn't even started. Let me show you Tony's trouble."

The young boxer bared his left arm, disclosing an angry looking sore on the elbow. The doctor picked up another X-ray print and held it to the light.

"There!" he said, "That's Tony's elbow."

He indicated some shadowy tracings.

"That's loose bone," he said. "How could you expect a boy to box with his arm in this condition. He shouldn't have been permitted in the ring. Whenever he tries to punch with that arm he is bound to feel a sharp pain, and involuntarily he drops his arm."

Yes, sir, that's right," averred Tony. "That's just the way I do."

An X-ray of Jack Delaney's hand was next.

Delaney for a long time was practically out of the game. His right hand was "gone," and that was his best punching hand.

Dr.Fralick performed a most intricate operation on the hand, building up a new knuckle, and on his first appearance after the operation Delaney astounded the boxing world by knocking out the great Paul Berlenbach.

Berlenbach has been one of Dr. Fralick's patients. The famous puncher broke his right hand some time ago, and Dr. Fralick mended it, and sent him back to the ring, his punch unimpaired.

Dr. Fralick performed a remarkable operation on Jack Zivic, the Pittsburgh welterweight, until recently a contender for the lightweight title.

This was early in Zivic's pugilistic career, after he had shown great promise in the amateurs and in his first professional battles. His right arm would become unjointed at the shoulder in a peculiar manner, and there seemed little chance that it could be permanently adjusted.

Zivic was about to abandon the ring when Dr. Fralick got hold of him. After the operation Zivic not only went back to fighting, but showed better form than ever. He has not since had any trouble with the shoulder.

Some of the fighters whose hands have been repaired by Dr. Fralick are:

Louis Kaplan, featherweight, from Meriden, Conn.

Lee Anderson, colored light heavyweight.

Jess Smithh, Bayonne middleweight.

Jamaica Kid, colored heavyweight.

Bob Martin, former heavyweight champion of the A. E. F.

High School Passers Lose Two Contests At Warren

Two Extra Periods Tacked On to End Final Game, 39-38

Girls Come Out on Short End of 30-25 Score in Fast Engagement; Field Goal by Lanky Warren Center Ends Rough and Tumble Battle.

East Liverpool high school basketeers will face the strong Bethany college Freshman five tonight on the local floor in a condition that is slightly the worse for wear as a result of their rough and tumble contest last night on the Warren floor which they lost, 39 to 38, in a clash that required two extra five-minute periods. The local girls also were defeated, 30 to 25.

The diminutive Tom Pusey, forward, is suffering from a wrenched knee, Forward McKeever has a bruised eye, and Guard Dale Liebschner is in a similar condition.

Pusey was thrown, accidentally, into the wall under his basket as he was cutting for a shot. However, he as well as the others, will be on deck for the contest tonight which will be preceded by a prelim between the high school reserves and the Newell high school squad, at 7 o'clock.

Coach O. V. Boone is not just sure yet how the squad lost, unless, he opines, they were talked out of it when he wasn't looking.

After a hectic battle that gave Warren fans one of the greatest floor exhibitions they have seen for a long time, the regulation period of play ended with the score standing 32-32.

The extra period got under way. English caged the ball for a field goal. The Warren squad tallied two points and then English slipped in another. He was fouled on the throw, but the toss went through the hoop. The period ended and the locals were leaving the floor, believing the game was over. They were called back and notified an extra period had been called and that the score was 34 to 34. They were informed that English's last field goal did not count. The reason has not yet been learned.

Anyway, the Blue and White resumed hostilities with everything they had in three more minutes had piled up four more points.

Warren passers cut loose at this stage with a foul, added a field goal and another for a one-point victory. The final field goal was made from a toss-up near the basket between little Tom Pusey, who at this particular instance, didn't have the remotest chance of touching the ball, and the lanky Warren center, Myers.

The lineup:

E. L. Girls—25		Warren Girls—30

Nebraskan Claiming Pacific Coast Title

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 10—Ace Hudkins, hard-hitting lightweight of Nebraska, today claimed the Pacific Coast lightweight title as a result of his ten-round bout in Hollywood last night in which the Nebraskan gave Tommy Carter, of Los Angeles, so-called Pacific Coast champion, a pretty pasting.

Carter was all but knocked out in the sixth round and Hudkins took all of the remaining rounds.

Last Night's Fights

AT NEW YORK—Jack Bernstein, Yonkers, junior lightweight, won a decision from Tommy O'Brien, Milwaukee, in ten rounds; Busky Graham, Utca, knocked out Nat Pincus, of Brooklyn in the eighth round; Harold Smith, Chicago, won a decision from Jackie Snyder, Brooklyn, ten rounds; Johnny Bresline, New York, defeated Johnny Green, New York, six rounds.

At Minneapolis — Pete Sarmiento, Manila, outpointed Eddie Anderson, Chicago, ten rounds; Roscoe Hall, Des Moines, shaded Sammy Leonard, Minneapolis, eight rounds; Nick Olivia, Albert Lea, Minnesota, and Mickey Cone, St. Paul, draw, six rounds.

W. V. U. TACKLES VETERAN QUINT FROM ALLEGHENY

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Jan. 10—A court battle of no little importance will be fought here tonight when the West Virginia University and Allegheny College fives clash on the "Ark" floor. Considerable interest is also being shown in the preliminary game between the Potomac State School and West Virginia freshman quints. The first event of the evening's program will start at 7:00 p. m.

After watching the Mountaineers win from Salem College by only a six-point margin and down Waynesburg College with but eight points to spare West Virginia fans are convinced that nothing except a general improvement will enable Captain Hawley and his cohorts to win from the veteran quint from Meadville, Pa.

Last night, the Allegheny team in the University of Pittsburgh at Pittsburgh. Games with Pitt and West Virginia on successive nights would be a hardship on a younger team but the Allegheny five is composed of experienced players and Coach C. D. Baker will have his team at the top of its form for tomorrow's battle. Captain Judd, center; Ross and McClurg, forwards; and Wolfe, guard, all veterans, will make a determined fight in order to wipe out the two defeats sustained in tilts with the Mountaineers last winter. The fifth member of the invading outfit, Rhodes, a guard, is also a holdover from the 1924 squad.

"Wonder" High School Team Wins 150 Games

PASSAIC, N. J., Jan. 10. — The Passaic high school basketball team won its 150th consecutive game here by defeating the Arlington (Mass.) high school team, 73 to 33.

Two thousand persons saw the "wonder team" stretch its string of consecutive victories to the century and a half mark. Rohrback, lanky center of the Passaic team, was the individual star of the game, scoring 24 of his team's points, 20 of them from the field. Adams followed him closely for individual honors with 22 points, scoring 11 field goals. The entire second team was used by the Passaic coach in the second half. Marsters and J. Lane, of the Arlington team, counted for 28 of their team's 33 total.

Yanks Trade Mamaux To Minneapolis Club

NEW YORK, Jan. 10—Al. Mamaux, of the Yankees, has been released to Minneapolis of the American Asoociation.

Mamaux flashed brilliantly with Pittsburgh for a few seasons, particularly in 1915 when he won 21 and lost 8 games, aollowing a little more than 2 earned runs per 9 innings. He slipped in 1917 and was traded to Brooklyn, but proved disappointing there. The Yankees secured his service from Reading in the International league in 1924.

Ordinance is Sold.

NEW YORK, Jan. 10—Ordinance, $150,000 colt owned by the estate of the late Major August Belmont, late chairman of the jockey club, has been sold to Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney and will be retired to the stud, it was learned today. The price was not disclosed.

NURMI TAKES ON BIG TASK

Series of Hard Races Scheduled for Finn.

By Davis J. Walsh.

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—While the general excitement is at its height and the question of the hour is whether the gentleman in question eats fish for breakfast and keeps that school girl complexion with Shinola, it might be mentioned that Paavo Nurmi may be riging for a fall. He has allowed himself to be inveigled into accepting invitations by the carload lots and somewhere along the general right of way, it is possible that an American crowd will watch him run second, behind some worthy young man, present identity unknown.

This stunning event may happen no later than a week or ten days from this moment. On Thursday night next, he will go to the post at Madison Square Garden against a plausible field in a 3,000-metre run. The distance has been shortened from two miles at Nurmi's request, although it is fact, not fancy, that he can run any distance from a quarter of a mile to ten, faster than any man the world has known. It might appear from this that Nurmi sees something coming.

Two days later he is to step out in a special mile-and-a-quarter race at the Illinois A. C. games, Chicago. The distance was increased the extra two furlongs, also at Nurmi's request. He evidently has no intention of trying to repeat his Olympic program, in which he ran and won races at 1,500, 3,000, 5,000 and 10,000 meters with heats, in the space of one week. The distances he will run at the two meets are not markedly dissimilar.

The reason is not far to seek. Nurmi has realized within the last 48 hours that he has bitten off a lumberjack's mouthful in agreeing to run a hard race here on Thursday night, climb aboard an outgoing train and compete again in Chicago within 48 hours. In the latter race he must step out against Joie Ray, among others, and that young man is likely to be several strides faster than he was on the occasion of Nurmi's American debut on Tuesday night last. Ray frankly admitted he was about a week away from top form before this race, yet he ran 414, his fastest mile. Joie will be waiting for Paavo.

This effusion, however, must not be confused with a clarion call for volunteer pallbearers. If Nurmi were to run in his native element of the outdoor cinder path, the writer would back him to win against the field every time out, but the Finn will find conditions varying with every race he runs indoors.

ELECTRIC SCORE BOARD PROPOSED FOR HIGH "GYM"

The proposed erection of an electrically operated scoreboard, together with the installation of an improved lighting system will make the local high school gymnasium one of the most advanced courts of its kind in the state, if the planned improvements are successfully negotiated.

Coach O. V. Boone is now communicating with scoreboard supply firms, if such a contrivance can be placed in operation at a reasonable cost, it will be done.

A scoreboard such as Boone has in mind, is operated by the head timer and scorer. It is designed to show at any stage of the game how much time, has been played and how much more remains, the name of the players and substitutions, the running score, and in fact, all the important things there are to know. Such a device would be given a hearty welcome by fans.

It would be erected on the east wall of the gymnasium. However, it is not at all certain yet.

BILL WATKINS TO WORK OPENER FOR BUFFALOES

Bill Watkins, East Liverpool's cage expert, will referee the Bethany-Waynesburg tilt tonight at Irvin gym, Bethany. The game will be the first regular engagement of the season for the Bisons, and the second for Waynesburg.

The past record of the two squads gives Bethany eight victories and Waynesburg two.

The probable lineup:

Waynesburg.		Bethany.
Minor	F.	Ryan
Olmstead	F.	Herman
Willis	C.	Carey
Welch	G.	Shoemake
Irvin	G.	Hanna

GREB IS VICTOR OVER BOB SAGE IN TEN ROUNDS

DETROIT, Jan. 10.—Harry Greb, middleweight champion of the world, was awarded the decision over Bob Sage; Detroit, at the end of their 10-round bout last night. Sage took the first two rounds by boring in, but Greb held the edge from the third round on. Greb was aided in a weight advantage of approximately ten pounds and was permitted to hit and hold at the same time by Referee Al. Foss, of Pittsburgh. Billy Petersen, Detroit middleweight, knocked out Frankie Brennan in the Fifth round. Joe McKean easily defeated Bobby Swarts.

Bernstein Conquers O'Brien in New York

NEW YORK, Jan. 10—Jack Bernstein of Yonkers, formerly junior lightweight champion, swarmed all over Tommy O'Brien of Milwaukee in a ten round bout at Madison Square Garden last night and won the referee's decision. Not once did he allow O'Brien, a dangerous hitter, to set himself for a "haymaker."

Busky Graham, Utica's contender for bantamweight honors, knocked out Nat Pincus of Brooklyn in the eighth round of a sensational fight featured by Pincus' gameness.

Harold Smith of Chicago, who is making a bid for the bantamweight Jackie Snyder of Brooklyn in ten rounds.

BIG TEN FLOOR HOSTILITIES TO START TONIGHT

CHICAGO, Jan. 10—The big ten race for basketball championship will get under way tonight with eight contenders for the title in the race. Michigan, Minnesota and Ohio State rule favorites in tonight's games, having done as well in their pre-season showings as any of the Western conference teams. The Buckeyes meet Indiana at Columbus, Minnesota battles Wisconsin at Minneapolis and Michigan takes on the battered Purdue five at Ann Arbor.

The fourth game is between Chicago and Illinois on the Maroons' floor. The Maroons will be handicapped by the ineligibility of Babe Alyes and the Illini are favored to win.

New Athletic Head.

OTTAWA—A. J. Stackstader, Dayton, will succeed H. L. Dowler who has resigned after serving since the opening of school last fall as director of athletics in Leipsic high school. Dowler will manage a large dairy farm near Lemon City, Fla.

Six hundred former employes of a manufacturer at Edinburgh, Scotland, were among the mourners at his funeral.

OHIO SCHOOLS SEEK LEADER

Will Name Commissioner for Association Members.

Within a few days the board of control of the Ohio High School Athletic association will probably make public the name of the new high commissioner of scholastic athletics in Ohio.

At least half a dozen men, prominetly identified with athletics in this state, are being considered for that position. The appointment was to have been made several days ago, but the man wanted declined.

Ohio will take the lead in high school athletic control with the naming of the commissioner. He will be the supreme judge of high school athletics in Ohio.

Will Settle Disputes.

This will mean a great deal to this state. Most schools in the state today are members of the O. S. H. S. A. A. The commissioner will have control over all the members of this association. There are a few on the black list just now, and some schools not in the association, and these schools will not be recognized by the association.

The association has always stood for high standards, clean athletics, and uniform contracts. It has a long set of rules governing the eligibility of participants in inter-school contests.

The commission, it is planned, will conduct the association for the betterment of high school athletics, and will act as final judge in any big disputes.

Many college associations have followed the lead of the Big Ten in naming commissioners. The Ohio high schools are following this lead. They are on the right track. Rules will be better understood, any professionalism in the bigger schools wil lbe cleaned out if it exists, and in general the situation will be made better.

Gene Tunney, American light-heavyweight champion.

Ed Keeley, Bridgeport heavy.

Phil Krug, Newark middleweight.

Dave Rosenberg, Brooklyn welterweight.

Jack Perry, Pittsburgh, welterweight.

Paul Doyle, Boston welterweight.

Mike McTigue, world's light heavyweight champion.

Also in the list are Vic Borg, Frankie Conifrey, Johnny Green, all of more or less note. He has recently taken charge of Jack Dorval, "The Fisherman," a heavyweight whose promising career has been halted by a broken hand.

The list is given in detail to show the reader to what extent "bad hands" prevail among the professional boxers.

You will observe that in the list are men accounted great boxers, fast, scientific, notably Jeff Smith, Gene Tunney, Mike McTigue and Phil Krug.

Yet "bad hands," as Dr. Fralick told the writer, are commonly due to improper hitting. The boxer gets his hands broken up because he does not first learn how to punch. Perhaps the clever men weakened the structure of their hands before they learned their business.

Another cause, one that could be more easily remedies than the first, is poor bandaging by the second before the boxer goes into the ring.

"The method of bandaging a boxer's hands is almost barbaric," said Dr. Fralick. They haven't changed this method since the earliest days of the glove game, and probably two-thirds of the injured hands can be traced to faulty bandages.

"The boxing authorities have some rather foolish restrictions on bandages. They might well change this rule and permit more scientific bandaging, then we wouldn't have so many injured hands. If a young fellow learns how to strike his blows properly, and has his hands intelligently bandaged, there isn't one chance in a thousand that his hands will be injured.

"But until the youngsters are better schooled, and the bandages properly applied I suppose I'll be adding to this collection of pictures here."

Edinburgh, Scotland, is trying to relieve its traffic congestion.

Keen Repartee Marks Hectic Session at City Hall.

The councilmanic ordinance, "authorizing the appointment of detectives to enforce the prohibition laws," was in effect today following a hectic session of the city council, Friday night, in which verbal clashes predominated.

The measure, declared to be an emergency ordinance, "because of the numerous violations of the prohibition laws which are taking place within the city," was signed by Mayor Charles Brown immediately following the council meeting.

THREE PATROLMEN HERE AID SQUAD IN LIQUOR RAIDS AT WELLSVILLE

Seven Men are Arrested as Dragnet of Sleuths From Steubenville Agency is Spread to Points in Third Street-Broadway District in Neighboring City at Noon.

RAIDERS SEIZE 1,400 GALLONS OF WINE IN PLACES SEARCHED

Seven More Warrants, Based Upon Information Said to Have Been Obtained in Investigation Made Month Ago, Will be Served Before Night —Prisoners Face Mayor Brown.

Armed with warrants issued by Mayor Charles Brown, eight members of the Harris-Webster dectective agency of Steubenville, assisted by three East Liverpool patrolmen swooped down upon Wellsville's alleged liquor violators shortly before noon today, making seven arrests and confiscating approximately 1,400 gallons of illicit liquor, mostly wine.

Warrants for seven other alleged violators will be served early this afternoon. The seven offenders, all foreigners, were brought to the East Liverpool jail and held without bond for a hearing before Mayor Brown at 2 p. m.

Today's raids followed an investigation which started about a month ago. Some of the prisoners were charged with selling, others with possession and in some cases both charges have been filed.

Wellsville police took no part in the clean-up, the investigation being conducted without their knowledge. The raiders came to Wellsville in automobiles.

No Equipment Found.

All warrants were signed by "C. S. Harris," said to be from Steubenville.

The raiding party met with no interference. At one place several foreigners were found, but they made no attempt to halt the special officers in their search. The raiders divided themselves into squads of two and three and descended upon the suspected places.

At one place a man was caught emptying liquor down a sewer. He was arrested, however, before he had disposed of his stock.

In another home the raiders took a pop bottle of whisky which it was claimed was still warm. No equipment, however, was found at any of the places, it was said.

Seven Suspects in Jail.

The prisoners are:

Benny Corbissilio, Main street, near Third street; 350 gallons of wine seized; charged with possessing and selling.

Polovia Brizia, 309 Broadway; 300 gallons of wine, one gallon and one pint bottle of whiskey; charged with possessing and selling.

Pitiable Case in South Broadway Comes to Light.

The furnishings of the room consist of one bed, two chairs, a delapidated stand on which a kerosene lamp rests and a gas stove. The floor is uncarpeted.

For more than two years, the white plague victim has been unable to work because of his illness. Schools to Study Ohio Government on Inauguration Day

In keeping with instructions which have been issued by Vernon M. Riegel, state director of education, pupils in the four upper grades of the East Liverpool elementery schols will devote the first one-half hour period at the beginning of the afternoon session on Monday "to the study of the duties, terms of office and means of election of the various state officials."

Six state officials, elected last November, will take the oath of office at noon Monday. The inaugural ceremonies will be simple and brief.

Mr. Riegel has suggested that the 30-minute instruction in the schools should cover three branches of government—legislative, executive and judicial. Schools having radios will tune in and hear Governor Donahey's message to the legislature.

EIGHT ARE HELD IN RUM PLOT

CLEVELAND, Jan. 10. — Charged with conspiracy to violate the national prohibition law, seven men and a woman were bound over to the grand jury on high bond here today.

Two of the defendants are former prohibition agents, and the woman, Mrs. Jennie Meadows, is said by federal authorities here to be well known in Canton, her home.

Those under arrest are: Patsy Cattalano, Cleveland, former dry agent; Jennie Meadows, North Cherry street, Canton; Joe King, Canton; Morris Bump, Cleveland; Oscar Brandenberg, Cleveland, former dry agent, and Sam Sasks, Cleveland.

Investigation into the alleged conspiracy began November 24, last, when federal prohibition agents followed an automobile from this city to Canon. A liquor delivery was made at Mrs. Meadows' home, it is claimed, which followed in the arrests of Sasks and Bump. Mrs. Bump was also a passenger in the car but was not arrested. Search of the Bump home here revealed a 75-gallon still in operation, officials said.

State Agent Will Not O. K. Hunting License Paper Bill

COLUMBUS, Jan. 10.—State Purchasing Agent Brennan today stood pat on his refusal to pay for the paper in which the 1925 hunting licenses, issued by the state have been printed, pending an adjustment with the company which printed the licenses. Brennen charged that the paper was of such poor quality that copies of the state game laws, printed on the back of each license, blurred so that it was impossible to read them.

PROCEEDS OF ONE YEAR'S CROPS WOULD PAY OFF ALL DEBTS ON FARMS OF COLUMBIANA COUNTY

Were they disposed to do it, the farmers of Columbiana county could, with the proceeds of one year's crops, pay off every dollar of their mortgage debt and other obligations.

While one third of the farms in the county are mortgaged, the total debt represents but 34.7 per cent of the total value of encumbered land and improvements, a situation considered so favorable to farmers that the average interest rate of farm mortgages in the county is but 5.8 per cent.

These interesting facts have been developed by officials of the federal department of Agriculture who have been analyzing census figures in anticipation of making a comparable showing with data that will be obtained in the agricultural enumeration now being taken in Columbiana county.

A recent survey disclosed that of farms operated by owners, reported, slightly less than 1,700 are absolutely free of all debt, while 828 are declared to be security for mortgage liens. This proportion is believed to hold for the county's 3,586 farms.

Mortgage Debt $1,400,000.

The total outstanding mortgage debt of the county is said to be about $1,400,000, while the value of the property encumbered is placed at approximately $4,000,000.

The value of all crops produced annually by Columbiana county farmers is estimated by federal officials at nearly $6,000,000.

Practically one-half of the crop income is produced by cereals, which have an annual value of about $3,000,000. Hay and forage account for nearly $2,000,000 and vegetables $500,00.

All this, of course, is exclusive of the income from dairy and poultry products.

There are in the county over 24,000 dairy cattle, which, with heifers and bulls, are given a value of nearly $1,500,000.

In addition, there are 19,000 swine and 2,000 beef cattle, with a combined value of about $450,000.

120,000 Chickens Sold Annually.

More than a hundred and twenty thousand chickens are sold annually, which, with poultry products, increases the tangible wealth of Columbiana county farmers by $800,000. Even bees, of which there are 869 hives, have an exchange value of about $3,000.

What this means in momentary return is disclosed by a tabulation of the year's products. Milk produced annually aggregates 6,000,000 gallons, about half of which is sold.

The county's farmers annually produce about 700,000 pounds of butter, of which 500,000 pounds are sold. The average output of cheese is only 1,000 pounds a year.

The combined value of dairy products is declared to be about $1,500,000 and the receipts from its sale about $1,300,000.

It is calculated by federal officials that the annual production of each dairy cow in Columbiana county is 435 gallons, which is 18 gallons more than the average for the state of Ohio.

More than 1,000,000 dozen eggs are turned out annually by Columbiana county hens, of which approximately two-thirds go to market.

The value of all poultry produced is something more than $80,000 annually, of which about $600,000 is sold

The sheep industry is not a sideline with Columbiana county farmers, the annual income from this source being $150,000. Bees are not important, the cash value of their activities being estimated at less than a thousand dollars per year.

Farming in Columbiana county is

The furnishings of the room consist of one bed, two chairs, a delapidated stand on which a kerosene lamp rests and a gas stove. The floor is uncarpeted.

For more than two years, the white plague victim has been unable to work because of his illness. Five months ago he became bedfast, but not until this week did physicians announce that he was suffering from tuberculosis. His wife, burdened with the care of her husband, has been unable to work outside the home to assist in supporting the household.

Today's raids followed an investigation which started about a month ago. Some of the prisoners were charged with selling, others with possession and in some cases both charges have been filed.

Wellsville police took no part in the clean-up, the investigation being conducted without their knowledge. The raiders came to Wellsville in automobiles.

No Equipment Found.

All warrants were signed by "C. S. Harris," said to be from Steubenville.

The raiding party met with no interference. At one place several foreigners were found, but they made no attempt to halt the special officers in their search. The raiders divided themselves into squads of two and three and descended upon the suspected places.

At one place a man was caught emptying liquor down a sewer. He was arrested, however, before he had disposed of his stock.

In another home the raiders took a pop bottle of whisky which it was claimed was still warm. No equipment, however, was found at any of the places, it was said.

PROCEEDS OF ONE YEAR'S CROPS WOULD PAY OFF ALL DEBTS ON FARMS OF COLUMBIANA COUNTY

Were they disposed to do it, the farmers of Columbiana county could, with the proceeds of one year's crops, pay off every dollar of their mortgage debt and other obligations.

While one third of the farms in the county are mortgaged, the total debt represents but 34.7 per cent of the total value of encumbered land and improvements, a situation considered so favorable to farmers that the average interest rate of farm mortgages in the county is but 5.8 per cent.

These interesting facts have been developed by officials of the federal department of Agriculture who have been analyzing census figures in anticipation of making a comparable showing with data that will be obtained in the agricultural enumeration now being taken in Columbiana county.

A recent survey disclosed that of farms operated by owners, reported, slightly less than 1,700 are absolutely free of all debt, while 828 are declared to be security for mortgage liens. This proportion is believed to hold for the county's 3,586 farms.

Mortgage Debt $1,400,000.

The total outstanding mortgage debt of the county is said to be about $1,400,000, while the value of the property encumbered is placed at approximately $4,000,000.

The value of all crops produced annually by Columbiana county farmers is estimated by federal officials at nearly $6,000,000.

Practically one-half of the crop income is produced by cereals, which have an annual value of about $3,000,000. Hay and forage account for nearly $2,000,000 and vegetables $500,00.

All this, of course, is exclusive of the income from dairy and poultry products.

There are in the county over 24,000 dairy cattle, which, with heifers and bulls, are given a value of nearly $1,500,000.

In addition, there are 19,000 swine and 2,000 beef cattle, with a combined value of about $450,000.

120,000 Chickens Sold Annually.

More than a hundred and twenty thousand chickens are sold annually, which, with poultry products, increases the tangible wealth of Columbiana county farmers by $800,000. Even bees, of which there are 869 hives, have an exchange value of about $3,000.

What this means in momentary return is disclosed by a tabulation of the year's products. Milk produced annually aggregates 6,000,000 gallons, about half of which is sold.

The county's farmers annually produce about 700,000 pounds of butter, of which 500,000 pounds are sold. The average output of cheese is only 1,000 pounds a year.

The combined value of dairy products is declared to be about $1,500,000 and the receipts from its sale about $1,300,000.

It is calculated by federal officials that the annual production of each dairy cow in Columbiana county is 435 gallons, which is 18 gallons more than the average for the state of Ohio.

More than 1,000,000 dozen eggs are turned out annually by Columbiana county hens, of which approximately two-thirds go to market.

The value of all poultry produced is something more than $80,000 annually, of which about $600,000 is sold

The sheep industry is not a sideline with Columbiana county farmers, the annual income from this source being $150,000. Bees are not important, the cash value of their activities being estimated at less than a thousand dollars per year.

Farming in Columbiana county is

Dr. W. J. Lockhart, Evangelist, Pays Tribute to Motherhood

Twenty-three Respond to Invitation Friday Evening in Church of Christ — "Devils" Subject Tonight.

A tribute to motherhood was paid by Evangelist W. J. Lockhart at Friday night's services in the First Church of Christ. A large delegation of Wellsville church members attended the service.

Twenty-three additions resulted when the invitation was extended. Song Director J. Frank Harbinson, who sang "Keep The Promise Made to Mother," and made a profound impression. The young people's "pep" chorus of 60 voices is adding to the interest of the meetings.

The evangelist will preach on the subject, "Devils," at tonight's service which will be held at the usual hour. A men's meeting has been planned for 3 p. m. Sunday when Dr. Lockhart will speak on the subject, "Men's Sins."

In his sermon on "Mother" last night Dr. Lockhart said:

"You have only one mother, my boy, to pray that in the good way you may stay, who for you won't spare self sacrifice rare, so let us honor that mother always. And you who have mothers still living should count yourself fortunate that you may have the opportunity of sending her a token of love and telling her of this service.

"We naturally think of our mothers as being good and being better than any other woman. God forbid if in this fast jazz age, this age of bridge parties and movies and afternoon matinees and jov rides and cigarette smoking and drinking that the young motherhood of America should lose the respect of their children. But unless some of them are turned back to God and the church and the spiritual life the future of many children will be disastrous.

"Mr. Roosevelt said that the greatest need of this nation was for good mothers. I believe it. In the past five years we have had more difficulty in challenging the attention of the women to the claims of Christ than we have the men. I wonder if the womanhood of America drifted farther off the path of purity and right living during the war than the manhood? The response we get here in the next three weeks to this call to the new Crusade will be the answer the omen of East Liverpool can give to this question.

"And so I bring this tribute of love to my mother and to yours. But to your mothers I want to say that if ever your boy and girl is upheld out of the storms of life and in the midst of temptation by the memory of you it will be because you prove yourself a worthy mother.

"There are three influences that go to make for character. The kind of lives our fathers and mothers lived before we were born, the kind of influence and environments they threw round about us during the early years of our lives and the potentiality or power we have within ourselves to break away from hereditary influences and environment.

"But fathers and mothers two-thirds of the influence that goes to make for the character of your boys and girls is in your own hands. There are children here who want to be Christians and who have joined the church whose parents are holding back. My, for shame. Some of you fathers and mothers whose young people have lost their grip on God are but following your own slothful example."

NEAR EAST DAY SERVICES HERE

Appeals for Relief Will be Made on Sunday.

Near East Relief Sunday will be observed in several of the city's churches tomorrow, when speakers will appeal for funds with which to feed thousands of children in the Palestine country, facing starvation and death from exposure and disease.

The East Liverpool Ministerial association, at a meeting several weeks ago, sanctioned the plan. The Near East relief movement was incorporated by an act of congress several years ago.

First Presbyterian, 11 a. m.—Rev. A. H. Brodie, D. D., who spent several years in Syria.

First Baptist church, 11 a. m.—Dr. Henry A. Tupper, who is connected with the faculty of one of the eastern colleges.

CLEVELAND, Jan. 10. — Under bonds totalling $40,000 on indictments in both the state and federal courts, Josiah Kirby, former president of the $30,000,000 Cleveland Discount Co., here began to fight for time today.

Kirby was indicted in both courts by grand juries charging him with issuing false financial statements and using the mails in a scheme to defraud. His private secretary, Mrs. Meta Kretschman, was arrested on a federal warrant late yesterday, following her refusal to testify before the grand jury. She is charged with conspiracy.

said.

Trial date of Kirby was set for "He was always fair," Mrs. Kirby February 9 in state court, following his surrender to Sheriff Kohler, but this will conflict with the former president's appearance in federal court, Kirby's attorneys contend. They are not fighting for a continuance. Date for trial in federal court has not yet been set.

Kirby's wife, whom he married at the age of 16, and who has stuck with him through two other financial crashes, is "still with him," according to word from Los Angeles.

"Cozy" Dolan, Banished Coach, Has Hazy Memory, Says Landis

CHICAGO, Jan. 10—A. J. "Cozy" Dolan, banished coach of the New York Giants' baseball team, has a hazy memory and three days following the alleged offering of $500 to J. H. Sand, shortstop of the Philadelphia National League team, to "ease up," could not recall that he had ever talked with anybody on the subject. This was shown by Judge K. M. Landis, Commissioner of baseball, following reports just before the world's series of 1924, that such an offer had been made. The report was given out today from Judge Landis' office.

Judge Landis was not in his office when the transcript was given out and it was handed to newspapermen without comment.

The testimony reveals no hint of fresh scandal and actually develops little that has not already become public through rumor.

It is explained that this is the reason for the almost uniform prosperity enjoyed by its farmers over a long period of time.

REPORTS FROM STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—More prominence in the forward movement of prices today was given in the railroad, oil and motor stocks than to the steel stocks and high-priced industrials which have held the center of the stage in the preceding sessions of the week. Except for realizing sales in American Can and a few of the specialty stocks in the first period, buying orders predominated in the early trading and the forward movements in many stocks simply resumed from last night's finishing point.

Impressive ad ances were staged by the mercantile stocks, including Sears, Roebuck, Navy and Montgomery & Ward, the motors under the leadership of General Motors, which reached a new high for the movement at 67½; the equipment, with American Loco at 110½; equivalent to 220 on the 1923 basis of the stock; the rails, with Missouri Pacific preferred and common, Rock Island and New York Central, active and buoyant; the oils, with Atlantic Refining making a new high on the movement at 110½ and the low-priced oils, like Simms, Independent, Shell Union, Marland, California oPte, Invincible, Louisiana Oil and Trans-Continental oil, for nearly a year the undesirables of the speculative movement forging to the front and commanding the best prices of the movement. There was, also, an active market for the better grade of dividend oils, with Pacific Oil, above 56, and in the lead. Simms Pete replaced Invinicible Oil as the leader in the low-priced group, selling above 24 on a heavy turnover.

In point of activity, trading in the first hour today was fully up to the sensational market of last Saturday when the facilities of the exchange were clogged, and traders were practically unable to keep in touch with the movements of prices.

There were some signs of heavyness in the second hour, when industrial and railroad stocks were offered in large volume on week-end profit-taking and stocks, like American Can, Frisco Common, Radio, Reading, etc., which were leaders in the rally on Tuesday and Thursday, dropped back to lower levels.

But strength in the general list showed that many traders were switching to other stocks: showing preference to the oils, in which the volume of trading expanded considerably.

ally, because of ill health, he was forced to quit this job.

When he became bedfast last August two physicians, who examined him, declared he showed no symptoms of tuberculosis and blood tests strengthen their beliefs. Another physician, called in this week, said that Mr. Butler was suffering from tuberculosis, possibly being in the last stages of the disease.

Mr. and Mrs. Butler are the parents of eight children most of whom have grown to manhood and womanhood. Two of the daughters, now married live in Dayton, another resides in Bellaire and a fourth in Chicago. A son, 17 years old, works at Barton. None of the five have been able to offer financial assistance.

Up until a few weeks ago, two sons, 18 and 15 years of age, respectively, resided with their parents here. Both were employed in the potteries, but work slackened and they were able to bring in little money. A few days before Christmas, both left for Dayton, hoping to obtain employment. The youngest member of the family, Paul, nine years of age, has been living in the homes of his married sisters at Dayton, but returned to visit his father and mother during the Christmas holidays. He has not yet returned to Dayton.

"Yes, people have been helping us for weeks," said Mrs. Butler yesterday. "The Salvation Army has been sending groceries and some of the church people have been assisting. We are pretty well supplied with foodstuffs now, but Mr. Butler needs clothes if he goes to a sanatorium."

Rev. B. R. Johnson, of the Church of Christ, and other friends of the family today were taking steps to have Mr. Butler sent to a sanitorium. The patient expressed his willingness to go any place in order to ease the burden on his wife. Since the Red Cross ceased its work here, no organization is in existence which looks after charity cases. The matter will be referred to the county commissioners.

Mrs. Butler will go to Bellaire to live temporarily with her daughter if her husband is placed in a sanatorium. She plans to stay there until her two unmarried sons in Dayton are able to find employment and establish a home for her and their youngest brother, Paul.

"We have been placing our trust in God" said Mrs. Butler yesterday. "He will not let us want."

Rent on the three rooms which the family occupies on Broadway is past due, but an extension has been granted.

The family came to East Liverpool about 10 years ago from Wetzel county—Mr. Butler's former home. For many years Mrs. Butler was interested in the management of a rescue mission which was conducted on south Broadway and Second street.

coming week will be the most active of the show.

The western and southern buyers will not be in the market until next week, and many of them will not arrive in the Pittsburgh and East Liverpool districts until week after next. Many jobbers will be included in these arrivals. The large mail order houses have not been represented in the market up to today.

Will A. Rhoades, formerly of East Liverpool and more recently with the Chelsea China company at New Cumberland, W. Va., and also the Albert Pick company of Chicago, Ill., has become associated with the Jackson China company at Falls Creek, Pa. Mr. Rhoades was retained by this interest following the death of J. C. Jackson and Edward Darden, who were recently shot as they were leaving the plant for noon lunch. Mr. Rhoades, in the yesteryears, was associated with the Knowles, Taylor & Knowles company and the Colonial company of the East Liverpool and also with the Milliken China company of Pittsburgh. He left Pittsburgh to go with the Chelsea at New Cumberland.

Swaney Hall On Job.

Swaney Hall, son of the late John W. Hall of East Liverpool, is in charge of the exhibit of the L. E. Smith Glass Co., of Mt. Pleasant, Pa., and which is being maintained at the Ft. Pitt hotel. When Mr. Hall first became identified with this interest as a salesman, the company manufactured a small line of packers goods. Today, the company is a manufacturer of automobile lenses and a general line of staple items in glassware.

Some talk is heard about the lobby of the Ft. Pitt hotel about confining the annual merchandise event to two weeks, hereafter, instead of three. The subject is to be discussed at the annual meeting of the Association of Glass and Pottery Manufacturers which will be held in the Ft. Pitt perhaps next week.

Pocket Billiard Champion Greenleaf And Actress Wed

NEW YORK, Jan. 10—The carefully guarded, secret marriage of Ralph Greenleaf, national pocket billiard champion, and the Princess Nai Pai Tai, also known as Amelia Ruth Parker, daughter of an English father and Chinese mother, became known here today. They eloped last Saturday to Elkton, Md.

Mrs. Greenleaf, her husband said, is thoroughly Americanized. She has been appearing in vaudeville.

The bride, who has been in Philadelphia, rejoined her husband last night after his victorious contest with Charles Harmon. Greenleaf played one of the best games of his career when he defended his title yesterday, winning by 100 to 61.

Mrs. Greenleaf's father married her mother while in the British diplomatic service. Her parents still reside in China.

Mrs. Beatrice E. Greenleaf, whom the champion divorced on December 22 in Philadelphia, plans to enter a convent.

posed to this measure why didn't they send a committee here tonight?" replied Councilman Chambers. "We have the word of only one man that this body is on record as being opposed to this ordinance.

"You have my word—it's as good as yours" shoulted back Solon Farrall.

"I have the floor now," retorted the First ward legislator. "This councilman" continued Mr. Chambers, meaning Solon Farrall, "has opposed everything this council has considered this year. I am in favor of this ordinance and will vote for it. I would vote for it even if it provided for a 30 per cent payment for convictions. We have a lot of violations in East Liverpool, and this ordinance will help check them."

Kerr Defines Attitude.

Councilman Kerr again expressed his opposition to the ordinance "because it commercialized law enforcement." "Whenever you offer a fellow 10 per cent of a fine to go out and get the other fellow, conditions are going to arise which will cause trouble. If the mayor has an inefficient police force, let him remove them."

Then turning to Solicitor Harry Brokaw, Kerr inquired if the detectives, provided by the ordinance, would be under bond. The solicitor replied that they would not.

"There's another objectionable feature to this step," he continued. "Place a gun in these men's hand and they may go out and shoot some one. Then the city will be responsible. I do not believe this council should be governed by the whims of one man and I will vote against this ordinance."

Larcombe Explains Position.

Councilman Larcombe denied that his action was governed by the "whims of one man" as Kerr had charged. "Mayor Brown has no strings on me" he said. "I vote as my dictates tell me. The mayor never talked to me about this ordinance except the night when we all met in his office. My vote on this ordinance would not be changed even though every other member voted oppositely".

Solon Eardley endorsed the sentiments of Mr. Larcombe, asserting that he had been told by many persons, including business men, that they felt this ordinance would assist in apprehending liquor law violators.

Upon roll call, Councilman Hayes and Rowe joined with Solons Chambers, Larcombe and Eardley in approving the ordinance, while Kerr and Farrall voted nay.

Battle Over Turnkey Measure.

Another clash between Kerr and Farrall on one side, and the remainder of the council, on the other, occurred when an ordinance creating the office of turnkey at the city hall and fixing his salary was brought up.

Sponsors of the ordinance asserted that the turnkey William Cline—is without power to exercise police powers outside the city building. His duties, at the present time, include janitor work at the city hall and the water works office on Fourth street.

The new ordinance clothes him with police powers and provides he shall act as desk sergeant after midnight. No mention was made of janitor services at the city hall which the proposed turnkey shall perform during the pre-midnight hours. His salary was fixed at $120 per month. The ordinance was also declared to be an emergency measure because of the immediate need for a turnkey.

Kerr and Chambers Clash

"No mention is made of janitor services in that ordinance and I am opposed to it," declared Kerr. "It's not so much of a turnkey that we need here, its a janitor. He does very little of that now."

"Who says he's not?" asked Chambers.

"Several have told me he is not functioning as he should" Kerr replied.

"I'll say he does his work," shot back Chambers.

"Your saying don't make it so," was Kerr's rejoiner.

At this point President Capehart rapped for order.

Councilman Farrall also attacked the measure. "What's the matter with East Liverpool, anyhow?" he asked. "First you want special police, then you want detectives and now its a turnkey. I was under the impression that we had a law-abiding community. It's a mystery to me." He also voiced his opposition to the emergency clause.

Solicitor Corrects Ordinance.

The ordinance was corrected by the solicitor so as to require the turnkey do janitor work. When the motion was considered the legislation was called, Farrall alone opposed it. On first reading the measure was passed without a disenting vote. However, when a move was made to suspend the rules, in order to place it under second reading, the move was blocked by Kerr and Farrall who voted "nay."

Kerr in discussing the traffic regulations in the city declared Dresden avenue was not infrequently congested because of the Pleasant Heights car which often halted as long as five minutes. He suggested that this car be required to make the loop through the Diamond over Fourth or Fifth street in order to eliminate the long wait on Dresden avenue.

He also recommended that street lights be permitted to burn longer in the morning and be turned on a little later in the evenings. He said the lights were turned off while it was yet pitch dark. Attention of the service director was also called to the condition of the city streets, which are in need of repairs in many cases.

Wage Increases Asked.

A communication from employes of the water works department, asking for wage increases, was referred to the finance committee. Service Director Ellis, in approving the application, recommended the following increases: Firemen, from $135 to $142.50 per month; oilers, from $120 to $135 per month; filtration operators, from $127.50 to $135 per month; assistant water works clerk, from $50 to $70 per month.

Brady E. Wolfe, Morton street, appeared before council complaining against the assessment on what he termed an incompleted sewer in Carson alley. The matter, he declared, had been taken to the courts. In this event council held that it was out of their hands and that Mr. Wolfe could not be compelled to pay his assessment until such time as his property is connected with the sewer.

The proposed construction of a storm sewer in Sylvan alley between Harker and Pennsylvania avenue was rererred to the street committee and city engineer. The street committee reported that the switch to the Hepps wholesale grocery building, Second street, was O. K. and instructed the service director to notify the Pennsylvania Railroad company to discontinue blocking of Peach alley which is the main approach to the Cartwright Brothers' pottery.

Councilman Farrall asked that the street committee view Trentvale street which he declared was "in a deplorable condition."

Dr. W. J. Lockhart, Evangelist, Pays Tribute to Motherhood

Twenty-three Respond to Invitation Friday Evening in Church of Christ — "Devils" Subject Tonight.

A tribute to motherhood was paid by Evangelist W. J. Lockhart at Friday night's services in the First Church of Christ. A large delegation of Wellsville church members attended the service.

Twenty-three additions resulted when the invitation was extended. Song Director J. Frank Harbinson, who sang "Keep The Promise Made to Mother," and made a profound impression. The young people's "pep" chorus of 60 voices is adding to the interest of the meetings.

The evangelist will preach on the subject, "Devils," at tonight's service which will be held at the usual hour. A men's meeting has been planned for 3 p. m. Sunday when Dr. Lockhart will speak on the subject, "Men's Sins."

In his sermon on "Mother" last night Dr. Lockhart said:

"You have only one mother, my boy, to pray that in the good way you may stay, who for you won't spare self sacrifice rare, so let us honor that mother always. And you who have mothers still living should count yourself fortunate that you may have the opportunity of sending her a token of love and telling her of this service.

"We naturally think of our mothers as being good and being better than any other woman. God forbid if in this fast jazz age, this age of bridge parties and movies and afternoon matinees and joy rides and cigarette smoking and drinking that the young motherhood of America should lose the respect of their children. But unless some of them are turned back to God and the church and the spiritual life the future of many children will be disastrous.

"Mr. Roosevelt said that the greatest need of this nation was for good mothers. I believe it. In the past five years we have had more difficulty in challenging the attention of the women to the claims of Christ than we have the men. I wonder if the womanhood of America drifted farther off the path of purity and right living during the war than the manhood? The response we get here in the next three weeks to this call to the new Crusade will be the answer the omen of East Liverpool can give to this question.

"And so I bring this tribute of love to my mother and to yours. But to your mothers I want to say that if ever your boy and girl is upheld out of the storms of life and in the midst of temptation by the memory of you it will be because you prove yourself a worthy mother.

"There are three influences that go to make for character. The kind of lives our fathers and mothers lived before we were born, the kind of influence and environments they threw round about us during the early years of our lives and the potentiality or power we have within ourselves to break away from hereditary influences and environment.

"But fathers and mothers two-thirds of the influence that goes to make for the character of your boys and girls is in your own hands. There are children here who want to be Christians and who have joined the church whose parents are holding back. My, for shame. Some of you fathers and mothers whose young people have lost their grip on God are but following your own slothful example."

NEAR EAST DAY SERVICES HERE

Appeals for Relief Will be Made on Sunday.

Near East Relief Sunday will be observed in several of the city's churches tomorrow, when speakers will appeal for funds with which to feed thousands of children in the Palestine country, facing starvation and death from exposure and disease.

The East Liverpool Ministerial association, at a meeting several weeks ago, sanctioned the plan. The Near East relief movement was incorporated by an act of congress several years ago.

Sunday, December, was the original date set aside for the collection of funds, but many communities preferred to wait until after the holidays.

Speakers at churches assisting in the campaign here tomorrow are:

First Presbyterian, 11 a. m.—Rev. A. H. Brodie, D. D., who spent several years in Syria.

First Baptist church, 11 a. m.—Dr. Henry A. Tupper, who is connected with the faculty of one of the eastern colleges.

St. Stephen's Episcopal church, 11 a. m.—James Blythe, field representative Near East Relief association, who was connected with relief activities in the Near East countries for months.

Second Presbyterian church, 11 a. m.—Dr. G. W. Clippinger, field representative.

First United Presbyterian church, 11 a. m.—E. K. DeWitt, for four years head of a school in the Near East. At Pennsylvania Avenue Methodist Episcopal church at 7:30 p. m.

Several of the speakers appearing here at the morning service are scheduled to visit Wellsville churches in the evening.

KIRBY, DISCOUNT CHIEF, FIGHTS

CLEVELAND, Jan. 10. — Under bonds totalling $40,000 on indictments in both the state and federal courts, Josiah Kirby, former president of the $30,000,000 Cleveland Discount Co., here began to fight for time today.

Kirby was indicted in both courts by grand juries charging him with issuing false financial statements and using the mails in a scheme to defraud. His private secretary, Mrs. Meta Kretschman, was arrested on a federal warrant late yesterday, following her refusal to testify before the grand jury. She is charged with conspiracy.

said.

Trial date of Kirby was set for "He was always fair," Mrs. Kirby February 9 in state court, following his surrender to Sheriff Kohler, but this will conflict with the former president's appearance in federal court, Kirby's attorneys contend. They are not fighting for a continuance. Date for trial in federal court has not yet been set.

Kirby's wife, whom he married at the age of 16, and who has stuck with him through two other financial crashes, is "still with him," according to word from Los Angeles.

Name Custom Agents In Conspiracy to Defraud in Hawaii

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10. — A widespread conspiracy to defraud the government has been unearthed in Hawaii by government agents, the treasury department announced today.

Several customs agents there are now under indictment, according to a cablegram received by Assistant Secretary Moss from his special investigators. Officials here said that importers probably would be involved in the conspiracy as the case is developed by the trial of the men already indicted.

Moss said that the probe indicates the government "has been defrauded of a good many thousands of dollars."

"Cozy" Dolan, Banished Coach, Has Hazy Memory, Says Landis

CHICAGO, Jan. 10—A. J. "Cozy" Dolan, banished coach of the New York Giants' baseball team, has a hazy memory and three days following the alleged offering of $500 to J. H. Sand, shortstop of the Philadelphia National League team, to "ease up," could not recall that he had ever talked with anybody on the subject. This was shown by Judge K. M. Landis, Commissioner of baseball, following reports just before the world's series of 1924, that such an offer had been made. The report was given out today from Judge Landis' office.

Judge Landis was not in his office when the transcript was given out and it was handed to newspapermen without comment.

The testimony reveals no hint of fresh scandal and actually develops little that has not already become public through rumor.

OHIO ELECTORAL COLLEGE MEETS

COLUMBUS, Jan. 10—Ohio's electoral college which will cast all of its 24 votes for President Coolidge and vice-president Dawes, met today at the state house and perfected its organization. For the first time in history, the women of the state were represented by their own sex, in the person of Mrs. Elizabeth T. C. Miller, Toledo, and Mrs. Mary Locke Hurin, also of Toledo. One of the electors, Thomas R. Barnes, of the Seventeenth Congressional district, was absent.

Meeting in the governor's recention room, the college informed Governor Donahey that it was ready to perform its official business. The Governor implied he was anxious to help facilitate the work. He then read the statutory instructions to the college members.

Judge George H. Clarke, Canton, Republican, was chosen permanent chairman of the college and James W. Huffman, Democrat who is assistant secretary to Governor Donahey, was chosen secretary, Walter Rogers, Newark, was designated as sergeant-at-arms.

After the appointment of committees by the chair, the college recessed until 10 a. m. Monday when it will meet in the senate chamber to cast the state's vote for President Coolidge and vice-president-elect Dawes.

Home Brew Party Ends in Stabbing; Ohioan is Victim

LAFFERTY, Jan. 10.—Stabbed trough the stomach by Mike Boboka, with whom he was drinking home brew, Nick Ogrizovich died last night. Nick's death occurred within 24 hours of the murder of Guy Abato, ex-service veteran.

In the room in which he lived since he and his wife separated, Abato's lifeless body, with two bullet wounds in the head and stab wounds, that almost severed the skull from the torso, was found Tuesday night. Companions said no fight took place when Agrizovich was stabbed and that Boboka helped care for his victim until daylight when a physician was obtained and Ogrizovich was rushed to a Wheeling hospital.

LAWMAKERS' PAY FOR TRAVEL HIT

COSHOCTON, Jan. 10—That he will make a fight at the present session of the Ohio legislature against "the practice of at least two house officials drawing their allowance of $500 as transportation and that of members who draw without attending sessions" is the announcement made today by Clay M. Miller, representing Coshocton county in the house of representatives.

Representative Miller charged that the two unnamed house officials did not use the $500 as transportation because they maintain residences at Columbus. He said he will seek abolition of the practice of paying non-attending members.

WOMAN MAY GET U. S. JUDGESHIP

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—The possibility that a woman will occupy a federal judgeship arose at the White House today following a conference between President Coolidge and Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, assistant attorney general.

It is understood that the president is considering the appointment of Mrs. Willebrandt to the United States district judgeship for the southern district of California. The conference at the White House this morning was arranged at the request of the president.

It is explained that this is the reason for the almost uniform prosperity enjoyed by its farmers over a long period of time.

REPORTS FROM STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—More prominence in the forward movement of prices today was given in the railroad, oil and motor stocks than to the steel stocks and high-priced industrials which have held the center of the stage in the preceding sessions of the week. Except for realizing sales in American Can and a few of the specialty stocks in the first period, buying orders predominated in the early trading and the forward movements in many stocks simply resumed from last night's finishing point.

Impressive ad ances were staged by the mercantile stocks, including Sears, Roebuck, Navy and Montgomery & Ward, the motors under the leadership of General Motors, which reached a new high for the movement at 67½; the equipment, with American Loco at 110½; equivalent to 220 on the 1923 basis of the stock; the rails, with Missouri Pacific preferred and common, Rock Island and New York Central, active and buoyant; the oils, with Atlantic Refining making a new high on the movement at 110½ and the low-priced oils, like Simms, Independent, Shell Union, Marland, California Pete, Invincible, Louisiana Oil and Trans-Continental oil, for nearly a year the undesirables of the speculative movement forging to the front and commanding the best prices of the movement. There was, also, an active market for the better grade of dividend oils, with Pacific Oil, above 56, and in the lead. Simms Pete replaced Invinicible Oil as the leader in the low-priced group, selling above 24 on a heavy turnover.

In point of activity, trading in the first hour today was fully up to the sensational market of last Saturday when the facilities of the exchange were clogged, and traders were practically unable to keep in touch with the movements of prices.

There were some signs of heavyness in the second hour, when industrial and railroad stocks were offered in large volume on week-end profit-taking and stocks, like American Can, Frisco Common, Radio, Reading, etc., which were leaders in the rally on Tuesday and Thursday, dropped back to lower levels.

But strength in the general list showed that many traders were switching to other stocks: showing preference to the oils, in which the volume of trading expanded considerably.

ally, because of ill health, he was forced to quit this job.

When he became bedfast last August two physicians, who examined him, declared he showed no symptoms of tuberculosis and blood tests strengthen their beliefs. Another physician, called in this week, said that Mr. Butler was suffering from tuberculosis, evidently being in the last stages of the disease.

Mr. and Mrs. Butler are the parents of eight children most of whom have grown to manhood and womanhood. Two of the daughters, now married live in Dayton, another resides in Bellaire and a fourth in Chicago. A son, 17 years old, works at Barton. None of the five have been able to offer financial assistance.

Up until a few weeks ago, two sons, 18 and 15 years of age, respectively, resided with their parents here. Both were employed in the potteries, but work slackened and they were able to bring in little money. A few days before Christmas, both left for Dayton, hoping to obtain employment. The youngest member of the family, Paul, nine years of age, has been living in the homes of his married sisters at Dayton, but returned to visit his father and mother during the Christmas holidays. He has not yet returned to Dayton.

"Yes, people have been helping us for weeks," said Mrs. Butler yesterday. "The Salvation Army has been sending groceries and some of the church people have been assisting. We are pretty well supplied with foodstuffs now, but Mr. Butler needs clothes if he goes to a sanatorium."

Rev. B. R. Johnson, of the Church of Christ, and other friends of the family today were taking steps to have Mr. Butler sent to a sanitorium. The patient expressed his willingness to go any place in order to ease the burden on his wife. Since the Red Cross ceased its work here, no organization is in existence which looks after charity cases. The matter will be referred to the county commissioners.

Mrs. Butler will go to Bellaire to live temporarily with her daughter if her husband is placed in a sanatorium. She plans to stay there until her two unmarried sons in Dayton are able to find employment and establish a home for her and their youngest brother, Paul.

"We have been placing our trust in God" said Mrs. Butler yesterday. "He will not let us want."

Rent on the three rooms which the family occupies on Broadway is past due, but an extension has been granted.

The family came to East Liverpool about 10 years ago from Wetzel county—Mr. Butler's former home. For many years Mrs. Butler was interested in the management of a rescue mission which was conducted on south Broadway and Second street.

Pottery Plant

coming week will be the most active of the show.

The western and southern buyers will not be in the market until next week, and many of them will not arrive in the Pittsburgh and East Liverpool districts until week after next. Many jobbers will be included in these arrivals. The large mail order houses have not been represented in the market up to today.

Will A. Rhoades, formerly of East Liverpool and more recently with the Chelsea China company at New Cumberland, W. Va., and also the Albert Pick company of Chicago, Ill., has become associated with the Jackson China company at Falls Creek, Pa. Mr. Rhoades was retained by this interest following the death of J. C. Jackson and Edward Darden, who were recently shot as they were leaving the plant for noon lunch. Mr. Rhoades, in the yesteryears, was associated with the Knowles, Taylor & Knowles company and the Colonial company of the East Liverpool and also with the Milliken China company of Pittsburgh. He left Pittsburgh to go with the Chelsea at New Cumberland.

Swaney Hall On Job.

Swaney Hall, son of the late John W. Hall of East Liverpool, is in charge of the exhibit of the L. E. Smith Glass Co., of Mt. Pleasant, Pa., and which is being maintained at the Ft. Pitt hotel. When Mr. Hall first became identified with this interest as a salesman, the company manufactured a small line of packers goods. Today, the company is a manufacturer of automobile lenses and a general line of staple items in glassware.

Some talk is heard about the lobby of the Ft. Pitt hotel about confining the annual merchandise event to two weeks, hereafter, instead of three. The subject is to be discussed at the annual meeting of the Association of Glass and Pottery Manufacturers which will be held in the Ft. Pitt perhaps next week.

Pocket Billiard Champion Greenleaf And Actress Wed

NEW YORK, Jan. 10—The carefully guarded, secret marriage of Ralph Greenleaf, national pocket billiard champion, and the Princess Nai Pai Tai, also known as Amelia Ruth Parker, daughter of an English father and Chinese mother, became known here today. They eloped last Saturday to Elkton, Md.

Mrs. Greenleaf, her husband said, is thoroughly Americanized. She has been appearing in vaudeville.

The bride, who has been in Philadelphia, rejoined her husband last night after his victorious contest with Charles Harmon. Greenleaf played one of the best games of his career when he defended his title yesterday, winning by 100 to 61.

Mrs. Greenleaf's father married her mother while in the British diplomatic service. Her parents still reside in China.

Mrs. Beatrice E. Greenleaf, whom the champion divorced on December 22 in Philadelphia, plans to enter a convent.

posed to this measure why didn't they send a committee here tonight?" replied Councilman Chambers. "We have the word of only one man that this body is on record as being opposed to this ordinance.

"You have my word—it's as good as yours" shoulted back Solon Farrall.

"I have the floor now," retorted the First ward legislator. "This councilman" continued Mr. Chambers, meaning Solon Farrall, "has opposed everything this council has considered this year. I am in favor of this ordinance and will vote for it. I would vote for it even if it provided for a 30 per cent payment for convictions. We have a lot of violations in East Liverpool, and this ordinance will help check them."

Kerr Defines Attitude.

Councilman Kerr again expressed his opposition to the ordinance "because it commercialized law enforcement." "Whenever you offer a fellow 10 per cent of a fine to go out and get the other fellow, conditions are going to arise which will cause trouble. If the mayor has an inefficient police force, let him remove them."

Then turning to Solicitor Harry Brokaw, Kerr inquired if the detectives, provided by the ordinance, would be under bond. The solicitor replied that they would not.

"There's another objectionable feature to this step," he continued. "Place a gun in these men's hand and they may go out and shoot some one. Then the city will be responsible. I do not believe this council should be governed by the whims of one man and I will vote against this ordinance."

Larcombe Explains Position.

Councilman Larcombe denied that his action was governed by the "whims of one man" as Kerr had charged. "Mayor Brown has no strings on me" he said. "I vote as my dictates tell me. The mayor never talked to me about this ordinance except the night when we all met in his office. My vote on this ordinance would not be changed even though every other member voced oppositely".

Solon Eardley endorsed the sentiments of Mr. Larcombe, asserting that he had been told by many persons, including business men, that they felt this ordinance would assist in apprehending liquor law violators.

Upon roll call, Councilman Hayes and Rowe joined with Solons Chambers, Larcombe and Eardley in approving the ordinance, while Kerr and Farrall voted nay.

Battle Over Turnkey Measure.

Another clash between Kerr and Farrall on one side, and the remainder of the council, on the other, occurred when an ordinance creating the office of turnkey at the city hall and fixing his salary was brought up.

Sponsors of the ordinance asserted that the turnkey William Cline—is without power to exercise police powers outside the city building. His duties, at the present time, include janitor work at the city hall and the water works office on Fourth street.

The new ordinance clothes him with police powers and provides he shall act as desk sergeant after midnight. No mention was made of janitor services at the city hall which the proposed turnkey shall perform during the pre-midnight hours. His salary was fixed at $120 per month. The ordinance was also declared to be an emergency measure because of the immediate need for a turnkey.

Kerr and Chambers Clash

"No mention is made of janitor services in that ordinance and I am opposed to it," declared Kerr. "It's not so much of a turnkey that we need here, its a janitor. He does very little of that now."

"Who says he's not?" asked Chambers.

"Several have told me he is not functioning as he should" Kerr replied.

"I'll say he does his work," shot back Chambers.

"Your saying don't make it so," was Kerr's rejoiner.

At this point President Capehart rapped for order.

Councilman Farrall also attacked the measure. "What's the matter with East Liverpool, anyhow?" he asked. "First you want special police, then you want detectives and now its a turnkey. I was under the impression that we had a law-abiding community. It's a mystery to me." He also voiced his opposition to the emergency clause.

Solicitor Corrects Ordinance.

The ordinance was corrected by the solicitor so as to require the turnkey do janitor work. When the motion was considered the legislation was called, Farrall alone opposed it. On first reading the measure was passed without a disenting vote. However, when a move was made to suspend the rules, in order to place it under second reading, the move was blocked by Kerr and Farrall who voted "nay."

Kerr in discussing the traffic regulations in the city declared Dresden avenue was not infrequently congested because of the Pleasant Heights car which often halted as long as five minutes. He suggested that this car be required to make the loop through the Diamond over Fourth or Fifth street in order to eliminate the long wait on Dresden avenue.

He also recommended that street lights be permitted to burn longer in the morning and be turned on a little later in the evenings. He said the lights were turned off while it was yet pitch dark. Attention of the service director was also called to the condition of the city streets, which are in need of repairs in many cases.

Wage Increases Asked.

A communication from employes of the water works department, asking for wage increases, was referred to the finance committee. Service Director Ellis, in approving the application, recommended the following increases: Firemen, from $135 to $142.50 per month; oilers, from $120 to $135 per month; filtration operators, from $127.50 to $135 per month; assistant water works clerk, from $50 to $70 per month.

Brady E. Wolfe, Morton street, appeared before council complaining against the assessment on what he termed an incompleted sewer in Carson alley. The matter, he declared, had been taken to the courts. In this event council held that it was out of their hands and that Mr. Wolfe could not be compelled to pay his assessment until such time as his property is connected with the sewer.

The proposed construction of a storm sewer in Sylvan alley between Harker and Pennsylvania avenue was referred to the street committee and city engineer. The street committee reported that the switch to the Hepps wholesale grocery building, Second street, was O. K. and instructed the service director to notify the Pennsylvania Railroad company to discontinue blocking of Peach alley which is the main approach to the Cartwright Brothers' pottery.

Councilman Farrall asked that the street committee view Trentvale street which he declared was "in a deplorable condition."

Wellsville Councilmen Call Special Meeting For Monday

Plans For Improvement of Clark Avenue, City's Western Gateway, Will be Discussed.

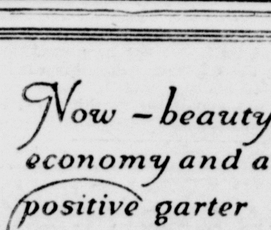

City council will hold a special meeting on Monday evening at city hall for the purpose of discussing proposed plans for the improvement of Clark avenue, the municipality's western gateway.

The Clark avenue project at present is only a suggestion. It is the intention of solons to strive to work out a plan to make it a reality.

Jefferson county commissioners assert that the county will take action to improve highways leading to Wellsville, if this city would repair Clark avenue, which, councilmen admit, is one of the worst streets in the city.

Clerk George Hardman was instructed last Tuesday to review legislation enacted in recent years specifying the manner in which assessments could be made on such an improvement.

C. & P. BUILDS NEW IRONDALE TOWER

NS tower, built in 1884 and one of the oldest block stations on the C. & P. division, has been transformed into a modern interlocking plant during the past few weeks. It is now an electric-mechanical plant, the first of its kind on the division, says the Pennsylvania News.

Located two miles and a half west of Irondale, O., the tower has been moved from the north to the south side of the tracks. It has been transformed at an approximate cost of $70,000.

All the work has been done by C. & P. forces under the direction of William Frech, supervisor of signals and telegraph. For weeks, Foreman G. B. Anderson and his men, Signalmen Samuel Bengeisdorf and F. L. Kemp, Asst. Signalman H. C. Hahn, G. A. Imhos, G. T. Henry and Warren Burrows, and J. D. Lindesmith, T. & S. helper, erected signals, strung wires, installed levers, adjusted electrical equipment and made connections so that the plant could be placed in operation as scheduled at 9:30 a. m. Saturday, December 20.

For a time at least, the operators will be extremely busy becoming familiar with the maze of levers and intricate mechanisms. There are 12 electro mechanical levers, nine mechanical levers operating eight switches and one derail, five electric lock levers and three electric levers for operation of 10 signals.

All signals in connection with the plant are of the position light type. The train movement averages about 18 westbound and 17 eastbound daily, an average of 15 pusher engine trips each 24 hours.

Operators who will be in charge of the tower are I. A. Rice, first trick; B. H. Curry, second trick and C. F. Schooll, third trick.

Rev. Berger will preach on the following subjects on Sunday: Morning—"What Shall I Do With Jesus?" evening—"How Can We Escape if We Neglect Salvation?"

Sunday school will convene at 9:45 a. m. and Christian Endeavor societies at the customary hour.

Jail Toronto Barber.

Alleged to have attempted to swindle a woman out of $700, Nick Kadekas, 35, Toronto barber, arrested by Steubenville police, has been committed to the Jefferson county jail on a charge of being a suspicious character.

According to information given the authorities, Kadekas, arranged several meetings with a woman, who is said to be 68 years old, and is said to have made every effort to impress her that he could return her savings many times over if given the $700.

The woman and Kadekas were seen talking several times in a Steubenville depot. Attention of authorities was called to the case. They watched the recent conference and shortly afterward arrested Kadekas.

Services in the Evangelical church last night marked the close of the first week of evangelistic campaign which opened on the day following New Year's, in charge of Miss Anne E. McGhie, of Akron.

Sunday night she talked on "Our Kinship With God". She said "When a person settles his relationship with God all other problems in life are solved.

"God is a personal, practical God who deals with everything that concerns His children. God's children should look like their Father. His eyes are the lenses of the soul, and they express the God-likeness of our nature.

"A child of God should walk like God. Your daily life and conversation should reflect God. Parents should talk like God before their children. Church members should walk like God before the business world. If there is any one you are afraid to meet and cross the street when you see that person coming it is a sure sign you have wronged that person. Jacob was afraid to meet Esau because he had wronged him in a business deal. After praying all night he was ready to make restitution. Some here should go home and pray all night. A child of God should literally do the will of God. The greatest thing any one can do in this world is to do the will of God. Your fortune is made if you do the will of God and keep His favor and blessing on your life. This room is full of concerts tonight. If we had a radio equipment we could hear concerts from New York, Chicago and Texas. If you will get your will adjusted to God's, you will hear from Heaven often, and God will send you new messages daily.

Monday night the ubject was "Prayer". Miss McGhie aid: "Many christians do not like to pray. If they did they would be found at the mid-week prayer meeting. Much modern praying is only parrot talk. Unless the church can pray down a sin consuming revival soon this world is doomed, damned and lost. It is drifting to the precipice of destruction at a frightful rate."

Her Tuesday night subject was "Can a Man Live With Voluntary Sin?" "What is salvation? It is a remedy for sin. Who's remedy? God's remedy. God does not give us a remedy that is not adequate to meet our needs. The Angel of the Lord said to Mary, 'And His name shall be called Jesus for He shall save the people from their sins.' Jesus said to the woman, taken in sin. 'Go and sin no more'. John writes, These things I write unto you that ye sin not. God has made provisions of grace in Jesus whereby He can save all men from sin. I have preached the gospel from shore to shore and have seen men and women in every state of society brought to Christ, and have never seen one He could not save. Satan has not done something that God cannot undo. Let us take the devil off the throne and put him on the footstool. let us take Christ off the footstool and put Him on the throne of our lives. If satan could make Jerry McCauley and Sam Hadley vile sinners Jesus Christ could make them saints."

Wednesday night her text was "He That Gathereth Not With Me Scattereth". She said "There are many scatterers in the church. Too much moonshine religion. As the moon borrows all of its light and power from the sun. So many christians have transferred religion. They look good, talk nice and are outwardly moral in their lives, but are devoid of an inner experience of salvation. A church member that has no burnnig personal testimony of salvation is a scatterer. A church member who attends Sunday base ball and goes gadding about on the Lord's Day is a scatterer. A man is as effectively lost without Christ and with his name on the church roll as he is without Christ and without a church membership. After all there are just two classes of people in the world. The gatherer and the scatterer the Godly and the Ungodly, the saved and the lost. Many in our churches will never gather in Heaven."

"WHITE TIGER"
When crook meets crook, popular fiction says they immediately establish a bond of fellowship and forever hold it sacred. They don't "squeal" on each other and they help each other all they can.
Now comes a motion picture which blows these popular traditions to pieces. It tells the truth about the underworld and the so-called "honor among thieves."
"White Tiger" is the story of three crooks who were human. Most crooks in fiction are sort of Sir Walter Raleighs and Joan de Arcs gone wrong, romantic, impossible, strutting figures who do everthing honorable towards each other and are the best of pals. In "White Tiger" the trio pictured are high class international operators, but they fight from morning to night and have no sense of the "honor among thieves" that so many writers rave about. In brief, they are the kind that actually live.

District Elder To Preach.

District Elder J. P. Foy of the Free Methodist Church will preach at services tomorrow morning and evening in the local church, according to announcement by Rev. Walter Main, pastor.

The quarterly meeting services are scheduled for Sunday. Sunday school will convene at 9:30 a. m., followed by the love feast, and preaching by Elder Foy. The sacrament of the Lord's supper will close the services.

Evening services will start at 7 o'clock. Rev. Foy will preach.

Evangelical Church Services

Rev. C. W. Johnson, pastor of the First Evangelical church, announced his Sunday program of services as follows: Prayer meeting at 9; Sunday school and morning worship combined, beginning at 9:45, with a talk by Miss Anna McGhie. Preaching at 2:30 p. m.; Senior Endeavor at 6:30; evening service at 7:30.

Lost To Salem Team.

The Wellsville Collegians, a collection of former school players, were defeated by the Salem Aces, 45 to 21, recently on the Salem floor.

The locals put up a good floor game but were unable to locate the baskets consistently. The Aces took the lead at the half, 16 to 6, and boosted it to 45 in the second half while the Wellsville squad was adding 15 more points.

Mrs. Homer Todd Hostess.

Mrs. Homer Todd entertained members of the Gernleaf club last evening at her home in Fifteenth street.

Guessing contests, music and games were diversions. Musical selections wer egiven by Mrs. Grace Thomas and Mrs. Mabel Ice.

At the close of the affair the hostess, assisted by Mrs. Thomas and Mrs. Nancy Kinney, served a four-course luncheon, places being laid for 15.

WIT AND HUMOR FROM BALKANS

Great rivers owe their power to little brooks.

Avoid both the fool and the saint! Trust no one but yourself and your steed.

In the forest, tree leans on tree; in a nation, man on man.

A man is happy only twice: when he marries a wife and when he buries her.

Better a spoonful of honey than a shovelful of mud.

It is better to begin than not to finish.

'Tis better to serve a good man than togi ve orders to a bad man.

Who is not satisfied with a little, will never have enough.

'Tis better to suffer injustice than to commit it.

There is no need to pray for death.

What is easily gotten is nearly lost.

When money gives out, sense ensues.

Misers' daughters often marry squanderers.

Much brains, little money.

Force is never welcome.

Each person forges his own happiness.

A few more proverbs of Balkan peoples make up today's installment (No. 14) of this series of presentations of the axioms of various races and countries:

As many thoughts as heads.

Children are the source of joy and of sadness.

The young may, the old must, die.

A wolf changes his skin, but never his morals.

What pleases the eye agrees with the ear.

In the course of time everything comes handy.

Fire and water are good servants, but poor masters.

Precaution never harms.

Safe Fat Reduction
Why be fat? The answer of most fat people is that constant dieting is hard, continual exercise is tiresome and exhaustive—and then, too, it might be harmful to force the weight down. That was the old-fashioned idea. Today in Marmola Prescription Tablets all these difficulties are overcome. Just a pleasant little tablet after each meal and at bedtime causes fat to vanish. This modern method is easy, entails no dieting or exercising and has the added advantage of cheapness.
Get a box of these tablets and start taking them now. Within a short time you will be getting rid of fat steadily and easily without starvation diet or tiresome exercise. You will be comfortable and able to enjoy the food you like and want. Even after taking off many pounds, there will be no flabbiness or wrinkles remaining. You will feel 100 per cent better. All drug stores the world over sell Marmola Prescription Tablets at one dollar for a box, or the Marmola Company, General Motors Building, Detroit, Mich., will gladly send them to you on receipt of the price. adv.

Wellsville Councilmen Call Special Meeting For Monday

Plans For Improvement of Clark Avenue, City's Western Gateway, Will be Discussed.

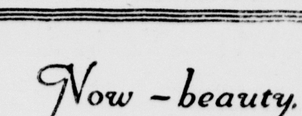

City council will hold a special meeting on Monday evening at city hall for the purpose of discussing proposed plans for the improvement of Clark avenue, the municipality's western gateway.

The Clark avenue project at present is only a suggestion. It is the intention of solons to strive to work out a plan to make it a reality.

Jefferson county commissioners assert that the county will take action to improve highways leading to Wellsville, if this city would repair Clark avenue, which, councilmen admit, is one of the worst streets in the city.

Clerk George Hardman was instructed last Tuesday to review legislation enacted in recent years specifying the manner in which assessments could be made on such an improvement.

C. & P. BUILDS NEW IRONDALE TOWER

NS tower, built in 1884 and one of the oldest block stations on the C. & P. division, has been transformed into a modern interlocking plant during the past few weeks. It is now an electric-mechanical plant, the first of its kind on the division, says the Pennsylvania News.

Located two miles and a half west of Irondale, O., the tower has been moved from the north to the south side of the tracks. It has been transformed at an approximate cost of $70,000.

All the work has been done by C. & P. forces under the direction of William Frech, supervisor of signals and telegraph. For weeks, Foreman G. B. Anderson and his men, Signalmen Samuel Bengelsdorf and F. L. Kemp, Asst. Signalman H. C. Hahn, G. A. Imhos, G. T. Henry and Warren Burrows, and J. D. Lindesmith, T. & S. helper, erected signals, strung wires, installed levers, adjusted electrical equipment and made connections so that the plant could be placed in operation as scheduled at 9:30 a. m. Saturday, December 20.

For a time at least, the operators will be extremely busy becoming familiar with the maze of levers and intricate mechanisms. There are 12 electro mechanical levers, nine mechanical levers operating eight switches and one derail, five electric lock levers and three electric levers for operation of 10 signals.

All signals in connection with the plant are of the position light type. The train movement averages about 18 westbound and 17 eastbound daily, an average of 15 pusher engine trips each 24 hours.

Operators who will be in charge of the tower are I. A. Rice, first trick; B. H. Curry, second trick and C. F. Schooll, third trick.

REVIVALS START IN LOCAL CHURCH

Special services are scheduled to get under way on Sunday evening in the Second Presbyterian church, Wellsville, Rev. Thomas Berger, pastor, announced today.

The services will mark the opening of a two-weeks' series, which, beginning Monday, will be in charge of Rev. Lawther, pastor of the Niles Presbyterian church.

Rev. Berger will preach on the following subjects on Sunday: Morning —"What Shall I Do With Jesus?" evening—"How Can We Escape If We Neglect Salvation?"

Sunday school will convene at 9:45 a. m. and Christian Endeavor societies at the customary hour.

Jail Toronto Barber.

Alleged to have attempted to swindle a woman out of $700, Nick Kadekas, 35, Toronto barber, arrested by Steubenville police, has been committed to the Jefferson county jail on a charge of being a suspicious character.

According to information given the authorities, Kadekas, arranged several meetings with a woman, who is said to be 68 years old, and is said to have made every effort to impress her that he could return her savings many times over if given the $700.

The woman and Kadekas were seen talking several times in a Steubenville depot. Attention of authorities was called to the case. They watched the recent conference and shortly afterward arrested Kadekas.

Services in the Evangelical church last night marked the close of the first week of evangelistic campaign which opened on the day following New Year's, in charge of Miss Anne E. McGhie, of Akron.

Sunday night she talked on "Our Kinship With God". She said "When a person settles his relationship with God all other problems in life are solved.

"God is a personal, practical God who deals with everything that concerns His children. God's children should look like their Father. His eyes are the lenses of the soul, and they express the God-likeness of our nature.

"A child of God should walk like God. Your daily life and conversation should reflect God. Parents should talk like God before their children. Church members should walk like God before the business world. If there is any one you are afraid to meet and cross the street when you see that person coming it is a sure sign you have wronged that person. Jacob was afraid to meet Esau because he had wronged him in a business deal. After praying all night he was ready to make restitution. Some here should go home and pray all night. A child of God should literally do the will of God. The greatest thing any one can do in this world is to do the will of God. Your fortune is made if you do the will of God and keep His favor and blessing on your life. This room is full of concerts tonight. If we had a radio equipment we could hear concerts from New York, Chicago and Texas. If you will get your will adjusted to God's, you will hear from Heaven often, and God will send you new messages daily.

Monday night the ubject was "Prayer". Miss McGhie aid: "Many christians do not like to pray. If they did they would be found at the mid-week prayer meeting. Much modern praying is only parrot talk. Unless the church can pray down a sin consuming revival soon this world is doomed, damned and lost. It is drifting to the precipice of destruction at a frightful rate."

Her Tuesday night subject was "Can a Man Live With Voluntary Sin?" "What is salvation? It is a remedy for sin. Who's remedy? God's remedy. God does not give us a remedy that is not adequate to meet our needs. The Angel of the Lord said to Mary, 'And His name shall be called Jesus for He shall save the people from their sins.' Jesus said to the woman, taken in sin. 'Go and sin no more'. John writes, These things I write unto you that ye sin not. God has made provisions of grace in Jesus whereby He can save all men from sin. I have preached the gospel from shore to shore and have seen men and women in every state of society brought to Christ, and have never seen one He could not save. Satan has not done something that God cannot undo. Let us take the devil off the throne and put him on the footstool, let us take Christ off the footstool and put Him on the throne of our lives. If satan could make Jerry McCauley and Sam Hadley vile sinners Jesus Christ could make them saints."

Wednesday night her text was "He That Gathereth Not With Me Scattereth". She said "There are many scatterers in the church. Too much moonshine religion. As the moon borrows all of its light and power from the sun. So many christians have transferred religion. They look good, talk nice and are outwardly moral in their lives, but are devoid of an inner experience of salvation. A church member that has no burnnig personal testimony of salvation is a scatterer. A church member who attends Sunday base ball and goes gadding about on the Lord's Day is a scatterer. A man is as effectively lost without Christ and with his name on the church roll as he is without Christ and without a church membership. After all there are just two classes of people in the world. EAST LIVERPOOL—AMERICA'S POTTERY CENTER

SATURDAY, JANUARY 10, 1925.

Direct Vote for President

The Ohio legislature, undertaking to revise its archaic election laws, is considering a proposal intended to do away with the present round-about method of voting for president of the United States.

The state legislature, of course, cannot change the federal constitution, which still requires voting for electors, who in turn elect the president and vice president. The legislators propose to get around the difficulty by having the list of electors representing each pair of candidates filed with the secretary of state instead of being printed on the ballots. The ballots will bear the names of the presidential and vice presidential candidates, which will permit direct voting for those officials. The electors will be required, at the meeting of the electoral college, to cast their ballots for the choice indicated on the ballots.

This is not really an innovation, nor is its legality questionable. It has been done in Iowa and Nebraska, and has been held valid by the courts. It makes a presidential election more intelligible to the voters and makes them feel that their votes really count in choosing their chief executive. It looks like a good way to get around the awkward constitutional requirement until such time as a federal amendment can be adopted bringing the constitutional machinery into harmony with modern facts.

Arrogance

"Before God," says Premier Mussolini, "I alone assume full personal, political, moral and historical responsibility for everything that has occurred in Italy."

Which, it will be admitted, is a great deal for one man to assume. Mussolini goes farther than Kaiser Wilhelm, who admitted God to full partnership.

Perhaps it is courageous for the former radical and present conservative leader to take all this burden upon himself. The Italian people, or such part of them as are able to find representation in the Italian parliament and press under the present blood-and-iron regime, appear to think so. At least, they have applauded Mussolini in his lion-like roaring.

Intelligent outsiders, however, and perhaps intelligent Italians, too, are likely to regard Mussolini as a stage lion, roaring for dramatic effect.

If Mussolini is sincere about it, he stands forth as a supreme egotist. Napoleon or Caesar never ventured to picture himself so brazenly as a Colossus.

The Italians wearied of Julius Caesar, who was probably a bigger man than Mussolini, and no less a patriot. When will a democratic people weary of their present master, a violent and ranting enemy of democracy? Lawless and arrogant Fascism may blow up at any time. Then what? History shows that one lawless extreme breeds another.

Slovenly, Ignorant Wives

The Salvation Army has had experts working in 22 states investigating the causes of deplorable home conditions among the poor. The reports throw a major portion of the blame for domestic misery upon slovenly and ignorant wives.

"Our officers," says one leader, "every day meet housewives who have never had a needle in their hands, and know nothing about repairing their children's clothing; women who have never owned a toothbrush or a nail brush, and make use of soap perhaps once or twice a week; women who actually make a practice of throwing away stockings and other garments as soon as holes appear in them because they don't know what else to do. These women know how to cook perhaps two or three dishes that their husbands get weary eating."

It is a dreary picture, and a pitiful one, of the extravagance of ignorant poverty. Delegating drudgery to others or reducing its amount by the use of labor-saving machinery is right and efficient whenever possible. But the good executive usually knows the details of his business and frequently has reached his executive position after a period of efficient performance of drudgery and routine tasks. Home-making and household management, too, are executive positions requiring knowledge and skill for their proper handling, and their drudgery is reduced sooner by efficient practice than by ignorant neglect.

TORNADO STATISTICS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—During the last eight years there were 752 tornadoes in the United States that caused an aggregate property loss of more than $62,000,000 and the loss of 1,929 lives. Akkansas led all the states in the number of these storms, while Illinois led in the total property loss. Indiana and Illinois suffered the storm that caused the greatest number of fatalities—103.

These statistics are announced by Herbert C. Hunter, of the United States weather bureau, as summarizing the data gathered since 1916, when the weather bureau resumed the systematic collection of tornado statistics for the entire country. The result for the eight-year period can now be compared with the conclusions reached by Finley, about 40 years ago, and by Henry, another expert, over 25 years ago.

The tornado is a wicked storm that in this country seems to prefer the middle west as the scene of its depredations. It is cyclonic in its movements, but instead of being a thousand miles in diameter like the continental cyclone, or one hundred miles like the tropical hurricane, it usually has a diameter of gyration of only about one hundred to three hundred yards.

Its speed of rotation is said to be so terrific that no instruments have ever been held together long enough to measure its velocity, which must equal that of a rifle bullet. Reputable and reliable persons have reported wheat straws that were shot by the wind of a tornado at least half an inch into the tough body of a oak tree, and in another instance a two by four pine scantling was driven through five-eighths of an inch of solid iron.

As a rule, tornadoes occur in the spring of the year, in the southeast quadrant of a cyclone, when the temperature and humidity are high. Their direction is nearly always toward the northeast and at the height of their destructiveness they mow a path like a gigantic, irresistible scythe. The traditions of their freaks are innumerable.

A CAREFUL COMPILATION

In gathering its data the climatological service assigned a certain area, usually a state, to each of the 45 directors. Tornado information, like much other material, is assembled and passed upon first by these directors, then the compiling is finished at Washington.

This system has a marked advantage over the practices of the earlier periods in the employment of well-distributed section directors, who are likely to learn of storms in remote districts which would easily escape the notice of a single worker trying to cover the whole country. A considerable disadvantage, however, is that the final counts for the states depend largely upon the diverse judgments of dozens of different men, some of them very conservative in classifying a puzzling storm as a tornado.

In the entire country from 1919 to 1923 there were, as stated, 752 storms classified as tornados, and average of 94 a year. The annual count was greatest in 1917, with a total of 121, while 64 was the smallest number reported for any one year. The average number is appreciably larger than the annual average reported by Finley and Henry 40 and 25 years ago, probably because of better news-gathering facilities.

The principal area or section of the country where the present compilation indicates that tornadoes are more numerous than they were in the earlier surveys is the central and western parts of the cotton growing region.

During the eight-year period Arkansas was visited by a total of 76 tornadoes, with Kansas, Texas, Iowa, Missouri and Oklahoma coming next, in order. No other state reported as many as 50 of these a single year, with 32 in 1916. In eight states there storms. Arkansas also had the greatest number in seem to have been no tornadoes during this period.

However, the records show that 10 states that were visited by tornadoes once or oftener had no loss of life, and in 11 other states the number of persons killed was less than 10.

MANY KILLED IN MISSISSIPPI

Mississippi reports the greatest loss of life for the eight years of any of the states, her total fatalities being 257. Arkansas came second and Alabama third.

Of the aggregate loss of life of 1,929, these deaths were the work of slightly less than one-third of the tornadoes, and only one tornado in 14 took 10 or more lives, while only one—that which visited Indiana and Illinois—caused as many as 100 fatalities.

The total damage to property reported as due to these tornadoes averaged a little less than $8,000,000 a year. Of the whole amount—$62,000,000—the year 1917 accounted for almost one-fourth, while the loss in 1920 was only a trifle less.

Among the states Illinois reports the largest aggregate loss, almost $7,500,000. Indiana comes second with a total of almost exactly $5,000,000, while Minnesota and Iowa have records almost equaling that of Indiana.

The largest property loss from a single tornado was $3,500,000. It was caused by a storm in and near Fergus Falls, Minnesota, during June 1919.

While governmental authorities may gather statistics relative to tornadoes or cyclones they have never been able to devise any defense against these visitations. Tornado alarms have been perfected, giving warning a minute or two in advance of the danger, but even they rarely suffice to save lives or property. Persons caught in the path of one of these terrific storms are simply out of luck, unless they have cyclone cellars handy and have the presence of mind to dive into them at the first signs of danger.

The term cyclone was originally applied to the violent rotary tempests of the tropical and sub-tropical regions, called in the West Indies hurricanes; in Senegal, tornadoes; at the Cape of Good Hope, trovadoes; in the Chinese sea, typhoons, and on the west coast of Central America, papagallos.

Since the discovery of the rotary course of winds even at a distance from the tropics the term cyclone has been applied to any system of winds blowing a center of low pressure, and a cyclone is distinguished from an ati-cyclone, which is a system of winds with a center of high pressure.

Any flowing together of the air between two anti-cyclones must produce a cyclone, and it has been shown that the unequal heating effects of land and water surfaces may be sufficient to initiate cyclonic and anti-cyclonic action.

Storms move eastward in the middle latitudes and westward in the tropics, and rotate counter-clockwise in the northern hemisphere and in the opposite direction in the southern hemisphere. In the case of some tropical storms, the storm itself may move at a speed of only seven to twelve miles an hour, while the inside of the storm may be whirling at a rate of over 100 miles an hour.

DINNER STORIES

"Please let me have a bite to eat," asked the tramp at the back door, and Bridget let the dishevelled creature into the kitchen. He had no sooner taken one step inside the door, however, when Bridget bethought herself of her newly scrubbed floors.

"You'd better go out again and wipe your feet," she ordered severely.

"There really isn't much use, ma'am," the tramp replied. "I only walked a few steps; round to the back from my automobile."

NEWSY GOSSIP OF BIG CITIES

By LUTHER A. HUSTON.

TOKIO, Jan. 10.—This looks like a "winter of discontent" in Tokio and throughout Japan generally.

Widespread unemployment, coupled with abnormally high prices, is causing a great deal of unrest among the working classes. There is an increasing clamor for immediate relief measures by the government, and more attention is being given in official circles to the unemployment problem than ever before in Japan.

It is estimated that there are more than 100,000 unemployed in Japan. Naturally, since it is the capital and the largest city, the pressure is greater in Tokio than elsewhere in the country, and officials of the home department are endeavoring to devise some way of preventing the ingress of unemployed into Tokio from the country districts and smaller cities.

So serious has the problem become that a national meeting of officials in charge of the 155 intelligence offices of the home department, which deals with unemployment questions, was held in Tokio recently to discuss remedial measures. The meeting, however, failed to put forth any definite program, although a few temporary relief schemes were adopted.

One of the factors contributing to the unemployment situation is the retrenchment policy of the government. With an eye to governmental economy the Kato administration has been pruning the payroll persistently. Many thousands of government employes either have been dismissed from their posts or will be turned adrift shortly. These former government employes, seeking jobs in every line of industry, have caused a glue in the labor market.

Every department of the government has been affected to some extent by the retrenchment order. One of the hardest hit branches of the federal service is the army, which is to be reduced by four divisions. This will result in more than 1,000 army officers, to say nothing of a host of privates, being mustered into the ranks of the unemployed.

Practically, the unemployment has resulted in something of a business boom among shopkeepers in Tokio. The reason for this is that the government has given to all discharged employes a bonus, graded in amount according to the salary received. Millions of yen have been distributed in this way, the army alone dispensing more than 15,000,000 yen.

The result is that thousands of Japanese have more money, in a lump sum, that they ever had before. Regardless of the unpromising outlook for new jobs, they are spending this money freely and the retail stores report a thriving year-end business. The buying of women's clothes is particularly brisk.

Although all classes of workers are hit by the unemployment wave, it is the clerical and educated workers that are feeling the pinch the most. Graduates of the universities complain that it is almost impossible to find jobs. Many students are reported to have offered bribes to employment officials for preferment when positions are being assigned.

The only labor shortage reported is of school teachers. The Tokio primary schools, it is declared, are suffering from a dearth of teachers and are hard pressed to keep their staffs adequately manned to carry on the necessary school work.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—Sudden success does not always spoil the man but it sometimes makes his wife a ridiculous figure. New York literary circles have been particularly amused of late at the lorgnette attitude of the wife of a best selling novelist.

He is a square toed country boy as genuine as the virgin soil of his native state and as free of affectation as any successful human being might possibly be. But his wife has grown dizzy with superiority. She has taken on a triple ply British accent.

She has become frightfully bored with "Awmeer-ika"—accent on the second syllable. When his old friends call on him she takes on the air of remote but amused tolerance. She is not at all conscious of her middle class ancestry. Her father was an honest and energetic mille.

She wants her husband to be come master of hounds and to associate only with those of noble lineage. Due to his popularity, friends have been considerate of her. They have permitted her to get away with it in the hope it was a mere passing cranial inflation.

This case while conspicuous is not unusual. A divorce lawyer tells of three husbands, suddenly elevated to affluence, who were forced for their own peace of mind to separate from their wives because they could not stand the annoyance of their precipitate egoism.

Two of the wives had formerly been stenographers and the third was the attendant in a dentist's office. The minute prosperity struck them they shed their old friends as lightly as a tin roof sheds rain water and went in for the la-de-dah pose.

All Americans become bourgeoise and the only thing worth while is a home in Grosvenor square, London, or along the Bois in Paris. Of course, these wives who develop the grimace of distate for friends of other days wind up in pathetic solicitude. The veneer is too shallow for new friends as well as old.

A short while ago there was the patter of soft bare feet in the room where I work. My visitor was a five-year-old boy from down the hall. He was lonely. His mother is one typical of New York—a slinky creature, with a drawling voice, musky with heavy perfume and the kind who smokes cigarettes in the lobby waiting for the chauffeur. This boy knows her as some strange creature who pats him indifferently now and then and leaves him in charge of a governess. The husband is a brisk business man intent on piling up a fortune. Father and mother are never seen together. When the governess came I was in a ridiculous posture with the boy riding on my back. She sniffed and snatched him away. I looked foolish and the child began to whimper. I don't think he had really ever romped before.

George Jean Nathan is leading a group of the literati out of the thicket of restaurants and midnight supper clubs of the Roaring Forties into the wilderness of Second avenue. A group of the ultra Bohemians are opening their own little hide-a-way where a gypsy violinist will play real music and where the cover charge is to be just a dime. Only those who are really desired will be admitted.

Fannie Hurst, the writer, dresses in dazzling red frocks for evening. They are as much the part of her as Ora's Mann's wide winged collars. Miss Hurst, contrary to those who accepted the separate apartment marriage literally, is seen often with her husband. He is a tall, handsome fellow with wavy black hair and one of those apparently born to comfort in full evening dress.

TODAY

BY ARTHUR BRISBANE

(The opinions expressed in this column are strictly those of Mr. Brisbane and not necessarily in consonance with the policies of The Review-Tribune).

SAUSAGES, PANCAKES, LAW

Judge Gary, biggest man in steel, and John D. Rockefeller, Jr., biggest man in oil, ate breakfast and discussed prohibition enforcement with President Coolidge yesterday morning. They had sausages, coffee and buckwheat cakes. Discussion is easy, enforcement is difficult. Judge Gary said all officials must set the example, by obeying the dry law. They don't do it and won't do it. A congressman's wife edified about her husband's party in Washington, "there was the usual amount of drinking at a congressman's house." That's about how it is.

President Coolidge permits no alcoholic drink in the White House, drinks no stimulants himself. He represents a minority of one in ten among officials.

Mr. Rockefeller, also a total abstainer, says the public mind must be stirred. It has been stirred, but not toward prohibition.

Bootleggers, bootleg whisky, bootleg crime, hijacking, holdups, increase in drug use, bribe-taking enforcement officials, all the drink they want for rich men, etc., have turned the public mind toward the idea that prohibition does not prohibit. What can be done about the growing conviction that you cannot, by writing a law or a constitutional amendment, force men to change habits held for ages?

GHOST, DREAMS AND RELIGIONS

Santa Clara is agitated about ghosts that disturb a young boy and girl. Trances, the neighbors call the sleep in which strange visions frighten the children and superstitious neighbors.

Such visions and dreams, as old as the human race, are said by scientists to be responsible for the beginnings of religion and belief in another world.

The cave man, seeing his dead father in a strange dream, said on awaking, "then he's not entirely dead after all. I wonder where he went?"

The witch doctor and magician elaborated the idea, and many fancy pagan theories developed, with assorted ideas of heaven and hell. The way to avoid hell hereafter and tormenting by spirits now, was to be generous with the witch doctor. Fortunately we have a better religion.

MORE HAPPY LAMBS

Stocks went up again yesterday. Interest rate on call money went down. That is a combination as sweet as new spring grass to the little lamb. Money for stock speculation could be borrowed, all you wanted, for 2 per cent, lowest rate since November.

There is lots of money if your credit is good, or you have security. The big telephone company borrows $150,000,000 with the greatest ease.

"Please may I have $150,000,000 for improvements, Mr. Morgan?"

"Certainly," is the reply.

"Don't you need more?"

Telephone credit is very good.

Railroads that owe the government millions say that they want a lower interest rate, and will probably get it. That is fair, as the government loaned at 6 per cent war rates, and can borrow for 4 per cent, but the man that put a mortgage on his home at 6 per cent cannot arrange the rate so easily.

BOLIVIA'S RICHEST MAN

Senor Patino arrived from Bolivia yesterday. Two secretaries, a doctor, a valet and 50 pieces of luggage followed him down the gangplank. That means money, and he has it.

He is the richest man in Bolivia; owner of the biggest tin mine in the world. Tin is better than gold, if you get the right mine. Senor Patino, on his way to Spain as Bolivian minister, has at least $100,000,000.

In spite of all the money, this gentleman wishes to live and die in Bolivia, except for little trips. That will puzzle millions here who do not know just where Bolivia is, but wonder why a man "with the price" does not move into the American cabaret belt.

Wise nature makes the normal man think the sky, air and earth of his native land the finest in the world.

An Eskimo from the Arctic, a Zulu from the tropics, will both die of sorrow if you transplant them, even to Palm Beach.

Somebody representing the railroads will have to do some thinking and plan something, or respectable United States railroads are going to suffer no matter how much the government may do for them.

Motor trucks are robbing the roads of short haul freight, and the long haul goes more and more by canal wherever it can. Mr. Thom for the railroads says so.

Do railroads intend to meet new conditions or just die out, like the dinosaur, when his time came and the rat gnawed his big feet?

The motor truck and flying machine will be the rats of the railroad dinosaur.

Direct Vote for President

The Ohio legislature, undertaking to revise its archaic election laws, is considering a proposal intended to do away with the present round-about method of voting for president of the United States.

The state legislature, of course, cannot change the federal constitution, which still requires voting for electors, who in turn elect the president and vice president. The legislators propose to get around the difficulty by having the list of electors representing each pair of candidates filed with the secretary of state instead of being printed on the ballots. The ballots will bear the names of the presidential and vice presidential candidates, which will permit direct voting for those officials. The electors will be required, at the meeting of the electoral college, to cast their ballots for the choice indicated on the ballots.

This is not really an innovation, nor is its legality questionable. It has been done in Iowa and Nebraska, and has been held valid by the courts. It makes a presidential election more intelligible to the voters and makes them feel that their votes really count in choosing their chief executive. It looks like a good way to get around the awkward constitutional requirement until such time as a federal amendment can be adopted bringing the constitutional machinery into harmony with modern facts.

Tornado alarms have been perfected, giving warning a minute or two in advance of the danger, but even they rarely suffice to save lives or property. Persons caught in the path of one of these terrific storms are simply out of luck, unless they have cyclone cellars handy and have the presence of mind to dive into them at the first signs of danger.

The term cyclone was originally applied to the violent rotary tempests of the tropical and sub-tropical regions, called in the West Indies hurricanes; in Senegal, tornadoes; at the Cape of Good Hope, trovadoes; in the Chinese sea, typhoons, and on the west coast of Central America, papagallos.

Since the discovery of the rotary course of winds even at a distance from the tropics the term cyclone has been applied to any system of winds blowing a center of low pressure, and a cyclone is distinguished from an ati-cyclone, which is a system of winds with a center of high pressure.

Any flowing together of the air between two anti-cyclones must produce a cyclone, and it has been shown that the unequal heating effects of land and water surfaces may be sufficient to initiate cyclonic and anti-cyclonic action.

Storms move eastward in the middle latitudes and westward in the tropics, and rotate counter-clockwise in the northern hemisphere and in the opposite direction in the southern hemisphere. In the case of some tropical storms, the storm itself may move at a speed of only seven to twelve miles an hour, while the inside of the storm may be whirling at a rate of over 100 miles an hour.

DINNER STORIES

"Please let me have a bite to eat," asked the tramp at the back door, and Bridget let the dishevelled creature into the kitchen. He had no sooner taken one step inside the door, however, when Bridget bethought herself of her newly scrubbed floors.

"You'd better go out again and wipe your feet," she ordered severely.

"There really isn't much use, ma'am," the tramp replied. "I only walked a few steps; round to the back from my automobile."

A lawyer was arguing with a physician over the relative merits of their respective professions.

"I don't say that all lawyers are villains," said the doctor, "but you'll admit that your profession doesn't make angels of men."

"No," retorted the lawyer, "you doctors certainly have the best of us there."

NEWSY GOSSIP OF BIG CITIES

By LUTHER A. HUSTON.

TOKIO, Jan. 10.—This looks like a "winter of discontent" in Tokio and throughout Japan generally.

Widespread unemployment, coupled with abnormally high prices, is causing a great deal of unrest among the working classes. There is an increasing clamor for immediate relief measures by the government, and more attention is being given in official circles to the unemployment problem than ever before in Japan.

It is estimated that there are more than 100,000 unemployed in Japan. Naturally, since it is the capital and the largest city, the pressure is greater in Tokio than elsewhere in the country, and officials of the home department are endeavoring to devise some way of preventing the ingress of unemployed into Tokio from the country districts and smaller cities.

So serious has the problem become that a national meeting of officials in charge of the 155 intelligence offices of the home department, which deals with unemployment questions, was held in Tokio recently to discuss remedial measures. The meeting, however, failed to put forth any definite program, although a few temporary relief schemes were adopted.

One of the factors contributing to the unemployment situation is the retrenchment policy of the government. With an eye to governmental economy the Kato administration has been pruning the payroll persistently. Many thousands of government employes either have been dismissed from their posts or will be turned adrift shortly. These former government employes, seeking jobs in every line of industry, have caused a glue in the labor market.

Every department of the government has been affected to some extent by the retrenchment order. One of the hardest hit branches of the federal service is the army, which is to be reduced by four divisions. This will result in more than 1,000 army officers, to say nothing of a host of privates, being mustered into the ranks of the unemployed.

Practically, the unemployment has resulted in something of a business boom among shopkeepers in Tokio. The reason for this is that the government has given to all discharged employes a bonus, graded in amount according to the salary received. Millions of yen have been distributed in this way, the army alone dispensing more than 15,000,000 yen.

The result is that thousands of Japanese have more money, in a lump sum, that they ever had before. Regardless of the unpromising outlook for new jobs, they are spending this money freely and the retail stores report a thriving year-end business. The buying of women's clothes is particularly brisk.

Although all classes of workers are hit by the unemployment wave, it is the clerical and educated workers that are feeling the pinch the most. Graduates of the universities complain that it is almost impossible to find jobs. Many students are reported to have offered bribes to employment officials for preferment when positions are being assigned.

The only labor shortage reported is of school teachers. The Tokio primary schools, it is declared, are suffering from a dearth of teachers and are hard pressed to keep their staffs adequately manned to carry on the necessary school work.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—Sudden success does not always spoil the man but it sometimes makes his wife a ridiculous figure. New York literary circles have been particularly amused of late at the lorgnette attitude of the wife of a best selling novelist.

He is a square toed country boy as genuine as the virgin soil of his native state and as free of affectation as any successful human being might possibly be. But his wife has grown dizzy with superiority. She has taken on a triple ply British accent.

She has become frightfully bored with "Awmeer-ika"—accent on the second syllable. When his old friends call on him she takes on the air of remote but amused tolerance. She is not at all conscious of her middle class ancestry. Her father was an honest and energetic mille.

She wants her husband to be come master of hounds and to associate only with those of noble lineage. Due to his popularity, friends have been considerate of her. They have permitted her to get away with it in the hope it was a mere passing cranial inflation.

This case while conspicuous is not unusual. A divorce lawyer tells of three husbands, suddenly elevated to affluence, who were forced for their own peace of mind to separate from their wives because they could not stand the annoyance of their precipitate egoism.

Two of the wives had formerly been stenographers and the third was the attendant in a dentist's office. The minute prosperity struck them they shed their old friends as lightly as a tin roof sheds rain water and went in for the la-de-dah pose.

All Americans become bourgeoise and the only thing worth while is a home in Grosvenor square, London, or along the Bois in Paris. Of course, these wives who develop the grimace of distate for friends of other days wind up in pathetic solicitude. The veneer is too shallow for new friends as well as old.

A short while ago there was the patter of soft bare feet in the room where I work. My visitor was a five-year-old boy from down the hall. He was lonely. His mother is one typical of New York—a slinky creature, with a drawling voice, musky with heavy perfume and the kind who smokes cigarettes in the lobby waiting for the chauffeur. This boy knows her as some strange creature who pats him indifferently now and then and leaves him in charge of a governess. The husband is a brisk business man intent on piling up a fortune. Father and mother are never seen together. When the governess came I was in a ridiculous posture with the boy riding on my back. She sniffed and snatched him away. I looked foolish and the child began to whimper. I don't think he had really ever romped before.

George Jean Nathan is leading a group of the literati out of the thicket of restaurants and midnight supper clubs of the Roaring Forties into the wilderness of Second avenue. A group of the ultra Bohemians are opening their own little hide-a-way where a gypsy violinist will play real music and where the cover charge is to be just a dime. Only those who are really desired will be admitted.

Fannie Hurst, the writer, dresses in dazzling red frocks for evening. They are as much the part of her as Otis Mann's wide winged collars. Miss Hurst, contrary to those who accepted the separate apartment marriage literally, is seen often with her husband. He is a tall, handsome fellow with wavy black hair and one of those apparently born to comfort in full evening dress.

TODAY

BY ARTHUR BRISBANE

(The opinions expressed in this column are strictly those of Mr. Brisbane and not necessarily in consonance with the policies of The Review-Tribune).

SAUSAGES, PANCAKES, LAW

Judge Gary, biggest man in steel, and John D. Rockefeller, Jr., biggest man in oil, ate breakfast and discussed prohibition enforcement with President Coolidge yesterday morning. They had sausages, coffee and buckwheat cakes. Discussion is easy, enforcement is difficult. Judge Gary said all officials must set the example, by obeying the dry law. They don't do it and won't do it. A congressman's wife testified about her husband's party in Washington, "there was the usual amount of drinking at a congressman's house." That's about how it is.

President Coolidge permits no alcoholic drink in the White House, drinks no stimulants himself. He represents a minority of one in ten among officials.

Mr. Rockefeller, also a total abstainer, says the public mind must be stirred. It has been stirred, but not toward prohibition.

Bootleggers, bootleg whisky, bootleg crime, hijacking, holdups, increase in drug use, bribe-taking enforcement officials, all the drink they want for rich men, etc., have turned the public mind toward the idea that prohibition does not prohibit. What can be done about the growing conviction that you cannot, by writing a law or a constitutional amendment, force men to change habits held for ages?

GHOST, DREAMS AND RELIGIONS

Santa Clara is agitated about ghosts that disturb a young boy and girl. Trances, the neighbors call the sleep in which strange visions frighten the children and superstitious neighbors.

Such visions and dreams, as old as the human race, are said by scientists to be responsible for the beginnings of religion and belief in another world.

The cave man, seeing his dead father in a strange dream, said on awaking, "then he's not entirely dead after all. I wonder where he went?"

The witch doctor and magician elaborated the idea, and many fancy pagan theories developed, with assorted ideas of heaven and hell. The way to avoid hell hereafter and tormenting by spirits now, was to be generous with the witch doctor. Fortunately we have a better religion.

MORE HAPPY LAMBS

Stocks went up again yesterday. Interest rate on call money went down. That is a combination as sweet as new spring grass to the little lamb. Money for stock speculation could be borrowed, all you wanted, for 2 per cent, lowest rate since November.

There is lots of money if your credit is good, or you have security. The big telephone company borrows $150,000,000 with the greatest ease.

"Please may I have $150,000,000 for improvements, Mr. Morgan?"

"Certainly," is the reply.

"Don't you need more?"

Telephone credit is very good.

Railroads that owe the government millions say that they want a lower interest rate, and will probably get it. That is fair, as the government loaned at 6 per cent war rates, and can borrow for 4 per cent, but the man that put a mortgage on his home at 6 per cent cannot arrange the rate so easily.

BOLIVIA'S RICHEST MAN

Senor Patino arrived from Bolivia yesterday. Two secretaries, a doctor, a valet and 50 pieces of luggage followed him down the gangplank. That means money, and he has it.

He is the richest man in Bolivia; owner of the biggest tin mine in the world. Tin is better than gold, if you get the right mine. Senor Patino, on his way to Spain as Bolivian minister, has at least $100,000,000.

In spite of all the money, this gentleman wishes to live and die in Bolivia, except for little trips. That will puzzle millions here who do not know just where Bolivia is, but wonder why a man "with the price" does not move into the American cabaret belt.

Wise nature makes the normal man think the sky, air and earth of his native land the finest in the world.

An Eskimo from the Arctic, a Zulu from the tropics, will both die of sorrow if you transplant them, even to Palm Beach.

Somebody representing the railroads will have to do some thinking and plan something, or respectable United States railroads are going to suffer no matter how much the government may do for them.

Motor trucks are robbing the roads of short haul freight, and the long haul goes more and more by canal wherever it can. Mr. Thom for the railroads says so.

Do railroads intend to meet new conditions or just die out, like the dinosaur, when his time came and the rat gnawed his big feet?

The motor truck and flying machine will be the rats of the railroad dinosaur.

Christmas cheer don't need t' vanish jest because th' sun
Dropped last night t' tell yuh thet

Yuh kin keep it lastin' through th'

Keep a givin' ev'ry day a priceless

day ef yuh will start
Walkin' down life's dusty trail with Christmas in yer heart.

Q. When is the bridge between Buffalo and Fort Erie to be built? W. S. P.

A. The proposed bridge between Buffalo and Ft. Erie is still under consideration by the war department. Both Canadian and congressional authority have been obtained.

Q. How much food must be carried for dogs that pull sleds in the far north? H. M. F.

A. Each dog will eat two pounds of food per day. A team of 15 dogs pulling a load of from 1,000 to 1,500 pounds will eat the equivalent of its load in from 35 to 50 days.

Q. Is it true that a person dreaming of falling from a great height will die from the shock if he does not awaken before he hits the ground in his dream fall? S. I. D.

A. Physicians say that such an idea is ridiculous, although this is not susceptible of absolute proof, for if any man has ever died from the shock of landing at the bottom of a dream fall he has never had a chance to tell the world about it.

Q. When was an effective police system established in England? J. C. H.

A. Sir Robert Peel established a system in 1829 which resulted in a great diminishing of crime.

Q. What is meant by an "absolute adjective? Is 'stright" one? S. McN.

A. Some qualities are incapable of comparison because they already are so absolutely expressed that one can not think of them as greater or less. For example "round," "square," "unique." Straight can be compared, hence it is not an absolute adjective.

Q. Under what circumstances did Verdi write "Aida?" N. V.

A. Ismail Pasha, Khedive of Turkey, commissioned Guiseppe Verdi to write "Aida" for the opening of the Cairo Opera House.

Q. What is a copyright, and what the earliest instance thereof? O. M.

A. Copyright is a right given by law for a limited number of years (in the United States 28 years from the date of first publication) to the author or originator of an intellectual production, or to his assignee. It is intended to secure to him the exclusive right to his writing or other production, and to make reproductions thereof. According to Justinian a law was passed securing to the scribes by whom books were written the property in the materials used; and in this way, perhaps, he traced the first germ of the modern law of copyright.

Grip Left You a Bad Back?

IS winter time your backache time? Are you lame, stiff and achy; tortured with constant backache and sharp stabs of pain?

Look, then, to your kidneys! Grip, colds and chills weaken the kidneys and prevent them from properly filtering the blood. Then follows nerve-racking backache, sudden stabs of pain, headaches, dizziness and annoying kidney irregularities. You feel weak, tired—all worn out.

Don't wait! Delay may prove serious. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have helped thousands. They should help you. Ask your neighbor!

CHESTER FLOOR TEAMS DIVIDE

Boys' Team Defeated by Wellsville; Girls Win Victory.

Chester High school basketball teams divided the games played last night on the Rock Springs park floor with the Wellsville aggregation. The boys' team went down to defeat by a score of 26 to 22 while the girls won, score 27 to 15.

The contest between the boys' teams was one of the fastest witnessed here this season and was close throughout, the visitors only making sure of victory in the closing minutes of play.

Chester girls clinched the victory in the first half leading at the ending of the period by a score of 21 to 8.

Myers started the scoring for Chester right off the reel by tossing a field goal. Dickey hung one point for Wellsville with a foul. Pinney added a point to Chester's score on a free throw and Dickey on the next play scored a single tally for the visitors. Dickey put his team in front with a field goal. The first quarter closed with Dickey scoring another two pointer making the score, 6 to 3 with the visitors on the long end.

Bennett opened the second period for Chester by scoring on a free toss. Scholl placed a point to his team's credit by tossing a foul. A moment later he countered with a pretty field goal from the center of the floor. Simcox cut down the visitors' lead when he shot a foul and field goal in rapid succession. Myers tied up the battle by scoring from the field. Myers scored another foul and Dickey came through with a field goal again putting Wellsville in the lead. Pinney scored for Chester and Dickey tossed in a double marker for the visitors. Pinney hurled a field goal through the net and the first half closed with Chester leading by a score of 14 to 13.

Weekly and Pignatore started out the third period of play by scoring field goals for Wellsville. Dickey then tossed a foul. The quarter ended with the score standing 19 to 14 in favor of Zimmerman's charges. The last quarter was fast and exciting with Chester making a strong bid for victory. Myers and Pinney scored single markers and Bennett raised the hopes of victory by landing a field goal for Chester. Weekly then scored from the field and Scholl came to the front with another double decker. Pinney kept his team in the running by scoring a field goal. Dickey scored again for Wellsville and just before the bell sounded Bennett caged a two pointer for Chester.

W. Dickey was the individual star of the game. He made half the points scored by his team. His teammates also played good basketball. Pinney, Bennett, Myers, Campbell, Simcox were the leading performers for Chester.

Chester girls put the game on ice in the first half of the game. Wellsville girls braced in the second half but could not overcome the big lead. Miss Paisley was the scoring star for Chester scoring all but two of the points scored by her team. The Misses Smith, Skinner, Mercer, Maple, Mercer and Thomas played well for the home squad while Misses Hogenmiller, Weekly, Nelson and Foley did stellar work for Wellsville.

The Good MAXWELL

MAXWELL

THE DOUBLE HOUSE

By Elizabeth Dejeans

She got out of bed, put on her slippers, and hastily washed the sleep out of her eyes, her ears assailed meanwhile by Clarice's angry demands: "here is my hat? Father had no business bringing me here! I don't know this woman—I won't live in her house!"

Then Mary Bliss came limping in wringing her hands. "You were asleep!" She says she won't stay here. She is going away and that man will get her again. He'll hurt her!"

"Hush!" Karesia commanded. "She shall not go a step!" The girl's angry defiance of Dascome had aroused instantly the combative in Karesia.

She went swiftly through the hall and into her own room, an impressive vision, swathed in oriental crepe, a mass of tumbled hair above brows lowered into a straight line. "What is the trouble, Miss Dascome?" she demanded curtly. "I am Mrs. Kaime."

Clarice was searching for her hat in the glazed room. She whirled about and Karesia looked into great gray eyes flushed by anger. They were Dascome's eyes and yet they were not; they were rounder, steadfast, but with a different quality. There were spots of hot color in her cheeks. Yet, despite the girl's defiant expression, Karesia granted that she was as beautiful a creature as she had ever seen.

Clarice took swift note of Karesia's exotic appearance and vivid contempt sprang into her eyes. "I am looking for my hat, madame, so that I can leave your house. My father objects to my friends—well, I object to his!"

Karesia's eyes narrowed still more. "You had no hat. You were carried in here like a senseless log."

Evidently the girl was not callous, for her throat as well as her face flushed. She retorted passionately: "Father had no business to bring me here!"

Angry, though she was, Karesia hesitated; what she was going to say would hurt. "Your father did not bring you here," she said in a softer tone. "It was someone else who brought you. He happened to go to the house where you were, and he felt that he could not leave you there in that condition, so he brought you here. Whatever his opinion of you, he did the decent thing. He has known me for a number of years and he knew that you would be safe in my house. It was Randsome Rossiter who carried you in here and asked me to look after you."

Karesia had known that it would hurt; she had not realized that it would hurt so much. The color drained slowly from Clarice's face and her eyes grew as vague and filmed almost as Mary Bliss'. She groped for the couch, sat down, and stared across the canyon at Rossiter Hill. Mary Bliss, who had hung in the background, whimpered. She may not have understood just what had been said, but she knew suffering when she saw it. She crept from behind Karesia and stole to Clarice's side, knelt and stroked her hand, "You won't go away?" she pleaded. "Please don't go away."

Karesia continued: "Your father was searching for you last night. He was desperately anxious and frightened. Then Mr. Rossiter told him that he had brought you here. Then Mr. Dascome came to see me. It seemed best for all concerned that you should not go back to the hotel. Mr. Rossiter himself felt that he could not take you there. Tomorrow, this will be your home, I am moving my personal belongings into the next house today. Mary Bliss will put the spare room in order and, if you will occupy it while I am busied with the moving, I shall be glad. . . . Shall I, or will you telephone your father to send your things?"

Clarice was looking at Rossiter Hill. "Yes. I don't care," she said in a smothered way. "Tell father whatever you want to. I don't see why he bothered to take me away last night." She was still looking at Rossiter Hill.

Karesia recognized the wistful note, and her anger melted. But she was not in a position to administer comfort—far from it. There was hard fibre in the girl and a reckless spirit; and her attitude to her father was abominable. "I suppose, because Rand, like most men, does not like to see a girl's self-respect go under. There are those whom it amuses, of course, but Rand is not that sort."

The way in which Clarice turned and looked at her reminded Karesia poignantly of Dascome, a gaze unwaveringly steadfast. "You know him well, then?" she asked as quietly as Dascome would have asked the question.

"She has plenty of self-control if she chooses to use it," Karesia reflected. "Yes, very well," she returned steadily. "He comes here often to see me and invites me to his house." It was as well for the girl to realize at once; it would save trouble later on.

Clarice looked down. Mary Bliss was still crouched beside her, stroking her hands. Just how the woman had introduced herself, Karesia did not know, but it was evident that Clarice did not shrink from her. "You will stay, won't you?" Mary Bliss begged, now she seemed to have Clarice's attention.

Clarice's "Yes," sounded like Dascome. She looked then full at Karesia and in the colder than blue-gray of her eyes Karesia read a hatred as intense as one woman can bear another and yet remain veiled behind forced politeness. "I am sorry I kept you out of your room last night, Mrs. Kaime. May I go to the spare room now?"

"Mary Bliss will take you there. The room I was in, Mary. I shall have breakfast sent up to you."

Mary Bliss hurried off with her pathetic approach to a smile, and Karesia turned away with all the dignity of aloofness, an expression that became her, eyelids lowered in apparently sleepy indifference and brow thoughtful. She moved about in the next room, apparently unconscious of Clarice's existence, laid out her dress for the day, prepared for her bath. Clarice's eyes followed Karesia's movements, now undulating, now swift; noted Karesia's yard and a half of hair, her supple body, and her lovely skin and splendid throat.

Karesia was glad when she was free to look as she felt; a tremendous sympathy for Dascome and pity for Clarice commingled with the restless feeling that he girl would stab her if she could. What Karesia resented was Clarice's attitude to her father. "That's the thing I can't forgive, not what she said to me." was Karesia's conclusion.

She got out of bed, put on her slippers, and hastily washed the sleep out of her eyes, her ears assailed meanwhile by Clarice's angry demands: "here is my hat? Father had no business bringing me here! I don't know this woman—I won't live in her house!"

Then Mary Bliss came limping in wringing her hands. "You were asleep!" She says she won't stay here. She is going away and that man will get her again. He'll hurt her!"

"Hush!" Karesia commanded. "She shall not go a step!" The girl's angry defiance of Dascome had aroused instantly the combative in Karesia.

She went swiftly through the hall and into her own room, an impressive vision, swathed in oriental crepe, a mass of tumbled hair above brows lowered into a straight line. "What is the trouble, Miss Dascome?" she demanded curtly. "I am Mrs. Kaime."

Clarice was searching for her hat in the glazed room. She whirled about and Karesia looked into great gray eyes flushed by anger. They were Dascome's eyes and yet they were not; they were rounder, steadfast, but with a different quality. There were spots of hot color in her cheeks. Yet, despite the girl's defiant expression, Karesia granted that she was as beautiful a creature as she had ever seen.

Clarice took swift note of Karesia's exotic appearance and vivid contempt sprang into her eyes. "I am looking for my hat, madame, so that I can leave your house. My father objects to my friends—well, I object to his!"

Karesia's eyes narrowed still more. "You had no hat. You were carried in here like a senseless log."

Evidently the girl was not callous, for her throat as well as her face flushed. She retorted passionately: "Father had no business to bring me here!"

Angry, though she was, Karesia hesitated; what she was going to say would hurt. "Your father did not bring you here," she said in a softer tone. "It was someone else who brought you. He happened to go to the house where you were, and he felt that he could not leave you there in that condition, so he brought you here. Whatever his opinion of you, he did the decent thing. He has known me for a number of years and he knew that you would be safe in my house. It was Randsome Rossiter who carried you in here and asked me to look after you."

Karesia had known that it would hurt; she had not realized that it would hurt so much. The color drained slowly from Clarice's face and her eyes grew as vague and filmed almost as Mary Bliss'. She groped for the couch, sat down, and stared across the canyon at Rossiter Hill. Mary Bliss, who had hung in the background, whimpered. She may not have understood just what had been said, but she knew suffering when she saw it. She crept from behind Karesia and stole to Clarice's side, knelt and stroked her hand, "You won't go away?" she pleaded. "Please don't go away."

Karesia continued: "Your father was searching for you last night. He was desperately anxious and frightened. Then Mr. Rossiter told him that he had brought you here. Then Mr. Dascome came to see me. It seemed best for all concerned that you should not go back to the hotel. Mr. Rossiter himself felt that he could not take you there. Tomorrow, this will be your home, I am moving my personal belongings into the next house today. Mary Bliss will put the spare room in order and, if you will occupy it while I am busied with the moving, I shall be glad. . . . Shall I, or will you telephone your father to send your things?"

Clarice was looking at Rossiter Hill. "Yes. I don't care," she said in a smothered way. "Tell father whatever you want to. I don't see why he bothered to take me away last night." She was still looking at Rossiter Hill.

Karesia recognized the wistful note, and her anger melted. But she was not in a position to administer comfort—far from it. There was hard fibre in the girl and a reckless spirit; and her attitude to her father was abominable. "I suppose, because Rand, like most men, does not like to see a girl's self respect go under. There are those whom it amuses, of course, but Rand is not that sort."

The way in which Clarice turned and looked at her reminded Karesia poignantly of Dascome, a gaze unwaveringly steadfast. "You know him well, then?" she asked as quietly as Dascome would have asked the question.

"She has plenty of self-control if she chooses to use it," Karesia reflected. "Yes, very well," she returned steadily. "He comes here often to see me and invites me to his house." It was as well for the girl to realize at once; it would save trouble later on.

Clarice looked down. Mary Bliss was still crouched beside her, stroking her hands. Just how the woman had introduced herself, Karesia did not know, but it was evident that Clarice did not shrink from her. "You will stay, won't you?" Mary Bliss begged, now she seemed to have Clarice's attention.

Clarice's "Yes," sounded like Dascome. She looked then full at Karesia and in the colder than blue-gray of her eyes Karesia read a hatred as intense as one woman can bear another and yet remain veiled behind forced politeness. "I am sorry I kept you out of your room last night, Mrs. Kaime. May I go to the spare room now?"

"Mary Bliss will take you there. The room I was in, Mary. I shall have breakfast sent up to you."

Mary Bliss hurried off with her pathetic approach to a smile, and Karesia turned away with all the dignity of aloofness, an expression that became her, eyelids lowered in apparently sleepy indifference and brow thoughtful. She moved about in the next room, apparently unconscious of Clarice's existence, laid out her dress for the day, prepared for her bath. Clarice's eyes followed Karesia's movements, now undulating, now swift; noted Karesia's yard and a half of hair, her supple body, and her lovely skin and splendid throat.

Karesia was glad when she was free to look as she felt; a tremendous sympathy for Dascome and pity for Clarice commingled with the restless feeling that he girl would stab her if she could. What Karesia resented was Clarice's attitude to her father. "That's the thing I can't forgive, not what she said to me," was Karesia's conclusion.

What the Sunday School Is Studying

The Last Judgment.

Christ's Picture of the Grand Scene. International Lesson for January 11. —Matthew 25:31-46.

By JAMES H. SNOWDEN, D. D.

Every day, as Ruskin says, is a day of judgment and irrevocably writes its verdict in the flames of the west. This principle is woven into the whole web of the world, and were judgment withdrawn from its warp and woof our world would lose its deepest meaning and would fall to pieces in the self-destruction of sin. This fact of judgment runs up to its grand conclusion and climax in the final day of judgment, and the Master handles the great theme in this discourse with the ease of deity.

The Grand Scene.

The stupendous scene opens with the Son of Man, having come in his glory with his angels, sitting on the throne. Jesus does not hesitate to put himself on this throne, yet this amazing assumption excites in us no thought of absurdity or presumption on his part but seems to him perfectly natural. Before him shall be gathered all nations, a vast multitude whom no man can number. But the vastness of the multitude will put no undue strain upon the powers of the Judge and will afford no possibility of escape to any single soul. Discrimination and separation will mark that day. Here all are mixed in one mass in which their true nature in some degree is obscured and hidden, but at the last day this infinitely knotted skein shall be untangled and straightened out and every thread shall be seen in its true form and color. Let us not think that because we are all living together here we are all going to the same place.

The Principle of Judgment.

What is the principle of separation? Shall any favoritism or prejudice or unfairness influence the decisions? Abraham answered this question when he exclaimed, Shall not the Judge of all the earth do right? The King first pronounces judgment upon the righteous, bidding them to come to him. The reward of the righteous is fellowship with the righteous King—is not this fair? The grounds of the reward are then announced, and they are the everyday deeds of a good life, the outflowing of a loving heart through a helping hand. Giving drink to the thirsty and clothing to the naked and visiting the sick—these are not conspicuous and heroic deeds that attract attention and seem to call for special recognition and reward, but are just the common acts of goodness that should be sown broadcast as seed every day, "the little, nameless, unremembered acts of kindness and of love that make the best portion of the good man's life." The principle of the judgment is that the life in this world shall be the basis of reward in the next world. This invests the present life with enormous responsibility. Every deed instantly crystalizes into character and destiny, drops into the soul a seed that will bear its final fruit on the day of judgment. No good deed of ours is ever lost, but is stored up against that day. Righteous living is even now fashioning for us that righteous crown which shall shine as the stars forever.

Unconscious Goodness.

The righteous express surprise at the judgment of the King and inquire when they had done these good things. This reveals the unconsciousness of perfected goodness. Unconsciousness of self in the final touch of perfection in any art or attainment. Not until we have forgotten the processes by which we have acquired skill do we have perfect skill. No one has good manners who is thinking about manners; the person of polished manners exercises them with unconscious ease and grace. It is just so in our growth in goodness. As long as our virtues are a matter of conscious thought and effort, they are imperfect. Does a perfectly honest man have to try to be honest? No, he is honest without trying. He may never thing of his honesty and would be surprised if he were told of it. So these righteous ones on the day of judgment were surprised at their own good deeds as though they had never heard of them before. These deeds grew out of them spontaneously and vitally as leaves out of a tree and necessarily expressed their own inner nature. They had done these things to the brethren of Christ, the poor and sick and imprisoned, and this was just the same as doing them to him. Every good deed is done to Christ, though we may know it not. The garb of a stranger may conceal his presence; treat that stranger as you would the Lord Christ. We are thus all the while doing things the significence of which we shall never know until it flashes out in the day of judgment.

The Law of Retribution.

The retribution of the wicked follows the same law as the reward of the righteous. Deeds done in the body are the test; seed sown in this world determine the harvest reaped in the next. Eternal judgment is no unjust application of an arbitrary principle, or the caprice of an unrighteous judge, but is just the fair and square outcome of the life lived here on earth. Whatsoever we sow we shall also reap.

SUNDAY SCHOOL, CHURCH FORUM

(Send problems in question form to Church Editor; answers will appear in later issue).

1. Give some reasons for dropping a member from the Sunday school.

Removal from the community, death, irregular attendance, unworthy conduct, joining some other Sunday school.

2. What are some Sunday amusements to be considered apart from the appointed church services for the day?

Supervised Sunday walks, moving pictures selected and conducted by the church, good music such as may be carried on in community singing and singing in the home, participating in good musical programs using different musical instruments, Sunday lectures especially planned for childhood and youth, Sunday story-telling, Bible information games, and such other games as may be played in keeping with the spirit of the day.

3. Should a Sunday school library be general or for departments?

Probably handled best by having both plans. By a general library is meant having one place in the building where all the books are kept and where the pupils will go to get their books. There are advantages in this plan if books are well chosen and in charge of a competent librarian, who will give out books suitable for pupils asking for them, refusing to let any pupil have a book not adapted for that age.

The advantage in the library for departments is that there can be betwise not to have too many books in ter supervision of the reading. It is the department library at one time. The surplus may be kept in the general library, or stored some place. Pupils are not apt to ask for a book that has been on the shelf, where they can see it, for a long time. Without question a carefully selected library in each department is better than a general library.

HOME TRAINING

A Mental Fall Preceds a Moral Fall.

"Say, what has become of Mr. A? We were class mates in college! I knew him as a boy," said Mr. McDonald to his visitor.

"Oh, have you not heard? No one knows where he is now. He was forced to leave his city because of an immoral deed, which not only meant disgrace to his own home but the ruination of another family."

"Well, I am not greatly surprised. Do you know that when he was a small boy he seemed to enjoy dirty stories, and when in college he reveled in impure thoughts."

"He sometimes would imagine certain conditions and how he would proceed under those conditions to accomplish questionable objectives."

"But, Mr. McDonald, he was the most highly respected citizen in his town and his mistake was a shocking surprise to everybody."

"It is not a surprise to me for he fell mentally when a boy and again as a young man in college; while he may have succeeded for a time to cover his mental fall, when imagined conditions were realized the mental fall was pronounced a moral fall."

What the Sunday School Is Studying

The Last Judgment.

Christ's Picture of the Grand Scene. International Lesson for January 11. —Matthew 25:31-46.

By JAMES H. SNOWDEN, D. D.

Every day, as Ruskin says, is a day of judgment and irrevocably writes its verdict in the flames of the west. This principle is woven into the whole web of the world, and were judgment withdrawn from its warp and woof our world would lose its deepest meaning and would fall to pieces in the self-destruction of sin. This fact of judgment runs up to its grand conclusion and climax in the final day of judgment, and the Master handles the great theme in this discourse with the ease of deity.

The Grand Scene.

The stupendous scene opens with the Son of Man, having come in his glory with his angels, sitting on the throne. Jesus does not hesitate to put himself on this throne, yet this amazing assumption excites in us no thought of absurdity or presumption on his part but seems to him perfectly natural. Before him shall be gathered all nations, a vast multitude whom no man can number. But the vastness of the multitude will put no undue strain upon the powers of the Judge and will afford no possibility of escape to any single soul. Discrimination and separation will mark that day. Here all are mixed in one mass in which their true nature in some degree is obscured and hidden, but at the last day this infinitely knotted skein shall be untangled and straightened out and every thread shall be seen in its true form and color. Let us not think that because we are all living together here we are all going to the same place.

The Principle of Judgment.

What is the principle of separation? Shall any favoritism or prejudice or unfairness influence the decisions? Abraham answered this question when he exclaimed, Shall not the Judge of all the earth do right? The King first pronounces judgment upon the righteous, bidding them to come to him. The reward of the righteous is fellowship with the righteous King—is not this fair? The grounds of the reward are then announced, and they are the everyday deeds of a good life, the outflowing of a loving heart through a helping hand. Giving drink to the thirsty and clothing to the naked and visiting the sick — these are not conspicuous and heroic deeds that attract attention and seem to call for special recognition and reward, but are just the common acts of goodness that should be sown broadcast as seed every day, "the little, nameless, unremembered acts of kindness and of love that make the best portion of the good man's life." The principle of the judgment is that the life in this world shall be the basis of reward in the next world. This invests the present life with enormous responsibility. Every deed instantly crystalizes into character and destiny, drops into the soul a seed that will bear its final fruit on the day of judgment. No good deed of ours is ever lost, but is stored up against that day. Righteous living is even now fashioning for us that righteous crown which shall shine as the stars forever.

Unconscious Goodness.

The righteous express surprise at the judgment of the King and inquire when they had done these good things. This reveals the unconsciousness of perfected goodness. Unconsciousness of self in the final touch of perfection in any art or attainment. Not until we have forgotten the processes by which we have acquired skill do we have perfect skill. No one has good manners who is thinking about manners; the person of polished manners exercises them with unconscious ease and grace. It is just so in our growth in goodness. As long as our virtues are a matter of conscious thought and effort, they are imperfect. Does a perfectly honest man have to try to be honest? No, he is honest without trying. He may never thing of his honesty and would be surprised if he were told of it. So these righteous ones on the day of judgment were surprised at their own good deeds as though they had never heard of them before. These deeds grew out of them spontaneously and vitally as leaves out of a tree and necessarily expressed their own inner nature. They had done these things to the brethren of Christ, the poor and sick and imprisoned, and this was just the same as doing them to him. Every good deed is done to Christ, though we may know it not. The garb of a stranger may conceal his presence; treat that stranger as you would the Lord Christ. We are thus all the while doing things the significence of which we shall never know until it flashes out in the day of judgment.

The Law of Retribution.

The retribution of the wicked follows the same law as the reward of the righteous. Deeds done in the body are the test; seed sown in this world determine the harvest reaped in the next. Eternal judgment is no unjust application of an arbitrary principle, or the caprice of an unrighteous judge, but is just the fair and square outcome of the life lived here on earth. Whatsoever we sow we shall also reap.

SUNDAY SCHOOL, CHURCH FORUM

(Send problems in question form to Church Editor; answers will appear in later issue).

1. Give some reasons for dropping a member from the Sunday school.

Removal from the community, death, irregular attendance, unworthy conduct, joining some other Sunday school.

2. What are some Sunday amusements to be considered apart from the appointed church services for the day?

Supervised Sunday walks, moving pictures selected and conducted by the church, good music such as may be carried on in community singing and singing in the home, participating in good musical programs using different musical instruments, Sunday lectures especially planned for childhood and youth, Sunday story-telling, Bible information games, and such other games as may be played in keeping with the spirit of the day.

3. Should a Sunday school library be general or for departments?

Probably handled best by having both plans. By a general library is meant having one place in the building where all the books are kept and where the pupils will go to get their books. There are advantages in this plan if books are well chosen and in charge of a competent librarian, who will give out books suitable for pupils asking for them, refusing to let any pupil have a book not adapted for that age.

The advantage in the library for departments is that there can be betwise not to have too many books in ter supervision of the reading. It is the department library at one time. The surplus may be kept in the general library, or stored some place. Pupils are not apt to ask for a book that has been on the shelf, where they can see it, for a long time. Without question a carefully selected library in each department is better than a general library.

HOME TRAINING

A Mental Fall Preceds a Moral Fall.

"Say, what has become of Mr. A? We were class mates in college! I knew him as a boy," said Mr. McDonald to his visitor.

"Oh, have you not heard? No one knows where he is now. He was forced to leave his city because of an immoral deed, which not only meant disgrace to his own home but the ruination of another family."

"Well, I am not greatly surprised. Do you know that when he was a small boy he seemed to enjoy dirty stories, and when in college he reveled in impure thoughts."

"He sometimes would imagine certain conditions and how he would proceed under those conditions to accomplish questionable objectives."

"But, Mr. McDonald, he was the most highly respected citizen in his town and his mistake was a shocking surprise to everybody."

"It is not a surprise to me for he fell mentally when a boy and again as a young man in college; while he may have succeeded for a time to cover his mental fall, when imagined conditions were realized the mental fall was pronounced a moral fall."

LIVE FACTS ABOUT FARMING

Thrift and Tenacity Wins Farm and Home for Youth

By AMOS BRADFORD.

A young man started out in life for himself when he was 17 years old. Fine parents he had and it was on a farm that he was born and lived until that age. But it was a large family on a small farm, so he worked for a neighbor. His wages were small, but he was thrifty. When he was 21 he chose a bride and left for Kansas where land was cheap. There he bought a farm and built a house.

That first house was only a cabin of three rooms. It had only three windows, a fireplace and the furniture was crude; but neighbors came in, cowboys and other farmers; and four fine children were born in that house. Years had passed; still thrifty, strong, a hard worker with a good mind, fair prosperity came and another house was built. This second house was larger, a real cottage of five rooms; it too, had a fireplace and the children played in and out of the house and the family was happy and healthy. The wife made a real home, her hand helped at everything, and she cheered and inspired her man and the children. There were flowers and a garden. The family lived!

Later the owner's possessions increased, his flocks and herds grew larger, his fields waxed fat; so from the walls of the cottage arose a third house. This time a large one of many rooms. It was heated by steam, but the fireplace remained; a bath room with hot and cold running water was installed, and there was water in the kitchen and in a laundry; there were rooms for all and a guest room and a library; and a fine sleeping porch was built and partitioned. It was a real home, luxurious, commodious, one to be proud of.

A House in Retrospect.

When asked "Which was the best house," he replied: "We were very happy in the little cabin, just wife and I at first and then the tiny babies. We like, I should say we love, this new house with all its conveniences and comforts; but after all for the downright, sacred joy of living, I cannot forget the time when she and I lived in the five room cottage with our boys and girls as little children learning to walk, to talk, to play, to do little chores, when we worked so hard and slept so well—that was the best house."

There is a moral in the life of this family—typical of millions of American homes in every section. The moral is tucked in the five-room cottage with the prattle of growing children, the love and devotion of wife and mother, the vision and worthiness of the faithful father whose strong arm faltered not from youth to old age, and who by dreaming and toiling won the victory. This man still lives; he will recognize the picture here portrayed if he reads it; but so also will thousands of others think the reference is of them because they, too, built a cabin, a small cottage and a house—and realized the dream!

RAISING HOGS

THE United States Department of Agriculture showed by an exhibit at the International Livestock Exposition recently, held in Chicago, the story of an average Corn Belt farm in raising hogs. The principle crops grown on the farm were corn, oats, and soy beans, very little feed being purchased and much of the oats being marketed as grain. That selection of crops could apply to nearly every part of the United States—especially in these regions where corn grows: North or South.

During a year 78,700 pounds of hogs are marketed, which is a little more than a pound every seven minutes during the entire year. The outstanding reasons for the success of this type of farmer who does most of the work himself are these: Convenient arrangement, enabling the owner to care for the pigs with little labor; well-balanced rations, producing gains without waste; and continuous use of fresh pasture, providing cheap feed and keeping the hogs in excellent condition.

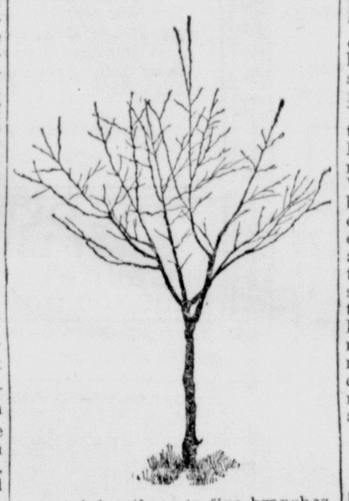

Pure Bred Stock to Advance

AT an auction sale of registered Guernsey cattle held recently in Illinois, 54 head were sold for nearly $100,000. The animals averaged $1,800 per head. One cow fetched $15,000 and another $12,750. These prices were the highest that have been paid in recent years. They are indicative of revived interest in pure-bred stock.

Soon prices for all pure-bred animals will be much higher than at present. Every farmer or breeder who wants to get started with better stock should make his purchase within the next few months, for prices of livestock will advance. They have been at rock bottom since agricultural deflation started in 1920, but the turn upward has begun.

Properly Pruning a Tree Top

TREES are pruned when planted to give shapliness to top, to open up the head and to get rid of some of the branches and leaves. The next season the aim should be to keep the top symmetrical and open for the free access of air and sunshine. The framework of the tree for the permanent top is secured by retaining three to five branches, all others being cut out. The tree pictured above is the result of such pruning.

This tree is now in its third year. The only pruning required this Winter is to clip off a few of the smaller branches to keep an open head. If this were not done the tree top would be dense and as the tree grows larger would keep out air and sunshine. The proper time for doing the pruning is during the dormant season. The tree shown here has four strong, sturdy main limbs which go out from the trunk in such manner as to reduce the danger of the tree splitting later.

Balancing His Basic Income--- By Biedermann

The Agricultural Return for 1924 Was Sufficient to Bring a Satisfied Smile to Uncle Sam's Face, the First in a Number of Years.

Cut Loss Due to Hog Mites

MANGE MITES cause considerable loss to hog growers. In addition to being an irritation to hogs, resulting in unthriftiness, the mites damage the hams, bacons and picnics. The United States Department of Agriculture estimates that 40 per cent of the hogs of South Dakota were affected last Winter. The loss runs into many hundreds of thousands of dollars annually in the regions where hogs are affected.

Treatment consists in the application of various simple remedies, ranging from mixtures of kerosene and lard to specially prepared mite-control dips. The hogs may be treated by hand applications, hog oilers, medicated hog wallows, or by dipping. In treating, the whole herd is to be included. Hog wallows answer the purpose best for small expenditure of time, labor and money. Crude oil is a good remedy.

Dewberry Canes' Care

IF YOU live in a Northern State and have in your garden a few canes of that trailing blackberry known as the dewberry, it is desirable that you cover the canes for Winter protection. In New York the growers permit the weeds to remain in the patch and in Michigan they cover the canes with refuse material. In the South Winter protection is not necessary but growers remove all canes but one, old and new, as soon as the crop is picked. North Carolina is a leading State for this crop and the growers have acquired great skill in using special methods of training and cultivating the plants. Large applications of fertilizer are made in the early Spring and in mid-Summer immediately after the canes are cut out. The one remaining cane is trained to a tall stalk.

More Soy Beans

THE Federal Crop Reporting Board states that the acreage given to soy beans is now over 500,000 acres in the United States, the increase for 1924 being 25 per cent more than in 1923. Missouri shows an increase of 50 per cent, Alabama and Iowa of 40 per cent, Indiana and Michigan of 25 per cent, Illinois of 20 per cent, Ohio of 18 per cent, and Kentucky and Tennessee of 10 per cent.

The leading soy bean State at the present time is North Carolina, where a slight decrease in production has been noted. General increases were noted in all of the Gulf States. Cow peas show a total acreage of 1,000,000 acres, and of velvet beans of 600,000,000 acres. The velvet bean is a Southern crop exclusively.

Crop Survey and Farm Income Show Good Outlook

IN his report for the year 1924, the Secretary of Agriculture summarized a gain of a half billion dollars in value of farm products over 1923 and of a billion and a half over 1922. The Secretary says that further recovery is required to bring agriculture back to its pre-war condition but, on the whole, it is in the best position it has been since the period of depression began." Since the secretary made his report the upturn of crop and livestock prices has continued, still lessening the spread between the prices of things that farmers have to sell and the prices of the things they have to buy.

The improvement over last year is very marked in some states, although in other states it is about the same as last year and in some states it is not quite so good. The states showing the greatest improvement are North Dakota, where the gross cash income increased 60 per cent. Georgia had a gain of 45 per cent, Arkansas of 30 per cent, Oklahoma of 30 per cent, Kansas 29 per cent and Mississippi of 26 per cent. Other states showing gains are Alabama, New Mexico, Montana, South Dakota, Nebraska, Colorado, Tenessee, and Virginia, ranging from gains of 8 per cent up to 25 per cent. States showing slight gains of 2 to 5 per cent are Arizona, Missouri, Minnesota, Iowa, New York, Massachusetts, New Jersey and Maryland. A few states experienced slight losses over last year, but as a whole there is a decided gain for the whole country.

The Secretary points out that wheat states fared the best, that the larger cotton yield is somewhat compensating the smaller price a pound, with the sheepmen in a much more favorable position than cattle and hog producers, although better prices for hogs are improving that situation somewhat, and the considerable decrease in pigs farrowed last spring and this fall suggesting much better prices for 1925. Wool prices are about double the 1913 level. In dairying the markets have been unsettled, due to large increase in milk production in this country and to a firmer production in those countries upset by war. The Secretary cautions dairymen to keep an eye on the foreign situation and not to increase the number of milk cows above requirements, which is now the case.

The general improved agricultural tone does not mean that agriculture is done with the troubles of the depression period. But things are heading to a better position.

Taxes are burdensome, harder on the farmer than on any other class, and need to be lowered. Crop production must be kept within bounds, otherwise crop prices will drop below their near parity with urban-made things. Many farmers are in debt because they borrowed money to meet taxes and current costs in the earlier depression period. But everything points to the continuance of strong farm prices for most farm products — to still higher prices for many of them. And the debts are being paid off!

How a Wool-Marketing Pool Was Made to Pay Profits

WHEN certain Ohio wool growers decided to build up an organization to market the wool crop of the state there were many skeptics who said it could not be done. But last year the pool sold over 4,000,000 pounds of wool at a cost for country loading, sacks, storage, commission, insurance, grading and labor of only 2¾ cents a pound. Under ordinary methods of individual effort these costs amount to 10 cents a pound—here a saving of several cents a pound—all of which goes to the producer.

The wool association which conducts the pool maintains warehouses at Columbus, O., and Wheeling, W. Va., and growers from Ohio, Indiana, Michigan and West Virginia consign their wool clips to the pool. Last year only one-half of the Ohio wool crop was marketed through the pool, but the success was so marked that a great many more growers have joined. The wool crop last year was sold in 88 sales to 39 mills in eight states at an average price of 50.6 cents a pound.

Individual grading reports are sent to each grower and the association pays direct to each member consigning wool. In case a grower wants an advance on his wool he is sent a check for 75 per cent of the current value and is charged 5 per cent interest. Last year about half a million dollars were so used, the money being borrowed by the association on warehouse receipts. The sales are made throughout the year, the wool not being dumped on the market all at once after the shearing season is over, the usual custom in so many wool sections. As a rule, the pool farmers realized from 5 to 10 cents a pound more than their neighbors who marketed through local buyers.

Since the Ohio association has legal standing and experience back of it, loyalty of members and an abundance of financial support, it is destined to become the market channel for the greater part of the wool crop of the state. Those interested in this movement should get in touch with the Ohio organization through the County Farm Bureau Association.

What Every One Should Know

Farm Animals Are More Efficient

IN recent years farm animals have not increased in numbers as rapidly as have the people of the United States, but the value of these animals has increased much more rapidly. Much of this is due to increase in the individual merit of the animals. In 1850 the average weight of wool on each sheep was 2.4 pounds; at the present time it is 6.9 pounds per sheep. Thus, while in 65 years sheep have not doubled in numbers, the production of wool has increased more than five times.

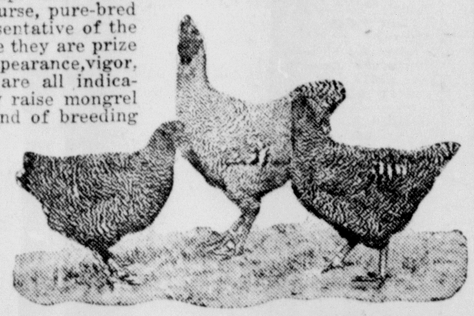

This is a striking example of the value of improvement in breeding, because the improvement in wool production is due to the influence of heredity in far greater degree than to the effect of improved feeding. Beef cattle offer another illustration of the way in which animal products have been increased without increasing the numbers of animals. Formerly beef cattle were matured in their fourth, fifth and sixth year. They are now placed in the market in their first, second or third year.

The increase in the size of horses has given double or treble the power for farm work over what it used to be 50 or 100 years ago. The increased production of butter fat per cow which has occured in the past half century has been the same as trebling the herd output without increasing the number of dairy cows. One cow is now worth three average cows of 50 years ago. There is on record a yield from 10 cows equalling the production of 100 ordinary cows. In our poultry years over 300 eggs a year are not unusual. This is easily six times what it used to be before hens were selected on account of their egg-laying ability. Possibilities for improvement along all lines are unlimited. Which class will you help to improve further?

You Can Hatch Birds Like These

IN the United States more than one hundred varieties of domestic fowl have been recognized as standard breeds. These have been classified in various ways—as fancy or practical; for meat or eggs; as to place of origin, and ornamental. Some of these came from the Far East, many from Europe and less than a dozen have been developed as American breeds. The most popular of the American classes is the Plymouth Rock.

The trio pictured here belong to the barred variety of the Plymouth Rock group. And aristocrats they are, too. They are prize winners, and, of course, pure-bred and perfectly representative of the race. You will agree they are prize specimens—their appearance, vigor, striking markings, are all indications of that. Why raise mongrel stock of any old kind of breeding when noble birds like these may be had from eggs alone? Choose a breed you like and start toward pure-breds this very year. But don't forget, the time for deciding is here.

How an Old Field Was Made Into a Profitable Enterprise

Scrub Trees Were Dug Out and Legumes Plowed Under Added Humus and Nitrogen. Then Mineral Fertilizers and Crop Rotations Did the Rest.

By CHARLES W. BURKETT

Famous Agricultural Author and Editor of Farm Life Extension Service.

SEVERAL years ago there fell to my care a Southern farm of several hundred acres. Considerable cotton, some corn and various forage crops occupied our cultivation attention. The price of cotton was advancing, due to the fight the boll weevil was putting up; and, as things then looked, an era for better cotton prices was making its appearance. But I realized that if we were to succeed in the way I wanted to succeed it would be necessary to build up the land.

Not being in a naturally fertile section, scrub oaks and scrub pine were the only trees of any consequence on this farm. They had sprung up on old land that had previously been abandoned because the soil was too poor to grow a crop. In these young scrub trees it was still poor. I could see no value in the trees and we needed more land. One Winter I decided to dig these trees out by the roots on an area consisting of approximately 35 acres.

HARD, GRUELING WORK.

Labor costs were much cheaper in those days, but so were cotton prices. The land was cleared at a cost of $12 an acre. It would cost twice that to-day, but cotton fetches twice what it did at that time. So the same comparison holds. When the old trees were cut into wood and the stumps hauled out to be burned later we began plowing. I want to assure you it was not a Summer picnic to do this work. There were some roots into which the plows struck and there were stump holes that tried the temper of the boys doing the plowing. We didn't cover the regulation area that a good plowman is supposed to do in a day.

After that work of plowing had been ended we were not long deciding that cow-peas were to be the first crop to be put to work in this field. Accordingly, when the time arrived the cow-peas were planted. An application of acid phosphate and Kainit at the rate of 250 pounds an acre was used. The soil was poor enough to warrant a larger application. The peas that Summer made only a moderate growth. That Fall this crop was plowed under and Winter oats seeded in the ground. The crop was not much and the next Spring was plowed under. Cow-peas were planted again. This time the growth was so good we could not bring ourselves to plow it under. However, I have since cleared up old land and have turned under the second cow-pea crop as was done with the first.

HOW FIELD HAS REPAID.

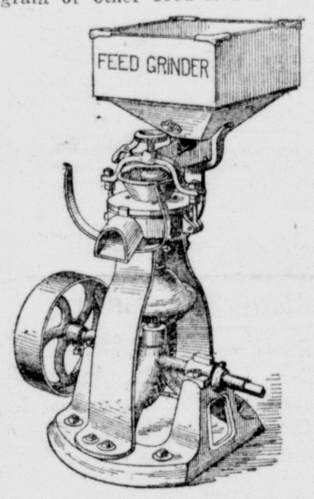

The second year after the peas were off, the soil was plowed and oats seeded again. That crop was made into oat hay. Its much better yield clearly showed we were succeeding in building up that land. From that time on that old field has given a good account of itself. It has been in cotton several times, but always in a rotation with cow-peas or crimson clover. It has discharged that original grubbing and improving cost many times over.

When we started the work our old foreman argued against doing what we did. He said we simply could not restore that old field. Later he begged to have charge of the first cotton crop grown on the field. Possibly he gave the field a little extra care, but it was the best cotton crop that year in the whole neighborhood. The moral of this experience is that any old land can be restored to productivity by rotations and legumes.

Shall Grain Be Ground

GRAIN feeds are most digestible when ground. Corn, oats, wheat, cotton seed, and other grains often are so hard that if passed into the stomach without thorough mastication the digestive juices fail in their duty. But it does not follow that it is good business management at all times to grind the grains consumed on the farm.

Experiments show that when corn, for instance, is ground the feeding returns are increased from 8 to 15 per cent; yet the labor of hauling to and from the mill, or grinding the grain at home, may cause a cost expense greater than the returns obtained, thus entailing a loss in the end. The custom of following cattle and horses with pigs to pick up the undigested grain or other food is both wise and profitable, and satisfactorily solves the problem of whether the corn grain is to be ground.

There are certain grains that may be handled best by grinding because of the commercial value of the oil contained therein, such as flaxseed, from which is made linseed meal, and cotton seed from which is made cotton seed meal; soy beans, peanuts and still other grains often are ground and pressed, yielding both oil and meal. On the farm soy beans are usually ground because of their hardness. Grinding is therefore an individual problem and if time, labor and power are available it is worthwhile to grind the hard grains.

Place for Turkey Nest

ONE of the best places for turkey nests is in the orchard. An old barrel makes a good nest. Place it in some out of the way corner, tipping the open end up slightly so that water may not run in the barrel. For nesting material use leaves, hay or straw in sufficient quantity that the eggs will not be broken.

Walks and Talks On the Farm

Proper Plays for Rural People

WHAT is doing much in socializing the farm and adding to the enjoyment of rural living is the presentation of clean and wholesome plays that portray country life in its true meaning rather than shame rural folk by ludicrous caricature, so common on the city stage. Play acting had its origin in country environment, treating of the production of food, and the ceremonies of agricultural rites. As time passed on the grouping of people into towns and cities favored the development of the theatre, and made play writing and play acting a useful expression of action and art.

It was in America that the rude, crude "rube" plays had their beginning. Possibly this type of play has done more to take the farm boy and girl from the farm to the cities than any other single thing in social life. These plays were never true to life, never sincere, never honorable. They were acted to make cheap laughs. At their best they were vulgar and coarse, the outpourings of ignorance and snobbery. There is no more ludicrous example of the rube than the city rube. Out in the country these rubes are the most pitied examples of human life.

Fortunately for art, for the theatre and for the race, a great change from this hollow witticism of farm crudeness is under way. No longer is the simple rube or hayseed type of former days now held up on the stage as a type of the farm. Theatregoers know better. More worthy is the writing of plays that sympathetically and honestly define country folk in the enrivonment of country living and in sentiment of country ideals and aspirations. The springing up of country theatres in all parts of the land tells these facts more emphatically than words.

A new style of play is here for country audiences. The city-made play, like the city-made school books is passing. When some years ago there was published a three-act play called "Between Two Lives," there was ushered in a new form of drama and a new era of play acting for dramatic expression in the country that has had already far-reaching results. It is now possible for every community to have its dramatic club for the entertainment of its own people, enterpreting the life and manners of farm people and leading to the elevation, farm contentment and the glory of the farm home. God speed the coming of amateur dramatic clubs and of country-life plays.—C. W. B.

LIVE FACTS ABOUT FARMING

Thrift and Tenacity Wins Farm and Home for Youth

By AMOS BRADFORD.

A young man started out in life for himself when he was 17 years old. Fine parents he had and it was on a farm that he was born and lived until that age. But it was a large family on a small farm, so he worked for a neighbor. His wages were small, but he was thrifty. When he was 21 he chose a bride and left for Kansas where land was cheap. There he bought a farm and built a house.

That first house was only a cabin of three rooms. It had only three windows, a fireplace and the furniture was crude; but neighbors came in, cowboys and other farmers; and four fine children were born in that house. Years had passed; still thrifty, strong, a hard worker with a good mind, fair prosperity came and another house was built. This second house was larger, a real cottage of five rooms; it too, had a fireplace and the children played in and out of the house and the family was happy and healthy. The wife made a real home, her hand helped at everything, and she cheered and inspired her man and the children. There were flowers and a garden. The family lived!

Later the owner's possessions increased, his flocks and herds grew larger, his fields waxed fat; so from the walls of the cottage arose a third house. This time a large one of many rooms. It was heated by steam, but the fireplace remained; a bath room with hot and cold running water was installed, and there was water in the kitchen and in a laundry; there were rooms for all and a guest room and a library; and a fine sleeping porch was built and partitioned. It was a real home, luxurious, commodious, one to be proud of.

A House in Retrospect.

When asked "Which was the best house," he replied: "We were very happy in the little cabin, just wife and I at first and then the tiny babies. We like, I should say we love, this new house with all its conveniences and comforts; but after all for the downright, sacred joy of living, I cannot forget the time when she and I lived in the five room cottage with our boys and girls as little children learning to walk, to talk, to play, to do little chores, when we worked so hard and slept so well—that was the best house."

There is a moral in the life of this family—typical of millions of American homes in every section. The moral is tucked in the five-room cottage with the prattle of growing children, the love and devotion of wife and mother, the vision and worthiness of the faithful father whose strong arm faltered not from youth to old age, and who by dreaming and toiling won the victory. This man still lives; he will recognize the picture here portrayed if he reads it; but so also will thousands of others think the reference is of them because they, too, built a cabin, a small cottage and a house—and realized the dream!

RAISING HOGS

THE United States Department of Agriculture showed by an exhibit at the International Livestock Exposition recently, held in Chicago, the story of an average Corn Belt farm in raising hogs. The principle crops grown on the farm were corn, oats, and soy beans, very little feed being purchased and much of the oats being marketed as grain. That selection of crops could apply to nearly every part of the United States—especially in these regions where corn grows: North or South.

During a year 78,700 pounds of hogs are marketed, which is a little more than a pound every seven minutes during the entire year. The outstanding reasons for the success of this type of farmer who does most of the work himself are these: Convenient arrangement, enabling the owner to care for the pigs with little labor; well-balanced rations, producing gains without waste; and continuous use of fresh pasture, providing cheap feed and keeping the hogs in excellent condition.

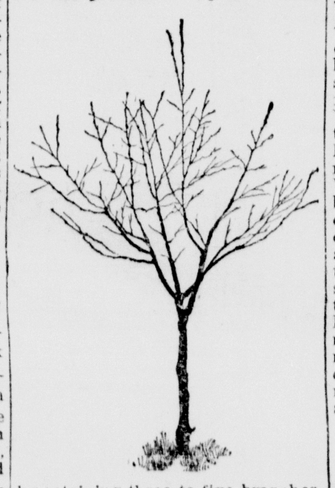

Pure Bred Stock to Advance

AT an auction sale of registered Guernsey cattle held recently in Illinois, 54 head were sold for nearly $100,000. The animals averaged $1,800 per head. One cow fetched $15,000 and another $12,750. These prices were the highest that have been paid in recent years. They are indicative of revived interest in pure-bred stock.

Soon prices for all pure-bred animals will be much higher than at present. Every farmer or breeder who wants to get started with better stock should make his purchase within the next few months, for prices of livestock will advance. They have been at rock bottom since agricultural deflation started in 1920, but the turn upward has begun.

Not being in a naturally fertile section, scrub oaks and scrub pine were the only trees of any consequence on this farm. They had sprung up on old land that had previously been abandoned because the soil was too poor to grow a crop. In these young scrub trees it was still poor. I could see no value in the trees and we needed more land. One Winter I decided to dig these trees out by the roots on an area consisting of approximately 35 acres.

HARD, GRUELING WORK.

Labor costs were much cheaper in those days, but so were cotton prices. The land was cleared at a cost of $12 an acre. It would cost twice that to-day, but cotton fetches twice what it did at that time. So the same comparison holds. When the old trees were cut into wood and the stumps hauled out to be burned later we began plowing. I want to assure you it was not a Summer picnic to do this work. There were some roots into which the plows struck and there were stump holes that tried the temper of the boys doing the plowing. We didn't cover the regulation area that a good plowman is supposed to do in a day.

After that work of plowing had been ended we were not long deciding that cow-peas were to be the first crop to be put to work in this field. Accordingly, when the time arrived the cow-peas were planted. An application of acid phosphate and Kainit at the rate of 250 pounds an acre was used. The soil was poor enough to warrant a larger application. The peas that Summer made only a moderate growth. That Fall this crop was plowed under and Winter oats seeded in the ground. The crop was not much and the next Spring was plowed under. Cow-peas were planted again. This time the growth was so good we could not bring ourselves to plow it under. However, I have since cleared up old land and have turned under the second cow-pea crop as was done with the first.

HOW FIELD HAS REPAID.

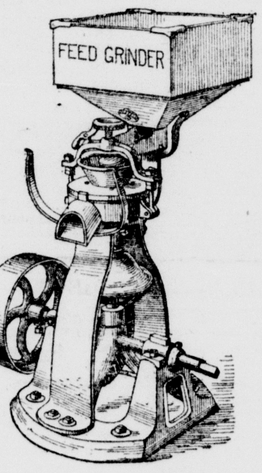

The second year after the peas were off, the soil was plowed and oats seeded again. That crop was made into oat hay. Its much better yield clearly showed we were succeeding in building up that land. From that time on that old field has given a good account of itself. It has been in cotton several times, but always in a rotation with cow-peas or crimson clover. It has discharged that original grubbing and improving cost many times over.

When we started the work our old foreman argued against doing what we did. He said we simply could not restore that old field. Later he begged to have charge of the first cotton crop grown on the field. Possibly he gave the field a little extra care, but it was the best cotton crop that year in the whole neighborhood. The moral of this experience is that any old land can be restored to productivity by rotations and legumes.

Shall Grain Be Ground

GRAIN feeds are most digestible when ground. Corn, oats, wheat, cotton seed, and other grains often are so hard that if passed into the stomach without thorough mastication the digestive juices fail in their duty. But it does not follow that it is good business management at all times to grind the grains consumed on the farm.

Experiments show that when corn, for instance, is ground the feeding returns are increased from 8 to 15 per cent; yet the labor of hauling to and from the mill, or grinding the grain at home, may cause a cost expense greater than the returns obtained, thus entailing a loss in the end. The custom of following cattle and horses with pigs to pick up the undigested grain or other food is both wise and profitable, and satisfactorily solves the problem of whether the corn grain is to be ground.

There are certain grains that may be handled best by grinding because of the commercial value of the oil contained therein, such as flaxseed, from which is made linseed meal, and cotton seed from which is made cotton seed meal; soy beans, peanuts and still other grains often are ground and pressed, yielding both oil and meal. On the farm soy beans are usually ground because of their hardness. Grinding is therefore an individual problem and if time, labor and power are available it is worthwhile to grind the hard grains.

Place for Turkey Nest

ONE of the best places for turkey nests is in the orchard. An old barrel makes a good nest. Place it in some out of the way corner, tipping the open end up slightly so that water may not run in the barrel. For nesting material use leaves, hay or straw in sufficient quantity that the eggs will not be broken.

Walks and Talks On the Farm

Proper Plays for Rural People

WHAT is doing much in socializing the farm and adding to the enjoyment of rural living is the presentation of clean and wholesome plays that portray country life in its true meaning rather than shame rural folk by ludicrous caricature, so common on the city stage. Play acting had its origin in country environment, treating of the production of food, and the ceremonies of agricultural rites. As time passed on the grouping of people into towns and cities favored the development of the theatre, and made play writing and play acting a useful expression of action and art.

It was in America that the rude, crude "rube" plays had their beginning. Possibly this type of play has done more to take the farm boy and girl from the farm to the cities than any other single thing in social life. These plays were never true to life, never sincere, never honorable. They were acted to make cheap laughs. At their best they were vulgar and coarse, the outpourings of ignorance and snobbery. There is no more ludicrous example of the rube than the city rube. Out in the country these rubes are the most pitied examples of human life.

Fortunately for art, for the theatre and for the race, a great change from this hollow witticism of farm crudeness is under way. No longet is the simple rube or hayseed type of former days now held up on the stage as a type of the farm. Theatregoers know better. More worthy is the writing of plays that sympathetically and honestly define country folk in the enrivonment of country living and in sentiment of country ideals and aspirations. The springing up of country theatres in all parts of the land tells these facts more emphatically than words.

A new style of play is here for country audiences. The city-made play, like the city-made school books is passing. When some years ago there was published a three-act play called "Between Two Lives," there was ushered in a new form of drama and a new era of play acting for dramatic expression in the country that has had already far-reaching results. It is now possible for every community to have its dramatic club for the entertainment of its own people, enterpreting the life and manners of farm people and leading to the elevation, farm contentment and the glory of the farm home. God speed the coming of amateur dramatic clubs and of country-life plays.—C. W. B.

CHURCH ITEMS FROM WORLD

The fifteenth anniversary week of the Boy Scouts of America will be observed February 8-14. The Boy Scouts have a membership of 686,000.

The foreign work of the International Committee of Young Men's Christian association is now established in 18 foreign countries, with 384 associations and 125,000 members.

George Eastman has made an additional gift of $12,500,000 to educational institutions, including the Tuskegee and Hampton schools for Negroes, the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and Rochester university.

Week-day classes in religion at Kansas City this year have 10,000 pupils. This is believed to be the largest week-day enrollment in any city. In a parade of the week day church school recently, five thousand pupils and teachers were in line.

A new church building has just been completed at Carlinville, Louisiana, for the only leper congregation in the United States.

Maine, Delaware and Kentucky have passed laws this year requiring the Bible to be read in the public schools. Similar laws have been in force in Alabama, Georgia, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Tennessee.

The unification of churches in Canada has made one body of all Methodist branches, one body of all Presbyterians, and now plans are complete for the merging of the Presbyterian and Methodist bodies with the Congregational church. The date of this culmination is fived for June 10, 1925 and the name of the merged bodies is to be the Protestant Church of Canada.

What is to be known as the Michigan Religious school is to open next fall at Ann Arbor, Mich., under the direction of Dr. Alfred H. Lolyd, dean of the graduate school of the University of Michigan. The new institution has a three-year endowment of $25,000 a year to start its career.

The Presbyterian church of Grove City, Pa., has more tithers than any other congregation in the country. Nearly every one in the church gives one-tenth of his income to the Lord's work. There are over 100 checking accounts in the Grove City banks which are drawn on for nothing but payments to Christian benevolences. The parish finds that it has more money than it can possibly spend on itself. Last year it gave $32,000 to outside causes and spent $15,000 on its own upkeep.

Washington is to have the largest Catholic church in the country. It will have a campanille 335 feet high, and the dome will be 204 feet in height with a roof of gold. The three apses of the crypt will be the shamrock formation "to commemorate the strong faith in God and the tender love for Mary bestowed on Ireland through this glorious symbol of the Blessed Trinity." Just what this last quotation means or what Ireland has to do with Washington is not altogether clear.

Herewith is solution to puzzle No 71:

How to Solve Puzzle.

The best way to solve this cross-word puzzle is to run over the list of horizontal and vertical synonyms in search of evident or "easy" words. If horizontal, the word you are looking for must extend crosswise from the number to the first shaded stop on the right; if vertical, it must extend downward from the number to the first shaded stop below. When finished, the words should read equally well crosswise and downward.

LIVE QUESTIONS FOR DISCUSSION

ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

The last Judgment (Matt. 25:31—46) for Sunday, January 11.

1. What were the circumstances under which Jesus gave this description of the last judgment.?

2. What led the Lord to adopt the title 'Son of Man?'

3. What is our duty as Christians if there is to be the division suggested in this lesson?

4. What kind of a world would result if there were in it no judgment?

Is there a guide-line in Jesus' teaching by which we may know when a deed of kindness is done unto Christ?

6. To what extent does the whole order of the present world call for a final day of judgment.

7. Where is the best place to begin the "inasmuch" program of this lesson? Can you pass the "inasmuch" test?

Clericus says: Dr. MacLaren suggests that the danger in the study of this judgment scene is that we will forget our own individual share in it: "Better to burn in our hearts the thought, 'I shall be there' than to lose the solemn impression in efforts to unravel the difficulties of the passage."

Some one has said that in heaven we shall have three surprises: We shall miss some whom we expected to see there; we shall see there some whom we did not expect to see; and we shall be surprised, most of all, to discover ourselves there.

Lesson Prayer.

O blessed Christ, the moment we see a great picture we are judged. The moment we hear great music we are judged. The moment a great book is in our hands we are judged. And the moment we stand in thy presence, there is a revelation of judgement. We do thank thee for thy plain clear teachings upon the great questions that effect our life here and hereafter. We thank thee for always bringing us face to face with questions of life and conduct. May we not only enter into the inheritance prepared for us from the foundation of the world, but lose no opportunity to lead others into that same inheritance of joy and blessedness. In thy dear name. Amen.

"NORTH OF 36" HERE MONDAY

True Screenplay of Pioneer Days Comes to Ceramic.

North of 36," by Emerson Hough, depicting all the thrills and hardships of pioneer days on the Texas cattle ranges, has been filmed for Paramount by Irvin Willat, who made the natural-color picture, "Wanderer of the Wasteland" and other classics.

"North of 36" is a tale of the Texas cattle trail, picturing a country wild, almost lawless, at the period of the story, roughened and disheartened by the recent Civil War.

Lois Wilson, as Taisie Lockhart manager of her own vast ranch in Texas, finds herself penniless, with no means of disposing of her herds, her chief asset being the true spirit of the pioneers.

Word comes that way up "north of 36," a market beckons. With her 4,500 cows, 16 cow hands, 19 kinds of rifles and six shooters and 115 cow ponies, Taisie makes the start with all the thrills that the start of the wagon train in Emerson Hough's "The Covered Wagon" evolvd.

Through this great panorama one sees groups of ragged sinewy men, the glorious girl at their head, the oxcarts and the sea of long horned cattle, accomplishing one of the greatest deeds of pioneer bravery and daring.

Paramount has furnished a notable cast to visualize the story. It includes Jack Holt, Ernest Torrence, Lois Wilson and Noah Beery in featured roles. The picture opens a four days' run Monday at the Ceramic theatre. It's a colorful page from the history of the United States, a second "Covered Wagon!"

STOMACH UPSET?

Get at the Real Cause — Take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets.

That's what thousands of stomach sufferers are doing now. Instead of taking tonics, or trying to patch up a poor digestion, they are attacking the REAL cause of the ailment—clogged liver and disordered bowels.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets arouse the liver in a soothing, healing way. When the liver and bowels are performing their natural functions, away goes indigestion and stomach troubles.

Have you a bad taste, coated tongue, poor appetite, a lazy, don't-care feeling, no ambition or energy, trouble with undigested foods? Take Olive Tablets the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil. You will know them by their olive color. They do the work without griping, cramps or pain.

Take one or two at bedtime for quick relief. Eat what you like. 15c and 30c.

SUFFERED AFTER BIRTH OF BABY

Talcville, New York. — "I thought it would interest you to know what benefit I have derived from taking your medicine. A few days after the birth of my third child I got up too quick. Then just before my fifth child was born I had inflammation of the bladder and displacement. Seeing your advertisement in a Liverpool (England), paper I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and that was the best confinement I had. Whenever I feel rundown I always take the Vegetable Compound as a tonic. We have just removed from Brockville (Canada) so I was pleased when the store ordered the medicine for me and I got it today. I would not be without it for any price and I recommend it to ladies around here because I feel so sure it will benefit any woman who takes it."—Mrs. AGNES WIGNALL, Talcville, New York.

Women can depend upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to relieve them from ills peculiar to their sex. For sale by druggists everywhere.

Mothers, give your son — your daughter plenty of nature's healthful drink—milk.

It is the delightful daily glasses of creamy milk that build vigorous bodies—that give children the necessary food to create bone and muscle.

City milk is pure—rich in body building substances—its the milk that children thrive and grow on.

Order an extra bottle a day of City milk for the children.

CHURCH ITEMS FROM WORLD

The fifteenth anniversary week of the Boy Scouts of America will be observed February 8-14. The Boy Scouts have a membership of 686,000.

The foreign work of the International Committee of Young Men's Christian association is now established in 18 foreign countries, with 384 associations and 125,000 members.

George Eastman has made an additional gift of $12,500,000 to educational institutions, including the Tuskegee and Hampton schools for Negroes, the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and Rochester university.

Week-day classes in religion at Kansas City this year have 10,000 pupils. This is believed to be the largest week-day enrollment in any city. In a parade of the week-day church school recently, five thousand pupils and teachers were in line.

A new church building has just been completed at Carlinville, Louisiana, for the only leper congregation in the United States.

Maine, Delaware and Kentucky have passed laws this year requiring the Bible to be read in the public schools. Similar laws have been in force in Alabama, Georgia, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Tennessee.

The unification of churches in Canada has made one body of all Methodist branches, one body of all Presbyterians, and now plans are complete for the merging of the Presbyterian and Methodist bodies with the Congregational church. The date of this culmination is fixed for June 10, 1925 and the name of the merged bodies is to be the Protestant Church of Canada.

What is to be known as the Michigan Religious school is to open next fall at Ann Arbor, Mich., under the direction of Dr. Alfred H. Lolyd, dean of the graduate school of the University of Michigan. The new institution has a three-year endowment of $25,000 a year to start its career.

The Presbyterian church of Grove City, Pa., has more tithers than any other congregation in the country. Nearly every one in the church gives one-tenth of his income to the Lord's work. There are over 100 checking accounts in the Grove City banks which are drawn on for nothing but payments to Christian benevolences. The parish finds that it has more money than it can possibly spend on itself. Last year it gave $32,000 to outside causes and spent $15,000 on its own upkeep.

Washington is to have the largest Catholic church in the country. It will have a campanille 335 feet high, and the dome will be 204 feet in height with a roof of gold. The three apses of the crypt will be the shamrock formation "to commemorate the strong faith in God and the tender love for Mary bestowed on Ireland through this glorious symbol of the Blessed Trinity," Just what this last quotation means or what Ireland has to do with Washington is not altogether clear.

Herewith is solution to puzzle No 71:

How to Solve Puzzle.

The best way to solve this cross-word puzzle is to run over the list of horizontal and vertical synonyms in search of evident or "easy" words. If horizontal, the word you are looking for must extend crosswise from the number to the first shaded stop on the right; if vertical, it must extend downward from the number to the first shaded stop below. When finished, the words should read equally well crosswise and downward.

LIVE QUESTIONS FOR DISCUSSION

ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

The last Judgment (Matt. 25:31—46) for Sunday, January 11.

1. What were the circumstances under which Jesus gave this description of the last judgment.?

2. What led the Lord to adopt the title 'Son of Man?'

3. What is our duty as Christians if there is to be the division suggested in this lesson?

4. What kind of a world would result if there were in it no judgment?

Is there a guide-line in Jesus' teaching by which we may know when a deed of kindness is done unto Christ?

6. To what extent does the whole order of the present world call for a final day of judgment.

7. Where is the best place to begin the "inasmuch" program of this lesson? Can you pass the "inasmuch" test?

Clericus says: Dr. MacLaren suggests that the danger in the study of this judgment scene is that we will forget our own individual share in it: "Better to burn in our hearts the thought, 'I shall be there' than to lose the solemn impression in efforts to unravel the difficulties of the passage."

Some one has said that in heaven we shall have three surprises: We shall miss some whom we expected to see there; we shall see there some whom we did not expect to see; and we shall be surprised, most of all, to discover ourselves there.

Lesson Prayer.

O blessed Christ, the moment we see a great picture we are judged. The moment we hear great music we are judged. The moment a great book is in our hands we are judged. And the moment we stand in thy presence, there is a revelation of judgment. We do thank thee for thy plain clear teachings upon the great questions that effect our life here and hereafter. We thank thee for always bringing us face to face with questions of life and conduct. May we not only enter into the inheritance prepared for us from the foundation of the world, but lose no opportunity to lead others into that same inheritance of joy and blessedness. In thy dear name. Amen.

"NORTH OF 36" HERE MONDAY

True Screenplay of Pioneer Days Comes to Ceramic.

North of 36," by Emerson Hough, depicting all the thrills and hardships of pioneer days on the Texas cattle ranges, has been filmed for Paramount by Irvin Willat, who made the natural-color picture, "Wanderer of the Wasteland" and other classics.

"North of 36" is a tale of the Texas cattle trail, picturing a country wild, almost lawless, at the period of the story, roughened and disheartened by the recent Civil War.

Lois Wilson, as Taisie Lockhart manager of her own vast ranch in Texas, finds herself penniless, with no means of disposing of her herds, her chief asset being the true spirit of the pioneers.

Word comes that way up "north of 36," a market beckons. With her 4,500 cows, 16 cow hands, 19 kinds of rifles and six shooters and 115 cow ponies, Taisie makes the start with all the thrills that the start of the wagon train in Emerson Hough's "The Covered Wagon" evolvd.

Through this great panorama one sees groups of ragged sinewy men, the glorious girl at their head, the oxcarts and the sea of long horned cattle, accomplishing one of the greatest deeds of pioneer bravery and daring.

Paramount has furnished a notable cast to visualize the story. It includes Jack Holt, Ernest Torrence, Lois Wilson and Noah Beery in featured roles. The picture opens a four days' run Monday at the Ceramic theatre. It's a colorful page from the history of the United States, a second "Covered Wagon!"

SUFFERED AFTER BIRTH OF BABY

Talcville, New York.—"I thought it would interest you to know what benefit I have derived from taking your medicine. A few days after the birth of my third child I got up too quick. Then just before my fifth child was born I had inflammation of the bladder and displacement. Seeing your advertisement in a Liverpool (England) paper I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and that was the best confinement I had. Whenever I feel rundown I always take the Vegetable Compound as a tonic. We have just removed from Brockville (Canada) so I was pleased when the store ordered the medicine for me and I got it today. I would not be without it for any price and I recommend it to ladies around here because I feel so sure it will benefit any woman who takes it."—Mrs. AGNES WIGNALL, Talcville, New York.

Women can depend upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to relieve them from ills peculiar to their sex. For sale by druggists everywhere.

High School Passers Lose Two Contests At Warren

Runyon Says

Dr. Fralick Has Curious Hobby.
He Mends the Boxers' "Bad Hands.
He Repaired "Punch'em's" Punch.
Also Fixed Up the Panther's Paws.
Damages Due to Improper Hitting.

By DAMON RUNYON.
(Copyright, 1925, by International (Feature Service.)

DR. W. G. FRALICK, famous New York surgeon, has a little hobby.

This hobby is mending the damaged hands of boxers.

Dr. Fralick's specialty is abdominal surgery. His skill in that line is eagerly soght, he is a very busy man. He turns to the repairing of boxers' hands almost as a relaxation, a diversion.

But there is another reason which developed during a talk this reporter had with Dr. Fralick not long ago. It is a philanthropic phase, a nice little sidelight on the character of the doctor.

You should see him. He is a powerfully built man, with a heavy shock of iron gray hair. He is gruff, abrupt, commanding. You feel instinctively that he knows his business thoroughly.

"I've always been more or less interested in boxing just a sport," said Dr. Fralick. "I think that in most cases it develops the young fellows engaged in it, physically and otherwise. But for boxing they might be doing far worse things.

"Now then, a lot of them sustain injuries especially to their hands. These are the tools of their trade. Without them the boxers are helpless. Many a promising young career has been ruined by damage that might easily have been repaired, and I feel that in doing the work for the lads I may be helping them to better themselves in the world."

Dr. Fralick now produced a big bundle of X-ray photographs of hands he has mended, hands belonging to some of the most noted fighters of the day.

These photos, ghostly, shadowy, showed the nature of the different injuries. The human hand is a fragile, intricate structure. A watchmaker, probing the works of the most delicate timepiece probably has an easy task compared to that of a doctor mending an injured hand.

Here was an x-Ray photo of the hands of Harry Wills, "The Brown Panther of New Orelans." Wills' hands were for years notoriosly "bad" They had grown brittle in his long service in the ring. Some months ago he sustained a broken bone in one hand while working in the gymnasium.

Dr Fralick operated on the hand and Wills has since fought Bartley Madden and Luis Angel Firpo, using the mended hand in both fights as effectively as if it had never been injured.

Tony Vaccarelli, sparring partner of Johnny Dundee, the resigned featherweight champion, and for a time accounted one of the most promising featherweights in the game, came in while Dr. Fralick was explaining the Wills X-ray.

"Here's a young fellow who has made poor showing in his last couple of fights," said Dr. Fralick, turning to Vaccarelli. "They say he is going back, that he is about through. That's nousense. He hasn't even started. Let me show you Tony's trouble."

The young boxer bared his left arm, disclosing an angry looking sore on the elbow. The doctor picked up another X-ray print and held it to the light.

"There!" he said, "That's Tony's elbow."

He indicated some shadowy tracings.

"That's loose bone," he said. "How could you expect a boy to box with his arm in this condition. He shouldn't have been permitted in the ring. Whenever he tries to punch with that arm he is bound to feel a sharp pain, and involuntarily he drops his arm."

Yes, sir, that's right," averred Tony. "That's just the way I do."

An X-ray of Jack Delaney's hand was next.

Delaney for a long time was practically out of the game. His right hand was "gone," and that was his best punching hand.

Dr. Fralick performed a most intricate operation on the hand, building up a new knuckle, and on his first appearance after the operation Delaney astounded the boxing world by knocking out the great Paul Berlenbach.

Berlenbach has been one of Dr. Fralick's patients. The famous puncher broke his right hand some time ago, and Dr. Fralick mended it, and sent him back to the ring, his punch unimpaired.

Dr. Fralick performed a remarkable operation on Jack Zivic, the Pittsburgh welterweight, until recently a contender for the lightweight title.

This was early in Zivic's pugilistic career, after he had shown great promise in the amateurs and in his first professional battles. His right arm would become unjointed at the shoulder in a peculiar manner, and there seemed little chance that it could be permanently adjusted.

Zivic was about to abandon the ring when Dr. Fralick got hold of him. After the operation Zivic not only went back to fighting, but showed better form than ever. He has not since had any trouble with the shoulder.

Some of the fighters whose hands have been repaired by Dr. Fralick are:

Louis Kaplan, featherweight, from Meriden, Conn.

Lee Anderson, colored light heavyweight.

Jess Smithh, Bayonne middleweight.

Jamaica Kid, colored heavyweight.

Bob Martin, former heavyweight champion of the A. E. F.

Two Extra Periods Tacked On to End Final Game, 39-38

Girls Come Out on Short End of 30-25 Score in Fast Engagement; Field Goal by Lanky Warren Center Ends Rough and Tumble Battle.

East Liverpool high school basketeers will face the strong Bethany college Freshman five tonight on the local floor in a condition that is slightly the worse for wear as a result of their rough and tumble contest last night on the Warren floor which they lost, 39 to 38, in a clash that required two extra five-minute periods. The local girls also were defeated, 30 to 25.

The diminuntive Tom Pusey, forward, is suffering from a wrenched knee, Forward McKeever has a bruised eye, and Guard Dale Liebschner is in a simdlar condition.

Pusey was thrown, accidentally, into the wall under his basket as he was cutting for a shot. However, he as well as the others, will be on deck for the contest tonight which will be preceded by a prelim between the high school reserves and the Newell high school squad, at 7 o'clock.

Coach O. V. Boone is not just sure yet how the squad lost, unless, he opines, they were talked out of it when he wasn't looking.

After a hectic battle that gave Warren fans one of the greatest floor exhibitions they have seen for a long time, the regulation period of play ended with the score standing 32-32.

The extra period got under way. English caged the ball for a field goal. The Warren squad tallied two points and then English slipped in another. He was fouled on the throw, but the toss went through the hoop. The period ended and the locals were leaving the floor, believing the game was over. They were called back and notified an extra period had been called and that the score was 34 to 34. They were informed that English's last field goal did not count. The reason has not yet been learned.

Anyway, the Blue and White resumed hostilities with everything they had in three more minutes had piled up four more points.

Warren passers cut loose at this stage with a foul, added a field goal and another for a one-point victory. The final field goal was made from a toss-up near the basket between little Tom Pusey, who at this particular instance, didn't have the remotest chance of touching the ball, and the lanky Warren center, Myers.

The lineup:

E. L. Girls—25		Warren Girls—30

Nebraskan Claiming Pacific Coast Title

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 10—Ace Hudkins, hard-hitting lightweight of Nebraska, today claimed the Pacific Coast lightweight title as a result of his ten-round bout in Hollywood last night in which the Nebraskan gave Tommy Carter, of Los Angeles, so-called Pacific Coast champion, a pretty pasting.

Carter was all but knocked out in the sixth round and Hudkins took all of the remaining rounds.

Last Night's Fights

AT NEW YORK—Jack Bernstein, Yonkers, junior lightweight, won a decision from Tommy O'Brien, Milwaukee, in ten rounds; Busky Graham, Utca, knocked out Nat Pincus, of Brooklyn in the eighth round; Harold Smith, Chicago, won a decision from Jackie Snyder, Brooklyn, ten rounds; Johnny Bresline, New York, defeated Johnny Green, New York, six rounds.

At Minneapolis — Pete Sarmiento, Manila, outpointed Eddie Anderson, Chicago, ten rounds; Roscoe Hall, Des Moines, shaded Sammy Leonard, Minneapolis, eight rounds; Nick Olivia, Albert Lea, Minnesota, and Mickey Cone, St. Paul, draw, six rounds.

W. V. U. TACKLES VETERAN QUINT FROM ALLEGHENY

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Jan. 10—A court battle of no little importance will be fought here tonight when the West Virginia University and Allegheny College fives clash on the "Ark" floor. Considerable interest is also being shown in the preliminary game between the Potomac State School and West Virginia freshman quints. The first event of the evening's program will start at 7:00 p. m.

After watching the Mountaineers win from Salem College by only a six-point margin and down Waynesburg College with but eight points to spare West Virginia fans are convinced that nothing except a general improvement will enable Captain Hawley and his cohorts to win from the veteran quint from Meadville, Pa.

Last night, the Allegheny team met the University of Pittsburgh at Pittsburgh. Games with Pitt and West Virginia on successive nights would be a hardship on a younger team but the Allegheny five is composed of experienced players and Coach C. D. Baker will have his team at the top of its form for tomorrow's battle. Captain Judd, center; Ross and McClurg, forwards; and Wolfe, guard, all veterans, will make a determined fight in order to wipe out the two defeats sustained in tilts with the Mountaineers last winter. The fifth member of the invading outfit, Rhodes, a guard, is also a holdover from the 1924 squad.

"Wonder" High School Team Wins 150 Games

PASSAIC, N. J., Jan. 10. — The Passaic high school basketball team won its 150th consecutive game here by defeating the Arlington (Mass.) high school team, 73 to 23.

Two thousand persons saw the "wonder team" stretch its string of consecutive victories to the century and a half mark. Rohrback, lanky center of the Passaic team, was the individual star of the game, scoring 24 of his team's points, 20 of them from the field. Adams followed him closely for individual honors with 22 points, scoring 11 field goals. The entire second team was used by the Passaic coach in the second half. Marsters and J. Lane, of the Arlington team, counted for 28 of their team's 33 total.

Yanks Trade Mamaux To Minneapolis Club

NEW YORK, Jan. 10—Al. Mamaux, of the Yankees, has been released to Minneapolis of the American Asoociation.

Mamaux flashed brilliantly with Pittsburgh, for a few seasons, particularly in 1915 when he won 21 and lost 8 games, aollowing a little more than 2 earned runs per 9 innings. He slipped in 1917 and was traded to Brooklyn, but proved disappointing there. The Yankees secured his service from Reading in the International league in 1924.

Ordinance is Sold.

NEW YORK, Jan. 10—Ordinance, $150,000 colt owned by the estate of the late Major August Belmont, late chairman of the jockey club, has been sold to Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney and will be retired to the stud, it was learned today. The price was not disclosed.

NURMI TAKES ON BIG TASK

Series of Hard Races Scheduled for Finn.

By Davis J. Walsh.

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—While the general excitement is at its height and the question of the hour is whether the gentleman in question eats fish for breakfast and keeps that school girl complexion with Shinola, it might be mentioned that Paavo Nurmi may be riging for a fall. He has allowed himself to be inveigled into accepting invitations by the carload lots and somewhere along the general right of way, it is possible that an American crowd will watch him run second, behind some worthy young man, present identity unknown.

This stunning event may happen no later than a week or ten days from this moment. On Thursday night next, he will go to the post at Madison Square Garden against a plausible field in a 3,000-metre run. The distance has been shortened from two miles at Nurmi's request, although it is fact, not fancy, that he can run any distance from a quarter of a mile to ten, faster than any man the world has known. It might appear from this that Nurmi sees something coming.

Two days later he is to step out in a special mile-and-a-quarter race at the Illinois A. C. games, Chicago. The distance was increased the extra two furlongs, also at Nurmi's request. He evidently has no intention of trying to repeat his Olympic program, in which he ran and won races at 1,500, 3,000, 5,000 and 10,000 meters with heats, in the space of one week. The distances he will run at the two meets are not markedly dissimilar.

The reason is not far to seek. Nurmi has realized within the last 48 hours that he has bitten off a lumberjack's mouthful in agreeing to run a hard race here on Thursday night, climb aboard an outgoing train and compete again in Chicago within 48 hours. In the latter race he must step out against Joie Ray, among others, and that young man is likely to be several strides faster than he was on the occasion of Nurmi's American debut on Tuesday night last. Ray frankly admitted he was about a week away from top form before this race, yet he ran 414, his fastest mile. Joie will be waiting for Paavo.

This effusion, however, must not be confused with a clarion call for volunteer pallbearers. If Nurmi were to run in his native element of the outdoor cinder path, the writer would back him to win against the field every time out, but the Finn will find conditions varying with every race he runs indoors.

ELECTRIC SCORE BOARD PROPOSED FOR HIGH "GYM"

The proposed erection of an electrically operated scoreboard, together with the installation of an improved lighting system will make the local high school gymnasium one of the most advanced courts of its kind in the state, if the planned improvements are successfully negotiated.

Coach O. V. Boone is now communicating with scoreboard supply firms. If such a contrivance can be placed in operation at a reasonable cost, it will be done.

A scoreboard such as Boone has in mind, is operated by the head timer and scorer. It is designed to show at any stage of the game how much time, has been played and how much more remains, the name of the players and substitutions, the running score, and in fact, all the important things there are to know. Such a device would be given a hearty welcome by fans.

It would be erected on the east wall of the gymnasium. However, it is not at all certain yet.

BILL WATKINS TO WORK OPENER FOR BUFFALOES

Bill Watkins, East Liverpool's cage expert, will referee the Bethany-Waynesburg tilt tonight at Irvin gym, Bethany. The game will be the first regular engagement of the season for the Bisons, and the second for Waynesburg.

The past record of the two squads gives Bethany eight victories and Waynesburg two.

The probable lineup:

Waynesburg.		Bethany.
Minor	F	Ryan
Olmstead	F	Herman
Willis	C	Carey
Welch	G	Shoemake
Irvin	G	Hanna

GREB IS VICTOR OVER BOB SAGE IN TEN ROUNDS

DETROIT, Jan. 10.—Harry Greb, middleweight champion of the world, was awarded the decision over Bob Sage; Detroit, at the end of their 10-round bout last night. Sage took the first two rounds by boring in, but Greb held the edge from the third round on. Greb was aided in a weight advantage of approximately ten pounds and was permitted to hit and hold at the same time by Referee Al. Foss, of Pittsburgh. Billy Petersen, Detroit middleweight, knocked out Frankie Brennan in the Fifth round. Joe McKean easily defeated Bobby Swarts.

Bernstein Conquers O'Brien in New York

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—Jack Bernstein of Yonkers, formerly junior lightweight champion, swarmed all over Tommy O'Brien of Milwaukee in a ten round bout at Madison Square Garden last night and won the referee's decision. Not once did he allow O'Brien, a dangerous hitter, to set himself for a "haymaker."

Busky Graham, Utica's contender for bantamweight honors, knocked out Nat Pincus of Brooklyn in the eighth round of a sensational fight featured by Pincus' gameness.

Harold Smith of Chicago, who is making a bid for the bantamweight Jackie Snyder of Brooklyn in ten rounds.

BIG TEN FLOOR HOSTILITIES TO START TONIGHT

CHICAGO, Jan. 10—The big ten race for basketball championship will get under way tonight with eight contenders for the title in the race. Michigan, Minnesota and Ohio State rule favorites in tonight's games, having done as well in their pre-seaason showings as any of the Western conference teams. The Buckeyes meet Indiana at Columbus, Minnesota battles Wisconsin at Minneapolis and Michigan takes on the battered Purdue five at Ann Arbor.

The fourth game is between Chicago and Illinois on the Maroons' floor. The Maroons will be handicapped by the ineligibility of Babe Alyes and the Illini are favored to win.

New Athletic Head.

OTTAWA—A. J. Stackstader, Dayton, will succeed H. L. Dowler who has resigned after serving since the opening of school last fall as director of athletics in Leipsic high school. Dowler will manage a large dairy farm near Lemon City, Fla.

Six hundred former employes of a manufacturer at Edinburgh, Scotland, were among the mourners at his funeral.

OHIO SCHOOLS SEEK LEADER

Will Name Commissioner for Association Members.

Within a few days the board of control of the Ohio High School Athletic association will probably make public the name of the new high commissioner of scholastic athletics in Ohio.

At least half a dozen men, prominetly identified with athletics in this state, are being considered for that position. The appointment was to have been made several days ago, but the man wanted declined.

Ohio will take the lead in high school athletic control with the naming of the commissioner. He will be the supreme judge of high school athletics in Ohio.

Will Settle Disputes.

This will mean a great deal to this state. Most schools in the state today are members of the O. S. H. S. A. A. The commissioner will have control over all the members of this association. There are a few on the black list just now, and some schools not in the association, and these schools will not be recognized by the association.

The association has always stood for high standards, clean athletics, and uniform contracts. It has a long set of rules governing the eligibility of participants in inter-school contests.

The commission, it is planned, will conduct the association for the betterment of high school athletics, and will act as final judge in any big disputes.

Many college associations have followed the lead of the Big Ten in naming commissioners. The Ohio high schools are following this lead. They are on the right track. Rules will be better understood, any professionalism in the bigger schools wil lbe cleaned out if it exists, and in general the situation will be made better.

Many a promising young career has been ruined by damage that might easily have been repaired, and I feel that in doing the work for the lads I may be helping them to better themselves in the world."

Dr. Fralick now produced a big bundle of X-ray photographs of hands he has mended, hands belonging to some of the most noted fighters of the day.

These photos, ghostly, shadowy, showed the nature of the different injuries. The human hand is a fragile, intricate structure. A watchmaker, probing the works of the most delicate timepiece probably has an easy task compared to that of a doctor mending an injured hand.

Here was an x-Ray photo of the hands of Harry Wills, "The Brown Panther of New Orelans." Wills' hands were for years notoriosly "bad" They had grown brittle in his long service in the ring. Some months ago he sustained a broken bone in one hand while working in the gymnasium.

Dr Fralick operated on the hand and Wills has since fought Bartley Madden and Luis Angel Firpo, using the mended hand in both fights as effectively as if it had never been injured.

Tony Vaccarelli, sparring partner of Johnny Dundee, the resigned featherweight champion, and for a time accounted one of the most promising featherweights in the game, came in while Dr. Fralick was explaining the Wills X-ray.

"Here's a young fellow who has made poor showing in his last couple of fights," said Dr. Fralick, turning to Vaccarelli. "They say he is going back, that he is about through. That's nonsense. He hasn't even started. Let me show you Tony's trouble."

The young boxer bared his left arm, disclosing an angry looking sore on the elbow. The doctor picked up another X-ray print and held it to the light.

"There!" he said, "That's Tony's elbow."

He indicated some shadowy tracings.

"That's loose bone," he said. "How could you expect a boy to box with his arm in this condition. He shouldn't have been permitted in the ring. Whenever he tries to punch with that arm he is bound to feel a sharp pain, and involuntarily he drops his arm."

Yes, sir, that's right," averred Tony "That's just the way I do."

An X-ray of Jack Delaney's hand was next.

Delaney for a long time was practically out of the game. His right hand was "gone," and that was his best punching hand.

Dr.Fralick performed a most intricate operation on the hand, building up a new knuckle, and on his first appearance after the operation Delaney astounded the boxing world by knocking out the great Paul Berlenbach.

Berlenbach has been one of Dr. Fralick's patients. The famous puncher broke his right hand some time ago, and Dr. Fralick mended it, and sent him back to the ring, his punch unimpaired.

Dr. Fralick performed a remarkable operation on Jack Zivic, the Pittsburgh welterweight, until recently a contender for the lightweight title.

This was early in Zivic's pugilistic career, after he had shown great promise in the amateurs and in his first professional battles. His right arm would become unjointed at the shoulder in a peculiar manner, and there seemed little chance that it could be permanently adjusted.

Zivic was about to abandon the ring when Dr. Fralick got hold of him. After the operation Zivic not only went back to fighting, but showed better form than ever. He has not since had any trouble with the shoulder.

Some of the fighters whose hands have been repaired by Dr. Fralick are:

Louis Kaplan, featherweight, from Meriden, Conn.

Lee Anderson, colored light heavyweight.

Jess Smithh, Bayonne middleweight.

Jamaica Kid, colored heavyweight.

Bob Martin, former heavyweight champion of the A. E. F.

High School Passers Lose Two Contests At Warren

Girls Come Out on Short End of 30-25 Score in Fast Engagement; Field Goal by Lanky Warren Center Ends Rough and Tumble Battle.

East Liverpool high school basketeers will face the strong Bethany college Freshman five tonight on the local floor in a condition that is slightly the worse for wear as a result of their rough and tumble contest last night on the Warren floor which they lost, 39 to 38, in a clash that required two extra five-minute periods. The local girls also were defeated, 30 to 25.

The diminutive Tom Pusey, forward, is suffering from a wrenched knee, Forward McKeever has a bruised eye, and Guard Dale Liebschner is in a similar condition.

Pusey was thrown, accidentally, into the wall under his basket as he was cutting for a shot. However, he as well as the others, will be on deck for the contest tonight which will be preceded by a prelim between the high school reserves and the Newell high school squad, at 7 o'clock.

Coach O. V. Boone is not just sure yet how the squad lost, unless, he opines, they were talked out of it when he wasn't looking.

After a hectic battle that gave Warren fans one of the greatest floor exhibitions they have seen for a long time, the regulation period of play ended with the score standing 32-32.

The extra period got under way. English caged the ball for a field goal. The Warren squad tallied two points and then English slipped in another. He was fouled on the throw, but the toss went through the hoop. The period ended and the locals were leaving the floor, believing the game was over. They were called back and notified an extra period had been called and that the score was 34 to 34. They were informed that English's last field goal did not count. The reason has not yet been learned.

Anyway, the Blue and White resumed hostilities with everything they had in three more minutes had piled up four more points.

Warren passers cut loose at this stage with a foul, added a field goal and another for a one-point victory. The final field goal was made from a toss-up near the basket between little Tom Pusey, who at this particular instance, didn't have the remotest chance of touching the ball, and the lanky Warren center, Myers.

The lineup:

E. L. Girls—25		Warren Girls—30
Cooper	F	Gregg
McElravy	F	Hoehn
Campbell	C	Sprague
D. Cooper	C	Minnelley
Waggle	G	Jacobs

Substitutions: Wilson for Waggle, Cooper for Hoehn, Summerville for Grigsby.

Field Goals: R. Cooper 4, McElravy 3, Campbell 4, Greig7, Sprague 4 and 6 one-point.

E. L. Boys		Warren Boys
E. L. Boys—38		Warren Boys—39
English	F	Dyer
McKeever	F	Berkowitz
McGraw	C	Myers
Liebschner	G	Polena
McConville	G	Horner

Substitutions: Pusey for McKeever, McKeever for Pusey, Pusey for English English for McGraw, Kempe for Myers, Baker for Berkowitz.

Field Goals: English 8, McKeever, Liebschner 5, Pusey, Dyer 2, Berkowitz 3, Myers 3, Polena 3, Horner 2, Horner, Kempe 2, Baker 2.

Fouls: E. L. 8 out of 13; Warren 7 out of 13.

Nebraskan Claiming Pacific Coast Title

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 10—Ace Hudkins, hard-hitting lightweight of Nebraska, today claimed the Pacific Coast lightweight title as a result of his ten-round bout in Hollywood last night in which the Nebraskan gave Tommy Carter, of Los Angeles, so-called Pacific Coast champion, a pretty pasting.

Carter was all but knocked out in the sixth round and Hudkins took all of the remaining rounds.

Last Night's Fights

AT NEW YORK—Jack Bernstein, Yonkers, junior lightweight, won a decision from Tommy O'Brien, Milwaukee, in ten rounds; Busky Graham, Utca, knocked out Nat Pincus, of Brooklyn in the eighth round; Harold Smith, Chicago, won a decision from Jackie Snyder, Brooklyn, ten rounds; Johnny Bresline, New York, defeated Johnny Green, New York, six rounds.

At Minneapolis — Pete Sarmiento, Manila, outpointed Eddie Anderson, Chicago, ten rounds; Roscoe Hall, Des Moines, shaded Sammy Leonard, Minneapolis, eight rounds; Nick Olivia, Albert Lea, Minnesota, and Mickey Cone, St. Paul, draw, six rounds.

W. V. U. TACKLES VETERAN QUINT FROM ALLEGHENY

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Jan. 10—A court battle of no little importance will be fought here tonight when the West Virginia University and Allegheny College fives clash on the "Ark" floor. Considerable interest is also being shown in the preliminary game between the Potomac State School and West Virginia freshman quints. The first event of the evening's program will start at 7:00 p. m.

After watching the Mountaineers win from Salem College by only a six-point margin and down Waynesburg College with but eight points to spare West Virginia fans are convinced that nothing except a general improvement will enable Captain Hawley and his cohorts to win from the veteran quint from Meadville, Pa.

Last night, the Allegheny team met the University of Pittsburgh at Pittsburgh. Games with Pitt and West Virginia on successive nights would be a hardship on a younger team but the Allegheny five is composed of experienced players and Coach C. D. Baker will have his team at the top of its form for tomorrow's battle. Captain Judd, center; Ross and McClurg, forwards; and Wolfe, guard, all veterans, will make a determined fight in order to wipe out the two defeats sustained in tilts with the Mountaineers last winter. The fifth member of the invading outfit, Rhodes, a guard, is also a holdover from the 1924 squad.

"Wonder" High School Team Wins 150 Games

PASSAIC, N. J., Jan. 10. — The Passaic high school basketball team won its 150th consecutive game here by defeating the Arlington (Mass.) high school team, 73 to 33.

Two thousand persons saw the "wonder team" stretch its string of consecutive victories to the century and a half mark. Rohrback, lanky center of the Passaic team, was the individual star of the game, scoring 24 of his team's points, 20 of them from the field. Adams followed him closely for individual honors with 22 points, scoring 11 field goals. The entire second team was used by the Passaic coach in the second half. Marsters and J. Lane, of the Arlington team, counted for 28 of their team's 33 total.

Yanks Trade Mamaux To Minneapolis Club

NEW YORK, Jan. 10—Al. Mamaux, of the Yankees, has been released to Minneapolis of the American Asoociation.

Mamaux flashed brilliantly with Pittsburgh, for a few seasons, particularly in 1915 when he won 21 and lost 8 games, aollowing a little more than 2 earned runs per 9 innings. He slipped in 1917 and was traded to Brooklyn, but proved disappointing there. The Yankees secured his service from Reading in the International league in 1924.

Ordinance is Sold.

NEW YORK, Jan. 10—Ordinance, $150,000 colt owned by the estate of the late Major August Belmont, late chairman of the jockey club, has been sold to Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney and will be retired to the stud, it was learned today. The price was not disclosed.

NURMI TAKES ON BIG TASK

Series of Hard Races Scheduled for Finn.

By Davis J. Walsh.

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—While the general excitement is at its height and the question of the hour is whether the gentleman in question eats fish for breakfast and keeps that school girl complexion with Shinola, it might be mentioned that Paavo Nurmi may be riging for a fall. He has allowed himself to be inveiglied into accepting invitations by the carload lots and somewhere along the general right of way, it is possible that an American crowd will watch him run second, behind some worthy young man, present identity unknown.

This stunning event may happen no later than a week or ten days from this moment. On Thursday night next, he will go to the post at Madison Square Garden against a plausible field in a 3,000-metre run. The distance has been shortened from two miles at Nurmi's request, although it is fact, not fancy, that he can run any distance from a quarter of a mile to ten, faster than any man the world has known. It might appear from this that Nurmi sees something coming.

Two days later he is to step out in a special mile-and-a-quarter race at the Illinois A. C. games, Chicago. The distance was increased the extra two furlongs, also at Nurmi's request. He evidently has no intention of trying to repeat his Olympic program, in which he ran and won races at 1,500, 3,000, 5,000 and 10,000 meters with heats, in the space of one week. The distances he will run at the two meets are not markedly dissimilar.

The reason is not far to seek. Nurmi has realized within the last 48 hours that he has bitten off a lumberjack's mouthful in agreeing to run a hard race here on Thursday night, climb aboard an outgoing train and compete again in Chicago within 48 hours. In the latter race he must step out against Joie Ray, among others, and that young man is likely to be several strides faster than he was on the occasion of Nurmi's American debut on Tuesday night last. Ray frankly admitted he was about a week away from top form before this race, yet he ran 414, his fastest mile. Joie will be waiting for Paavo.

This effusion, however, must not be confused with a clarion call for volunteer pallbearers. If Nurmi were to run in his native element of the outdoor cinder path, the writer would back him to win against the field every time out, but the Finn will find conditions varying with every race he runs indoors.

ELECTRIC SCORE BOARD PROPOSED FOR HIGH "GYM"

The proposed erection of an electrically operated scoreboard, together with the installation of an improved lighting system will make the local high school gymnasium one of the most advanced courts of its kind in the state, if the planned improvements are successfully negotiated.

Coach O. V. Boone is now communicating with scoreboard supply firms. If such a contrivance can be placed in operation at a reasonable cost, it will be done.

A scoreboard such as Boone has in mind, is operated by the head timer and scorer. It is designed to show at any stage of the game how much time, has been played and how much more remains, the name of the players and substitutions, the running score, and in fact, all the important things there are to know. Such a device would be given a hearty welcome by fans.

It would be erected on the east wall of the gymnasium. However, it is not at all certain yet.

BILL WATKINS TO WORK OPENER FOR BUFFALOES

Bill Watkins, East Liverpool's cage expert, will referee the Bethany-Waynesburg tilt tonight at Irvin gym, Bethany. The game will be the first regular engagement of the season for the Bisons, and the second for Waynesburg.

The past record of the two squads gives Bethany eight victories and Waynesburg two.

The probable lineup:

Waynesburg.		Bethany.
Minor	F.	Ryan
Olmstead	F.	Herman
Willis	C.	Carey
Welch	G.	Shoemake
Irvin	G.	Hanna

GREB IS VICTOR OVER BOB SAGE IN TEN ROUNDS

DETROIT, Jan. 10.—Harry Greb, middleweight champion of the world, was awarded the decision over Bob Sage; Detroit, at the end of their 10-round bout last night. Saga took the first two rounds by boring in, but Greb held the edge from the third round on. Greb was aided in a weight advantage of approximately ten pounds and was permitted to hit and hold at the same time by Referee Al. Foss, of Pittsburgh. Billy Petersen, Detroit middleweight, knocked out Frankie Brennan in the Fifth round. Joe McKean easily defeated Bobby Swarts.

Bernstein Conquers O'Brien in New York

NEW YORK, Jan. 10—Jack Bernstein of Yonkers, formerly junior lightweight champion, swarmed all over Tommy O'Brien of Milwaukee in a ten round bout at Madison Square Garden last night and won the referee's decision. Not once did he allow O'Brien, a dangerous hitter, to set himself for a "haymaker."

Busky Graham, Utica's contender for bantamweight honors, knocked out Nat Pincus of Brooklyn in the eighth round of a sensational fight featured by Pincus' gameness.

Harold Smith of Chicago, who is making a bid for the bantamweight Jackie Snyder of Brooklyn in ten rounds.

BIG TEN FLOOR HOSTILITIES TO START TONIGHT

CHICAGO, Jan. 10—The big ten race for basketball championship will get under way tonight with eight contenders for the title in the race. Michigan, Minnesota and Ohio State rule favorites in tonight's games, having done as well in their pre-season showings as any of the Western conference teams. The Buckeyes meet Indiana at Columbus, Minnesota battles Wisconsin at Minneapolis and Michigan takes on the battered Purdue five at Ann Arbor.

The fourth game is between Chicago and Illinois on the Maroons' floor. The Maroons will be handicapped by the ineligibility of Babe Alyes and the Illini are favored to win.

New Athletic Head.

OTTAWA—A. J. Stackstader, Dayton, will succeed H. L. Dowler who has resigned after serving since the opening of school last fall as director of athletics in Leipsic high school. Dowler will manage a large dairy farm near Lemon City, Fla.

Six hundred former employes of a manufacturer at Edinburgh, Scotland, were among the mourners at his funeral.

OHIO SCHOOLS SEEK LEADER

Will Name Commissioner for Association Members.

Within a few days the board of control of the Ohio High School Athletic association will probably make public the name of the new high commissioner of scholastic athletics in Ohio.

At least half a dozen men, prominetly identified with athletics in this state, are being considered for that position. The appointment was to have been made several days ago, but the man wanted declined.

Ohio will take the lead in high school athletic control with the naming of the commissioner. He will be the supreme judge of high school athletics in Ohio.

Will Settle Disputes.

This will mean a great deal to this state. Most schools in the state today are members of the O. S. H. S. A. A. The commissioner will have control over all the members of this association. There are a few on the black list just now, and some schools not in the association, and these schools will not be recognized by the association.

The association has always stood for high standards, clean athletics, and uniform contracts. It has a long set of rules governing the eligibility of participants in inter-school contests.

The commission, it is planned, will conduct the association for the betterment of high school athletics, and will act as final judge in any big disputes.

Many college associations have followed the lead of the Big Ten in naming commissioners. The Ohio high schools are following this lead. They are on the right track. Rules will be better understood, any professionalism in the bigger schools wil lbe cleaned out if it exists, and in general the situation will be made better.

Gene Tunney, American light-heavyweight champion.

Ed Keeley, Bridgeport heavy.

Phil Krug, Newark middleweight.

Dave Rosenberg, Brooklyn welterweight.

Jack Perry, Pittsburgh, welterweight.

Paul Doyle, Boston welterweight.

Mike McTigue, world's light heavyweight champion.

Also in the list are Vic Borg, Frankie Conifrey, Johnny Green, all of more or less note. He has recently taken charge of Jack Dorval, "The Fisherman," a heavyweight whose promising career has been halted by a broken hand.

The list is given in detail to show the reader to what extent "bad hands" prevail among the professional boxers.

You will observe that in the list are men accounted great boxers, fast, scientific, notably Jeff Smith, Gene Tunney, Mike McTigue and Phil Krug.

Yet "bad hands," as Dr. Fralick told the writer, are commonly due to improper hitting. The boxer gets his hands broken up because he does not first learn how to punch. Perhaps the clever men weakened the structure of their hands before they learned their business.

Another cause, one that could be more easily remedies than the first, is poor bandaging by the second before the boxer goes into the ring.

"The method of bandaging a boxer's hands is almost barbaric," said Dr. Fralick. They haven't changed this method since the earliest days of the glove game, and probably two-thirds of the injured hands can be traced to faulty bandages.

"The boxing authorities have some rather foolish restrictions on bandages. They might well change this rule and permit more scientific bandaging, then we wouldn't have so many injured hands. If a young fellow learns how to strike his blows properly, and has his hands intelligently bandaged, there isn't one chance in a thousand that his hands will be injured.

"But until the youngsters are better schooled, and the bandages properly applied I suppose I'll be adding to this collection of pictures here."

Edinburgh, Scotland, is trying to relieve its traffic congestion.

Gene Tunney, American light-heavyweight champion.
Ed Keeley, Bridgeport heavy.
Phil Krug, Newark middleweight.
Dave Rosenberg, Brooklyn welterweight.
Jack Perry, Pittsburgh, welterweight.
Paul Doyle, Boston welterweight.
Mike McTigue, world's light heavyweight champion.

Also in the list are Vic Borg, Frankie Conifrey, Johnny Green, all of more or less note. He has recently taken charge of Jack Dorval, "The Fisherman," a heavyweight whose promising career has been halted by a broken hand.

The list is given in detail to show the reader to what extent "bad hands" prevail among the professional boxers.

You will observe that in the list are men accounted great boxers, fast, scientific, notably Jeff Smith, Gene Tunney, Mike McTigue and Phil Krug.

Yet "bad hands," as Dr. Fralick told the writer, are commonly due to improper hitting. The boxer gets his hands broken up because he does not first learn how to punch. Perhaps the clever men weakened the structure of their hands before they learned their business.

Another cause, one that could be more easily remedies than the first, is poor bandaging by the second before the boxer goes into the ring.

"The method of bandaging a boxer's hands is almost barbaric," said Dr. Fralick. They haven't changed this method since the earliest days of the glove game, and probably two-thirds of the injured hands can be traced to faulty bandages.

"The boxing authorities have some rather foolish restrictions on bandages. They might well change this rule and permit more scientific bandaging, then we wouldn't have so many injured hands. If a young fellow learns how to strike his blows properly, and has his hands intelligently bandaged, there isn't one chance in a thousand that his hands will be injured.

"But until the youngsters are better schooled, and the bandages properly applied I suppose I'll be adding to this collection of pictures here."

This mine is conected with many other old mining operations and is burning fiercely, oil-bearing shale above the coal having ignited. It is feared the fire may last for years. Seemingly, it cannot be smothered.
